Impressions of a Trip To The Old Country

Mr. Donald McKay, M.A., Principal of the Alexandria High School, who, with Mrs. McKay, recently returned from the Old Country, has favored us with a very interesting and valuable narrative of their experiences and reminiscences of the tour. Mr. and Mrs. McKay accompanied the party of Canadian teachers organized by Mr. Ney, and we feel sure our readers will appreciate the following diverting and interesting narrative with as much pleasure as the News has in publishing it:

"The Glengarry News has done us the honor of requesting us to give a brief outline of the recent itinerary through Scotland, England and the Channel Islands. We have made up our mind to comply with the request, but we hasten at the outset to promise that we will avoid prolixity as much as possible, and pause only at very long intervals in our journey.

We shall not ask you to sail down the St. Lawrence with us, or accompany us across the Atlantic; but please stand on deck with us and gaze at the view which meets our eyes after we have been some ten days upon the water. We are approaching the estuary of the Clyde and Scotland's coast is unfolding itself to us in the rays of a bright warm July morning. Exclamations of wonder and delight break from the lips of those about us as their eyes rest upon now a gracefully curving bend, now a country manor peering over its sloft from its screen of stately trees, and now a stretch of trim farmland with here and there a cosy home to give a human touch to the scene! And those dear old hills of bonny Scotland looking quietly down upon it all, with the purple haze about them, and upon their uplands the purple bell-heather and that rich variety of marvellous green the like of which we had never seen before! Scotland may wear a stern and forbidding look for those who are hostile to her, but she always puts on the sunshine of smiles for her kinsmen beyond the seas.

The whole scene breathed calmness and repose, and there was a quiet sincerity about all which was a fitting symbol of Scotch character and a favorable omen of the reception we were to meet in this land of the hill and the glen. And how Scotland's sons and daughters did set about making us feel right at home! The fog had delayed us more than ten days, and consequently we had at our disposal in Glasgow only the evening of the day we landed, but that evening will live in the minds of all of us as one of the very brightest of our memories. Glasgow's magnificent City Chambers were ablaze with splendor, and Glasgow's representative citizens were there in generous numbers, bidding us welcome, with their rich and decent, in that fine genial homelike way of theirs.

Next morning, when we reached Edinburgh, the members of the Victoria League were right on the spot ready to greet us, and, after giving us a short breathing space in our lodging houses, conveyed us to various points of interest in their beautiful city, even procuring us admission to Holyrood Palace, from which the public is excluded owing to the militant suffragettes.

This venerable building made a deep impression on all of us, particularly on the two Alexandrians. Thrilling indeed it was to stand on the picture gallery, where Bonnie Prince Charlie held his audiences; to see the bed where Darnley slept, with its coverlets and canopy just as they were in his lifetime; to proceed to the audience chambers occupied once by Charles I and by Prince Charlie; to linger in Queen Mary's bedroom, where are her work-box, her polished flint mirror, and other interesting relics; and finally to pause in the supper room where Rizzio was murdered.

We are tempted to dwell upon the visit to Edinburgh Castle (with its Crown Room, containing the Scottish Regalia; its Queen Mary's room, where James I of England was born; and its St. Margaret's Chapel, dating back to the year 1100), upon the lectures in Edinburgh University, presided over by Sir William Turner; upon the delightful drive to Dreichorn, where we were entertained in the most charming manner by Miss Clark; upon our trip to Stirling, and then to Dunfermline, where we visited the Abbey Church and stood on the spot where Robert the Bruce was buried; upon the visit, subsequently to Melrose Abbey with its famous Oriel Window described by Sir Walter Scott, beneath which is buried the heart of Robert the Bruce; upon the hurried trip some half dozen of us made to Abbotford, where we saw Sir Walter Scott's thousand and one relics and his magnificent library. But we feel you are already getting bored, and nothing will tempt you to travel with us to Carlisle and afterwards to Windermere, where we enjoyed the delightful ride through the Wordsworth Country from Ambleside to Keswick. We do not think it safe either, to attempt to persuade you to stay, even for a few moments, at Oxford, or Warwick Castle, or Stratford-on-Avon or Bath.

The next stopping place, then, must be London, where we spent about two weeks, but where, we shall ask you to remain only a very short time indeed, in spite of its vast size and innumerable points of interest.

The Alexandrians here broke off from the rest of the party and followed the bent of their own inclinations during a portion of the time, though they of course joined the other members in visiting such places as the Zoological Gardens, Windsor, Eton (where we were entertained to tea by the headmaster, the Rev. the Hon. E. Lytton), the Tower of London, the Military Camp at Aldershot (where the kindness and courtesy of the officers could not be excelled), and other points of interest in and about London. We gave more attention than our fellow-members to such places as the National Gallery and British Museum, the Dome Gallery and to the Victoria and Albert Museum.

On entering the British Museum, we proceeded almost immediately to the Elgin Room, and there, as we gazed for over two hours at the marbled masterpieces of Phidias and his pupils (which were executed over four hundred years before Christ), we reconstructed in imagination the wonderful Parthenon and lived over again a portion of the busy life of Artistic Athens. We should have loved to linger much longer over the scene, but there were many other rooms demanding our attention the countless treasures in which, in the form of statuary, mosaics, ceramics, gems, tablets, manuscripts, etc., it would take not days or weeks, but months, or, even years, to observe with accuracy.

Of the hundreds of pictures in the National Gallery we endeavored to select a few of those especially commended by Mr. Lucas in his Wanderer in London. In almost every instance, we thoroughly agreed with that artist in his preference, and Michael Angelo's tombstone of our Lord, Francesco's Nativity, Portrait of a young Sculptor (presumably by Andrew del Sarto), Peter de Hooch's Interior of a Dutch Home, Old Cromie's Household Heath, and other masterpieces well repaid the time we spent upon them.

But we must now take a reluctant farewell of the Empire's great Metropolis (we see you are getting impatient) though not without telling you first that toward the close of our sojourn there we were entertained one evening in the most generous manner by an ex-Alexandrian, Mr. Archie McGillivray. There is something peculiarly pleasant, when one is thus abroad, especially in the heart of a great city, to fraternize thus with a fellow-ownman.

If you will bear with us just a little longer, we will scarcely do more than merely mention the other places along our route. There is Portsmouth, where we visited Lord Nelson's flagship, the Victory, and saw the spot where he fell and the bed where his day dying when Trafalgar was fought. Here is Guernsey in the Channel Islands, where, at a conversation the two Alexandrians fell into an interesting conversation with a great grand-niece of Sir Isaac Brook, who showed them some interesting relics of the great general. Now we are at Jersey, where we were entertained one afternoon to the gorgeous "Battle of the Flowers," and in the evening of the same day, to an artistic representation of various national dances. Once more we are in England, as if we cannot bring ourselves to part with that charming land. This time we travel up northward through the western parts, and all along the route our journey is like a triumphal procession.

Weymouth has a welcome for us the moment we land; Taunton's Mayor and citizens are the most genial of hosts, take us on a most delightful trip to Glastonbury Abbey Church, and to the Cathedral church at Wells, and entertain us to an evening function in the most charming manner. Gloucester, too, has a most cordial reception for us, and her glorious Cathedral Church, with its marvellous east window of the Lady Chapel, the pleasant trip by boat to Dearhurst and to Tewkesbury, which her citizens gave us, will always be gratefully remembered. Nor is Chester to be eclipsed by those who had preceded her. With a short break at a time we have at our disposal she extends to us an official welcome, entertains us with her marvellous display of charters, her old city walls, and her quaint rows and old-fashioned houses, and extends to us a "bon voyage" in the heartiest manner, as we leave the station for Liverpool.

Here we take ship once more, and, after an eight day's sail, reached Montreal about noon, delighted with our visit to the Old Land, but glad to be home again, and more in love than ever with "This Dominion of ours."

If, fellow-citizens, you have sufficient patience left to bear with us a little longer, there are one or two features about our trip, to which we should like to invite your attention, apart from the official functions, which were all marked by great cordiality, and brought us into touch with representative citizens, many of us were entertained in the homes of cultured and distinguished people. The Alexandrians were among the number thus favored, and not a few of the pleasant reminiscences they have carried away with them are associated with the pleasant hours they passed in the homes of Lord and Lady Bradshaw at Oxford, Mr. and Mrs. Pittman at Bath, and Mr. and Mrs. Grimes at Gloucester.

Another feature that commended itself to us, was the fact that when we

King George Wel- comes Canadians

London, Sept. 27.—The Canadian officers returning to London from the army manoeuvres keenly appreciate the gracious attention of the King who made the following special reference to them in his closing speech at Weedon Barracks:

"I am delighted to welcome officers of the forces of my overseas Dominion whom I trust have derived both pleasure and profit from association with the troops of the Mother Country.

"The demands of modern war are such that the necessary degree of efficiency can only be attained by constant study on the part of officers and strenuous service and loyalty to each other and devotion to duty on the part of all.

"I feel satisfied this will be forthcoming and confident that under the able guidance of the Chief of the Imperial Staff you will take to heart the lessons you have learned during the past few days, and continue to make that constant progress to which each succeeding year bears witness."

London, September 29.—Most of the Canadian military officers who have been in attendance at the British army manoeuvres will return home by the end of this week. The party goes to Woodwich to-morrow to inspect the Hythe School of Musketry, and on Wednesday will be the guests of the Admiralty at Portsmouth. Col. Sam Hughes has not yet decided upon the date of his return to Canada, being busy with the war office conferences.

Several notable British officers have asked the Canadian minister invite Prince Alexander of Teck to command the Canadian camp at an early date. Prince Alexander was in close touch with the Canadian visitors during the manoeuvres here, and his charm of manner greatly impressed them.

A high compliment was extended to the Dominion services at the army council dinner to the foreign attaches and overseas services.

Sir John French requested Colonel Hughes to welcome the foreign representatives on behalf of the British Government. This is the first time such a duty has been entrusted to a Dominion representative.

London, September 30.—Colonels Crushank and Leckie, Vancouver; Jameson, Edmonton; MacDonell, Winnipeg, with other Canadian officers are spending to-day at Woolwich inspecting the famous arsenal and system of training artillery engineers.

Col. Clark, Brandon, had to be left in the country after manoeuvres suffering from congestion of the lungs.

The officers' opinions are well summarized by Col. McLeod, who says: "Most of us are expecting evidence that the British Army compared unfavorably with the continental forces. The South Africa war left that painful impression in Canada, but nothing could be less true. Nowhere in Europe have we seen finer soldiers than those who manoeuvred last week in the presence of the King and Queen, while all the other Canadian officers were welcomed spectators."

KING PLEASED WITH PRESENCE OF CANADIANS.

"Col. Hughes and myself, being official guests of the War Office, were presented to the King at Althorpe Park. His Majesty expressed deep pleasure at the presence of the Canadian party and was keen to learn our impressions. The Queen was all graciousness and charm. Both the King and Queen recalled pleasant memories of their Canadian visits.

"Nothing could exceed the excellence of the War Office arrangements to enable us to see whatever we wanted."

COL. SAM HUGHES DINED.

Quebec, October 1.—The following despatch was received this afternoon from London—"Hon. Sam. Hughes minister of militia, was tendered a complimentary dinner by the officers on Monday. Among the guests were Lord Brooke, Sir Frederick William Taylor, Mr. Norton Griffiths, and Mr. Dickens, of Cammell and Laird. Col. Hughes was thanked by all for the excellent and elaborate arrangements made for the contingent.

"Part of the contingent is sailing on Saturday. The Minister, Colonel Biggar, and other officers, later."

made a town the starting point for short excursions to places in the vicinity, representative citizens invariably accompanied us, dispersed themselves judiciously amongst us, and pointed out the various spots of interest along the way.

All this led to social intercourse and made us feel all the more vividly that we were fellow-citizens of a great empire.

One might go on dwelling upon other features of our tour so well organized by Mr. Ney (whose object, by the way, was not commercial or financial, but of an imperial nature), but we have already trespassed too much upon the patience of our readers (if there are any of them still), whom we wish to thank for their kind attention and whose pardon, for afflicting them so much, we humbly crave."

Official Visit To Canada

Mr. H. A. Conroy, inspector of Indian Agencies, returned to Ottawa last week from his visit of inspection to a place known as Treaty Eight, 800 miles north of Edmonton. In this district there are 8,000 treaty Indians and 3,500 non-treaty Indians. Mr. Conroy visits the 18 agencies in this district once each year and distributes about $35,000 in money and several thousands of dollars worth of provisions, ammunition, fishing nets, etc.

Mr. Conroy left Edmonton in May and proceeded to Fort McMurray, thence to Fort Chippewyan, to Fort Smith and then took a jump of 1,400 miles to Fort MacPherson. He then proceeded to Fort Simpson.

Mr. Conroy told of wheat, oats, rye and barley grown by the government agent, Mr. Card, 800 miles north of Edmonton. Wheat was taken to Edmonton from there and graded as number one hard. The oats were also good and Mr. Conroy took a sample bag away with him. The rye and barley were also good. Good gardening has also been done about Fort Simpson and Fort Wrigley, where there are Hudson Bay posts and Roman Catholic Missions. The best gardens seen by Mr. Conroy were at Fort Good Hope, within the Arctic circle. "In the upper Mackenzie valley there is a country as large as Manitoba and every bit of it is fit for settlement," he declared.

"Tuberculosis is the most prevalent disease," he stated, "but successful efforts are being made to combat it. The Indians are all right as long as they live in tepees, but when they take up their residence in huts, the squalid conditions are inevitably to tuberculosis affections. If one of an Indian's children died, he would board up the windows, move and sell the hut. The route of death and desertion would follow."

Mr. Conroy set about to better the conditions. He induced them to leave the huts, burn them down and gave them each a clean, commodious tent. Many Indians, however, were stubborn and stuck to the huts. Mr. Conroy spoke to one Indian, through an interpreter, but he refused to move. The same night lightning hit the shack and burned it down. The Indian accepted the tent but declared that Mr. Conroy took advantage of him by enlisting the thunder God to help him. — The Free Press.

A Few Facts About Canada's New Morning Daily

Now that October 8th, the date of the first issue of the "Montreal Daily Mail" is so near, people are looking for information about the new Morning Daily to be launched under the name of "Montreal Daily Mail."

The new paper is capitalized $500,000, all the shareholders being Montrealers. Its organization is entirely independent of political parties or "established interests" so that it can consistently carry out its announced policy of serving the public first and only. It will deal with political issues and political leaders strictly on their merits.

Preparations for bringing out the "Montreal Daily Mail" have been remarkable in their thoroughness. Its publishers aim to start out with a finished newspaper — to begin at a point which other leading dailies have attained only after years of growth.

With this view, the mechanical equipment provided for getting out the paper is one of the most complete and up-to-date in the Dominion, and a staff has been organized of men of the highest standing in the newspaper profession.

A feature that will appeal to subscribers is that, although a morning paper, the "Montreal Daily Mail" will be sold at regular evening paper prices — a copy, 25c. a year, or 25c. a month. The publishers are making a feature of the one month trial subscription, feeling sure that this will prove all that is needed to secure regular subscribers.

Draft New Rules For Lake Navigation

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, is planning to make the Great Lakes uniform with the American rules, and a new draft of regulations have been drawn up which will be sent to all navigation companies and other interests for suggestions and criticisms.

At present there is considerable difference between the Canadian and American rules for navigation, which has resulted in considerable confusion and on occasions in accidents.

Most of the changes are in regard to the placing and carrying of lights. Canal boats when in tow in vessels on the Great Lakes are required to display lights. Steam vessels must carry lights which are visible at a distance of two miles. There are new regulations in regard to lights on rafts and open boats.

There is a drastic new rule proposed

To Disinfect Soil- ed Bank Notes

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—The Finance Department, under the direction of Hon. W. T. White, is making an interesting test of a new method for the sterilization of bank notes. The new Bank Act provides that the Treasury Board may make regulations providing for the disinfection and sterilization by the several banks of bank notes and Dominion notes which have come into the banks possession before a re-issue of such notes to the public. After the close of the session the Minister of Finance, with a view to ascertaining whether bacteria likely to injuriously affect the public health were to be found on the notes, instructed the officers of the laboratory of the Department of Agriculture to make an examination of notes chosen at random from numbers which had been returned by one of the banks as being unfit for further circulation.

BACTERIA ON THEM ALL.

The report from the laboratory has now been received. It reveals the fact that a large number of living and dead bacteria were present on each note. Detailed examinations were made to determine the presence or absence of tubercle bacilli, and while certain acid organisms indistinguishable microscopically from those of tuberculosis were found, it was impossible to produce lesions in susceptible animals. No organisms similar to those of diphtheria were found, nor was it possible to recover diphtheria-like organisms from the cultures. The presence of a fatty extract was demonstrated, and this material would enable the easy retention of any bacteria coming in contact with a note.

The finding of the laboratory is, in brief, that there is a possible danger of conveying infection by means of soiled bank notes, but that the degree of danger is an unknown quantity, and is lessened in proportion to the time elapsing between the inspection of the note and contact with a susceptible person.

NOTE STERILIZATION.

The question of note-sterilization was raised in the Banking and Commerce Committee by Dr. Steele, M.P., and it was suggested that each office of the banks should be equipped with a sterilizing oven, in which all bills received from the public should be subjected to heat sufficient to kill all bacteria. Experiments were made here as to the effect of such treatment upon bills. It was found that the great heat weakened the paper, dried the ink, changed the appearance of the bill and rendered it brittle, thus materially shortening its life.

The Department of Finance now proposes to make some experiments made with formaldehyde gas. This method has been adopted, apparently with success, in the United States. One of the leading banks in Boston informs the department that it has been advised by experts that the process kills all pathogenic germs and is a thorough disinfectant. The mode adopted is simple. A small receptacle containing the disinfectant, which is very powerful, is placed every day at the close of business, in the vault where the bills are kept. The Finance Department will subject soiled notes to this treatment and have the bills immediately turned over for examination to the bacteriological laboratory.

in regard to the use of searchlights. The rule is as follows:

"Any master or pilot of any steam vessel who shall flash or cause to be flashed the rays of the searchlight into the pilot house of a passing vessel shall be deemed guilty of misconduct, and shall be liable to have his certificate suspended or revoked."

New rules uniform with the American in regard to sounding bells and blowing foghorns are also drafted.

New rules in regard to sound vessels in sight of another are also proposed. An important portion of the proposed new rules are regulations for motor boats. Motor boats are divided into three classes, those less than 26 feet, those 26 to 40 feet, and those 40 to 65.

Motor boats of the first class must display a white light to show all around the horizon and a combined lantern in the forepart of the vessel and lower than the white light aft, showing green to starboard and red to port also fixed as to throw the light ahead to two points abaft the beam on their respective sides."

Similar rules, but more drastic, have been drafted for motor boats of a larger size.

GOVERNING BODY CHOSEN IN ULSTER

Prominent Men Breathing Defiance
But Government Hesitates to Make Martyr of Carson

A great chapter in the history of the Province of Ulster was written in Belfast last week, when more than five hundred delegates, representing the Protestants of the north of Ireland, created the machinery for a provisional Government to take over the government of Ulster in the event of the Home Rule Bill becoming law.

The members of the provisional government form an imposing list, in which figure many Ulster notabilities—The Duke of Abercorn, Lord Charles Beresford and Lords Annesley, Arran, Baner, Castlereagh, Clanwilliam, Clifton, Darnley, Derramore, Dumleath, Ernie, Farrham, Kilmory, Leitrim, Templetown, and Lord Claud Hamilton, also the Ulster Unionist M.P.s, and Sir Edward Carson, who will be "Premier."

The "new authority for taking over the administration of the province on the day when home rule comes into force, or before if necessary," appointed a Military Council, in addition to the Ulster Volunteers' Committee. Other committees include—Finance and Business, Law, Education, Customs and a Publication and Literary Committee.

It is said that $1,500,000 has been subscribed to a fund for supporting the dependent relatives of volunteers who may be killed or wounded in the fighting.

The Under-Secretary of the Board of Trade, J. M. Robertson, speaking at Newcastle said that Carson's Provisional Government was an economic blunder and a practical impossibility, which could be ended by the British Postoffice cutting it off from the rest of the world.

The Under-Secretary that Carson was not prosecuted for the reason that "the Government did not wish to make King Carson a Saint Carson."

In spite of all the warlike preparations in Ireland, there is in England not the slightest sign of excitement over the situation. It is reported however, that the prospects of a conference between members of the Liberal and Unionist parties on the Irish question have considerably improved.

Fourteen battalions of Ulster volunteers, comprising 11,000 men of the "No-home-rule army," marched through the streets of Belfast on Sunday with colors flying and bands playing, and received a rousing reception from the citizens of the northern Irish capital.

The Right Hon. Alexander Ure, Lord Advocate for Scotland, addressing his constituents on Saturday said that the proposed Provisional Government of Ulster would be treated by the banks in the same way they would treat a South American Republic, and it would collapse of its own weight in a few weeks.

TO DEEPEN 800 CANAL

Deep Waterway Projected From Atlantic to Head of Lakes

As a preliminary to the enlargement of the Canadian canal at Sault Ste. Marie to a depth of 81 feet, the Government is arranging for the expropriation of Whitefish Island and an additional strip of land along the south side of the present canal.

The actual work of enlarging the canal must wait until sanctioned by Parliament, but it is understood that a vote will be asked at the next session of Parliament for a preliminary survey and for the preparation of plans.

Labor Lawyer Jailed

Cyril Rubincowitz, lawyer for the striking miners at Nanaimo, was arrested in that town by special constables and lodged in jail charged with intimidating workmen. Rubincowitz had just arrived from Vancouver and was being piloted about to acquaint himself with conditions and his arrest aroused a storm of protest. After 24 hours detention he was admitted to bail. He claims that he had spoken to no one, striker or worker.

Britain Changes Naval Policy

The announcement by the British Admiralty that fleet comprising eight battleships, and nineteen cruisers will be sent to the Mediterranean early in November, coupled with the despatch of four large armored ships, which will have their base at Bermuda, indicates a radical change in the British naval policy, which, on account of friction with Germany, has kept practically all the fighting units within home waters for several years past.

Woman Heavy Sentenced

Mrs. McKenna, the woman who last June cashed a cheque at Chesterville after raising it from $10 to $1,000, was last week sentenced by Mr. Justice Britton to eighteen months in the penitentiary. She has been in Cornwall jail since her arrest.

Carnival of Murder

Two drug-crazed mulatto boys, brothers, began a reign of murder at Harrison, Miss., on Sunday that ended only after three white men, three negro men and a negro woman had been killed. Twenty persons were wounded and the two boys lynched.

Wesley Russell was sentenced by Judge Barrett at Walkerton to three years in Kingston Penitentiary for setting fire to the Hartley House stables.

The C.P.R. liner Mount Temple ran on the mud banks at Longueville, near Montreal in a fog last week and had to be lighted by her cargo.

Mr. Ewan B. Fraser, M.P.P., was nominated by Welland County Conservatives as their candidate in the next federal elections.

Writs for two federal bye-elections have been issued. In East Middlesex polling will take place on Oct. 21, and in Chateaugay on Oct. 1.

ASSASSINS FRUSTRATED

Syndicalists in Portugal Plotted an Era of Anarchy

A confession that they intended to assassinate the Portuguese Premier and institute a revolt was made Friday by five men who were arrested while placing bombs around the Premier's villa. The men are said to have been delegated by a Syndicalist group to explode the bombs in Dr. Alfonso Costa's garden. His attention was to be attracted in this way and they intended to shoot him down when he appeared at the window to find out what had happened.

Dr. Costa's death, they declared, was to be the signal for a revolt. Armed bands, they said, were ready to rush the prisons amid the confusion, and to liberate the prisoners.

ANOTHER BALKAN CRISIS

Turbulent Conditions Still Prevail,
More Fighting Likely

The Balkan crisis is becoming more acute. It has been aggravated by the apparent determination of the Young Turks' military party to profit by the dissensions among the former allies. Turkey is reported to have again called to the colors the Asia Minor conscripts, while an officer lately returned from Tripoli is said to be leading an uprising against Bulgaria in Thrace.

The efforts to subdue the rebellious Albanians are likely to prove a severe strain on the exhausted army and exchequer of Serbia. That country is said to be seizing points not included in the territory allotted to her.

In Athens many believe that Greece is on the verge of another war with Turkey.

EMPLOYERS FORM UNION

British Firms Take Step to Protect Themselves Against Strikes

The movement initiated some time ago in Great Britain with the object of forming a national union of the employers of the United Kingdom to cope with strikes has resulted in the establishment of the United Kingdom Employers' Defence Union, with guarantees of a fund of $250,000,000. Its objects are to "consolidate the resources of these employers of labor, to maintain their rights and their freedom to bargain individually with free workers, or collectively with trade unions."

The new organization will be registered as a trade union.

Big Vancouver Dock Scheme

Messrs. J. and G. White, eminent British harbor engineers, announce that they have secured a contract involving some $30,000,000 for a scheme of harbor extension in Vancouver, B.C. It is intended to provide twenty-five miles of dockage at Lulu Island and Sea Island, and many miles for industrial sites and railway terminals. A private company is behind the undertaking.

Redistribution Bill Possible

It is rumored that the Ontario Government contemplates bringing in a redistribution bill at its next session. On the basis of population several rural constituencies would have their representation reduced, while the cities would gain.

At meetings held last week at Brantford, Hamilton and Toronto, members of the Independent Order of Foresters protested strongly against the proposed increased insurance rates which bear heavily upon the older policy holders.

Ex-President Porfirio Diaz is said to be on his way to Mexico from Spain. Victor Hople, under sentence of death at Winnipeg for the murder of an infant, has been reprieved till Dec. 19.

LABOR MEN CONFER

Pass Anti-Militia Resolution But Not
Eager For Politics

As a result of a speech made by Will Thorne, the English Labor organizer before the Trades and Labor Congress at Montreal, the delegates to that body discussed the possibility of a full-fledged political campaign being run at the time of the next Dominion election to place in the Federal House a Labor party which would command the respect and attention of the other two parties in the House. The proposal to appoint a lobbyist in the Provincial parliaments however, was turned down because the power to take political action is already given by the constitution to the various Provincial Executives.

The use of militia in connection with strikes was vehemently denounced.

After condemning Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, for permitting contractors to hire carpenters on the Welland Canal at less than the fair wage scale, Congress decided to press the Dominion Government for the introduction of this scale on all its work.

TO SETTLE NAVY QUESTION

New Organization Proposed to Take it Out of Politics

The Canadian League which is fathered by Mr. Arthur Hawkes and Mr. John A. Cooper, both publishers of weekly journals, was launched at a meeting at Newmarket last week. The object of the organization, it was stated, is to create a sentiment throughout Canada for immediate settlement of the Naval Aid question aside from partisanship. Mr. Hawkes is frankly in favor of a Canadian navy. He is not opposed to an emergency contribution, but believes that the government should at once declare that its permanent policy is the building and manning of a navy by Canada so as to do away with the suspicion that the proposed grant of $35,000,000 is merely the forerunner of a permanent policy of cash contributions.

WRIT WAS IRREGULAR

Minister's Action in Thaw Case Upheld
by Judges

The Court of Appeals at Montreal decided last week that Hon. Charles Doherty was entitled to ignore the writ of habeas corpus secured by Messrs. Lafamme and Greenshields for Harry Thaw in an attempt to prevent his deportation from Canada after the Immigration authorities had decided to reject the Mattheawan fugitive. The court contended that the writ had been irregularly served, and granted the application of the Government authorities that it be quashed.

Took Cash and Auto

Four masked bandits, armed with revolvers, held by James Dany near Outremont, a suburb of Montreal, robbed two men and two women passengers of money and jewellery and then stole the car itself, leaving the auto party to reach Outremont as best it could. The robbers abandoned the stolen car after outwitting a constable, but got away with the money and jewellery aggregating $2,500, which the auto party had been obliged to surrender.

Left Fifteen Millions

Public bequests in the will of the late James Ross, president of the Dominion Coal Company, amounting to nearly half a million dollars have been made public. The list includes: Montreal Art Association, $100,000; McGill University, $100,000; Royal Victoria Hospital, $50,000; Montreal General Hospital, $25,000; Ross Memorial Hospital, at Lindsay, Ont., $25,000. The estate is estimated at between twelve and fifteen million dollars.

Mating the Fowls

Proper mating is the real test of the skill of the breeder, for upon it depends in a large measure the results for the year. While each breed and variety requires certain methods peculiar to itself, there are certain principles of mating common to all, and these only are considered in this article.

Well matured fowls are necessary for the best results. Hens, as a rule, are better for breeding purposes than pullets, but, if pullets must be used, only those which are fully developed should be employed. A hen, in her second or third year is at her best for breeding purposes. She has the necessary size, lays larger eggs than she did as a pullet, and the eggs hatch larger chickens. This initial advantage is maintained throughout the growth of the chickens. But good results may be obtained from well matured pullets, especially from those which began laying in the early fall. When hens are used a well grown cockerel should be selected for the head of the pen, and where pullets are employed, a two-year-old cock is preferable to a cockerel.

The number of females to be mated to a male will depend upon various circumstances. The heavy breeds, like the Asiatic fowls, Brahmas, Cochins and Langshans, should have the fewest females for each male bird. The medium sized fowls, like the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds allow the use of a few more females. The lighter breeds, such as Leghorns and Hamburgs, permit the employment of still more females in each pen. If an Asiatic male is allowed eight females, a Wyandotte male may be allowed ten, and a Leghorn male twelve to fifteen. The number of females will depend, also, upon the age of the male. A cockerel will attend to more than a yearling cock and the latter to more than a cock two or three years old. This rule is subject, of course, to many exceptions, for sometimes an active cock will fertilize the eggs of more hens than a sluggish cockerel. It is also certain that the manner in which the fowls are kept is a factor in this problem, for a male mated to fowls running at large will fertilize the eggs of many more hens than if the fowls are kept confined in small yards.

Except where it is desirable to rear a very large number of chickens, or where one is desirous of getting many chickens from some particular male bird, it is much more important to secure the desired quality in the female than to attempt to mate as many as possible with a male. For a number of years we have used from four to six females with each male, with the result that the eggs have been uniformly and strongly fertilized. By thus limiting the number of females, their selection has been more rigid and the matings have been more satisfactory.

There should always be an attempt to correct the defects in one sex by the super-excellencies in the other. If, for example, the shanks of one sex are too long, those of the other should be correspondingly too short. Such an example is perhaps crude, but it illustrates the principle. The desired solution will not always be obtained from so doing; something besides mechanics and mathematics is at work in breeding results; but this principle will work well, in perhaps fifty per cent. of the chickens produced.

It is obvious that one should not intentionally select chickens having opposite defects for mating. What should be done is to select the very best specimen for breeding, those which have but fewest defects and the most excellencies, and then from them mate so as to offset the few defects by the greatest excellencies in the opposite sex.

In the selection of the male bird one should use the greatest possible care, because all of the chickens from the pen in which he is used will be sired by him. A dull, sluggish male should never be used. The eggs from the pen headed by such a male are seldom well fertilized. While size is important, it will usually be found that the largest males are not the best breeders. No doubt the male contributes something to the size of the chickens, but experience seems to demonstrate that in this quality he contributes less than the female. If of medium size but it illustrates a bright, sparkling eye, a sharp clear crop, and apparently overflowing with life and vigor, he will serve admirably the purpose for which he is chosen.

In selecting the females, however, other things being equal, it is desirable to select those of the largest size. Such hens usually lay the largest eggs, and, as has already been suggested, such eggs hatch the largest chickens. Either because of this, or because the hen influences size more directly and powerfully through inheritance than the male, large hens are desirable for breeders. While a male bird should be masculine in appearance, a female ought to be distinctly feminine in appearance. The head should be smaller and finer than in the male, and there should be no suggestion of spurs or of other male sexual characteristics. She should, without and seed separators, but we do wish to impress on their owners the necessity of better care for them while not in use.

Men who operate threshing rigs, should be provided with canvas covers large enough to protect their machine at night and in the event of storms. The expense of such covers is very small when compared to the total cost of the outfit and will keep them looking bright with the paint thus protected. The operating parts of the machine will be much more serviceable when kept dry, which will result from such protection. These covers may also be used to spread over the surface about the machines, which will save enough grain, especially grass seeds, to pay for them several times during each season of work. These covers are growing in favor with threshers and farmers, but only a small proportion are well supplied who operate machines.

The most successful threshers are experienced mechanists who give strict timely attention to the needs of their outfit while at work and on the road. The machine that has been neglected soon wears out or requires frequent repairs, which makes an extra source of expense for both the thrasher and the farmer. Constant, intelligent care while in service is required also a thorough search and careful inspection of all parts every time the machine is at rest to determine its reliable working condition when in operation.

Farmers soon become acquainted with the various threshermen in their locality and employ only those who keep their machines in first-class working condition, so that no loss of grain or time will occur while employed on their premises. Intelligent care while operating threshing machines is a big item with the farmer, because frequent delays due to the need of slight repairs are very expensive to all concerned in the work, especially when a large number of men and teams are employed at harvest wages.

The entire threshing outfit should be put into dry weather proof storage as soon as the season's work has closed. A roof is considered by many as sufficient protection for a threshing rig, but it may prove to be quite worthless as a shelter when rains and snow blow into the shed and fill the machine with moisture, which will cause it to rust and rot during nine or ten months each year. Exposure to the sun and storms may not be as severe on machinery, especially inclosed implements like grain separators, as a poor, open shed. Every serviceable threshing machine is worthy of a building which shall completely protect it from sun and storms.

Belts should be stored in dry closets where rats and mice cannot injure them. In fact the threshing machine deserves and should have the best care obtainable while in and out of service. The depreciation in value from one or two years of outdoor exposure will build a commodious building for the entire outfit which will double its life of usefulness. Can you afford to neglect the threshing machine?

The Wasteful Care of Threshing Machines

The threshing machine which includes an expensive grain separator and a powerful tractor engine is usually the most neglected implement on the farm. It appears that the average threshing machine owner has formed the habit of allowing his expensive investment, which is in use only a few weeks during the year, to remain exposed to the deleterious effects of storms and sun until at the end of one or two seasons it looks like an outfit that is ready for the scrap heap. Because of this habitual neglect the credit of many men who own and operate threshing machines is not strictly "gilt edged" in the community in which they reside.

It is said in some localities that the purchase of a threshing machine inspires the credit of an individual, that banks and merchants class him with others on the poor or slow pay list. This is not because threshing, as a business, is not profitable, but because of the short life history of his machine which is usually exchanged for a new one inside of five years when it should, with good care, be in first-class serviceable condition at the end of ten years.

We do not propose to discourage the purchase of threshing machines, clover hullers, bean and pea threshers, and other expensive grain

Alfalfa

It is very gratifying to us to note how rapidly this plant is growing into favor. We get the word from all sides that alfalfa is making friends rapidly. Alfalfa is a plant that grows and does well both in the cold and in the warm climates. It is somewhat peculiar in this. It appears to be able to make a home with a frost and also to be at home under the blazing sun. This plant is comparatively new to the Agriculture of the United States. It has been known and utilized for generations in portions of Asia. We have in the introduction of the alfalfa into our agriculture a very fine illustration of the influence which comes from great transportation facilities. Extended railroads, steamship lines galore, are carrying people who return with the world-wide knowledge and explorers are searching the globe for better plants, better fruits and everything else which tends to the betterment of this nation's agriculture.

ALFALFA AN ECONOMICAL FOOD.

We have made a rough estimate judging from reports that have come to our desk and can safely say that alfalfa can be grown at an average cost of 85 per ton. Now we will keep in mind the peculiar value of alfalfa is very largely in the leaves of the plant. Now assuming that alfalfa will be cured in the shade, so that its leaves will not be lost, and the dry stems will form a large part of the ton of alfalfa, we have a food value that, if it be substituted with bran from our flour mills, will cost us on the average of $20 per ton. So the farmers who grow alfalfa today can think of the gain which he is making, when he produces for himself a food value that heretofore has cost him $20, but today provides for himself at a cost of $5.

ALFALFA SAVES TIME IN THE FIELD.

The agriculture of today is constantly being associated with some form of animal industry. The dairy cow, foremost of domestic animals, looms up stronger, judged by a revenue standing. When good stock is kept upon the farm there must be more time spent with that stock and there must be less time for the work of the field. The only exception to that rule will be when man very wrongly will extend his day's labor, so that they add to the work of the field, as heretofore done in so many hours the care of the stock. This is making life burdensome.

Alfalfa grown for feeding stock does not tax the time of the field work like many other crops that might be grown. When a field is sown to alfalfa, it is sown for a period of years. It is then a question of cutting. So the value of alfalfa as a food will add to it the value of economy in production.

Light and Whitewash

The germicidal effects and the beneficial influences of sunlight are well known, and in the construction of a cow barn, arrangements should be made to admit as much light as possible. Windows should be as large and as frequent as the strength of the wall will allow. There should, if possible, be from 5 to 7 square feet of glass for each animal it is intended to keep in the stable. Windows should be so constructed that they may be easily opened or closed and should be protected with wire screens to permit of their being left open in summer without admitting flies. Double windows for winter are a great advantage in most parts of the Dominion. They not only prevent draughts where not wanted or needed but keep the inner window comparatively free from frost and from the alternate melting off and freezing over so uncomfortable to man and beast and so effective in shutting out light when most needed.

As an aid in giving a bright, clean appearance to the interior of the cow barn and as an excellent hygienic practice, periodical whitewashing of the walls and ceiling cannot be too highly commended. As a wash for either inside or outside use, the following, if properly applied, will prove satisfactory:--

Half a bushel of unslacked lime, slake with warm water, cover it during the process to keep in the steam; strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer; add a peck of salt previously well dissolved in warm water, three pounds of ground rice hulled to a thin paste and stir in boiling hot; half a pound of powdered Spanish whiting and a pound of glue which has been previously dissolved over a slow fire, and add five gallons hot water to the mixture, stir well and let it stand for a few days, covered up from the dirt. It should be put on hot. One pint of the mixture will cover a square yard, properly applied. Small brushes are best. There is nothing that can compare with it for outside or inside work, and it retains its brilliancy for many years. Coloring matter may be put in and made of any shade, Spanish brown, yellow ochre or common clay.

Early Sunday evening, while the services were being held in the various churches here, fire was discovered in the large barn on the farm of Miss Hattie McRae, just east of the town. The barn and all its contents were a total loss, which, we understand, was only partly covered by insurance. The sympathy of the community is extended to Miss McRae. It is believed that the blaze was caused by sparks from the railway engine as the train passed here shortly before the fire was discovered.

About two o'clock on Wednesday of this week a freight was wrecked about two and a half miles west of Maxville on the Ottawa division of the Grand Trunk Railway. Nine cars were completely wrecked and the track was torn up for a distance of three or four hundred yards. The ties as well as the rails were rooted up and the roadbed looked like a ploughed field where the wreck took place. A wrecking crew was immediately despatched to the scene and began operations without delay. Traffic was badly deranged for the rest of the day, and the fast afternoon train from Ottawa was cancelled. The other trains ran as usual, but the passengers and baggage were transferred from one train to the other when they arrived at the scene of the wreck. The trains then backed up till they reached the nearest turntables, and returned to their original starting point. The wreckage was all cleared away and the track repaired by twelve o'clock midnight on Wednesday and the trains were able to run on time the following day.

St. Elmo

On Friday, 26th inst., the congregation of Indian Lands Presbyterian church held a farewell social in honor of Rev. A. and Mrs. Lee. The evening was fine and the church was well attended by the members of the congregation, and others from the neighborhood. The chairman of the meeting was Mr. W. T. Arkininstall. Proceedings were opened by prayer and praise. Addresses were given by Rev. T. Johnston of Maxville, and Rev. W. A. Morrison of Dunvegan, both of whom expressed their high esteem for Rev. Mr. Lee and regret that he was soon to leave St. Elmo. Mrs. D. McIntyre and Mr. D. D. McGregor contributed to the pleasure of the evening by their singing. The chief item of interest was, however, the reading of an address and the presentation of a good sum of money to Rev. A. and Mrs. Lee. The address was read by the chairman and the presentation made by Mr. D. D. Cameron. The address spoke very highly of Mr. Lee's work as pastor and preacher, and hoped that in the future the lines would fall in pleasant places to Mr. and Mrs. Lee. Mr. Lee feelingly responded and thanked the congregation for this evidence of their appreciation. Refreshments were afterwards served and the meeting was brought to a close by the pastor pronouncing the benediction.

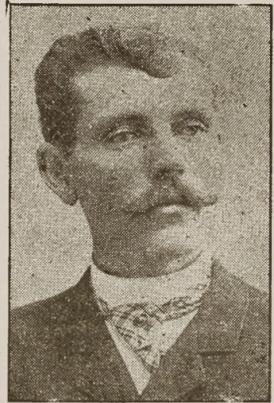

FAREWELL SERVICES AT GORDON CHURCH.

On Sunday the 28th September, the Rev. A. Lee, pastor of Gordon church, preached for the last time as pastor of the congregation. The Rev. A. Lee tendered his resignation to the Presbytery of Glangarry, which was accepted with regret. His resignation taking effect at the close of the month of September.

The large church was well filled with large and appreciative congregations, at both morning and evening services. It was a surprise to many to see such a large attendance made up of friends from St. Elmo, Maxville, Dominionville, Dunvegan, Moose Creek and other places, showing the high esteem in which Mr. A. Lee was held in the neighborhood.

The singing of the congregation was exceedingly joyful and hearty and formed an excellent prelude for the sermons that followed.

Rev. Mr. Lee said he felt it no easy task to address them today for the last time, and said he wished to say something that would be remembered and be helpful in days to come. He would not speak of himself or his work, but would rather speak to them some words to help them in the future. His text was "Wait on the Lord and He shall strengthen thine heart, Wait I say on the Lord." In the sermon the minister showed how to wait on the Lord, by being faithful in attending God's house, by prayer and by serving God and then this promise God had given to encourage us to be faithful. In the evening, the sermon was full of love and sympathy, the subject being some characteristics of "The Good Shepherd and His Sheep." Both morning and evening the people were encouraged to be faithful to God and faithful of Jesus Christ and if, said the preacher, they are faithful unto death, they shall receive the crown of life.

Cause and Cure of Headache

The cause of headache as you know is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the tea they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

Rich On a Small Income

That proposition seems at first as absurd as if one were to speak of being rich, though poor; and yet, it is not at all the same thing. We too often confuse thought by a misuse of words. A large income is not wealth nor is a small one poverty. It is possible to be passing rich on five hundred dollars a year, or the equivalent of about four times that sum. It is equally possible, and far more sadly common to be poor on the income from millions. No circumstances can be more narrow than those of the harassed dispenser of a huge income. The avenues of distribution are an increasing care to keep in check and in proportion. If he is so fortunate or so wretched as to possess at once a conscience and sensitive nerves, he is bound to suffer acute discomfort, however, he spends. There is never enough to do what people think he might, could or should have done, however colossal the annual sum may be. To be rich is simply to have more than you need, to have provision for the morrow, and to owe no man. It is to have attained that nice balance in living where the income is not just absorbed each year by the expenses, and the nerves ever on the strain lest the ends may not meet. It is to keep the fixed charges of the family down rigidly to a point where a margin is left which is provision for illness or calamity during the year without debt. If calamity and illness stay away, this sum becomes savings. The snares that lie in wait for economy are more frequent in large cities, and yet it is also possible. If as much of ingenuity and intelligence and perseverance is put into compressing the expenditure as is expended daily in stretching the income, the difficulty largely disappears. The trouble is by no means confined to cities, the burden of debt from overstrained incomes sits as heavily year by year on thousands of fagged-out men and women whose tired eyes and haggard faces bear witness to the invisible load they bear along village streets and country roads, as upon frequenters of the thoroughfares of the metropolis. The most useful of the arts is the art of doing without. Standards of expenses have made such amazing strides during the past few years that the luxuries of our grandfathers have become our necessities, while a host of conveniences surround our household work that were unimagined of them, clothes, food—the things that supply our greatest needs—have become more expensive. But the most serious strain at the present time on small incomes is the growing distaste among many to manual labor. While they are perhaps, better educated, better dressed and more widely read than their fore-mothers they are less industrious with their hands. They are not all idle, they go about, manage study, clubs and charities, etc., there is almost no avenue of philanthropic or intellectual activity where they do not shine, but do they sweep and dust and mind the children as their grandmothers did? Of course, there may be many whose income properly and wisely relieves them of these duties, and they can apply their energies elsewhere to the greater good of society, but that is not true of the women in families of small income. They must be producers, they must give work or its equivalent in money earned if the family is to experience prosperity under these conditions.

Sewing, cooking, covering shabby furniture, making over old carpets or old clothes are occupations that may call into play the greatest ingenuity, while sweeping, window washing and even scrubbing can do a healthy woman no harm. To the family belong the wife's as well as the husband's best energies and faithful industry. If he gives faithful and constant efforts to the income, and she the most intelligent study and honest effort to control the outgo, the problem of being rich on small means is not unsolvable. —Winnipeg Tribune.

BEVILED TOMATOES.

Wipe, peel and cut four tomatoes in slices. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour and saute in butter.

TOMATO BUTTER.

With tomatoes at their height, make some tomato butter for use next winter. Stew seven pounds of ripe tomatoes until soft.

TOMATO AND CORN SALAD.

Pare and cut out the hearts of tomatoes, set on ice until they are chilled, fill with green corn boiled on the cob, then cut off and allowed to get perfectly cold.

TO KEEP FRUIT WHITE.

Upon removing the skins of pears and apples preparatory to preserving them drop them into water that is acidulated with a little lemon juice or vinegar to prevent them turning dark.

PEACH SYRUP.

In canning peaches cook a few stones with the fruit, putting one in each jar of fruit. They add to the nutty flavor. Do not throw away the remaining stones and peel.

APPLE AND QUINCE JAM.

When preserving quince you are sure to have some left-over juice. To a pint add a pound of sliced apples and three fourths of a pound of granulated sugar.

FRUIT PUNCH.

Pour a pint of water over a pound of sugar, add the juice of one orange and the juice and grated rind of one lemon, blend thoroughly, and boil for about five minutes.

SEASONABLE FRAPPE.

Remove the tops of small nutmeg melons so as to form a cover. Take out all the seeds and membrane and scoop out as much of the soft pulp as can easily be removed.

EVIDENCES OF INDIGESTION.

Coldness of feet and limbs is almost invariably an evidence of indigestion. The coldness is due not to the weakness of the heart or feebleness, but to the contracting of the small arteries, preventing blood from entering the parts.

Punishing Children

A recent talk with a mother of four children of various ages has set one to think that many are perplexed at the responsibility of careful training and proper bringing up of their little ones.

They cannot have a real love of books, or this indifference would not manifest itself. They would understand that books to the book lover are valued friends, and when one is forced to part with them to careless and indifferent readers, who take their time about bringing them home, one is apt to feel justly incensed.

Young girls are frequent offenders where books are concerned. It is no doubt due to thoughtlessness that they take an outrageous time to return any volume that has been lent them, but this is not a sufficient excuse.

Another bad habit indulged in by many people is to begin reading a book that another person has not yet finished. A young girl was a guest at a house party and caused a great deal of indignation by this unconscious habit.

Every one should cultivate a respect for the books of others. They should be handled with care, and promptly returned, and never taken without permission, unless one wishes to label oneself as an odious type of person.

The Book Borrower

An objectionable type of person, whose capacity for irritation is unbounded, is the inveterate careless book borrower. We all know such people. They borrow everything in the book line, from the latest novel in which we are immersed to the delicacies of Thomas a Kempis.

If they borrow and return promptly one would not be so violent upon the subject. But they either keep the books they borrow until one is in despair of ever seeing them again, or they do not return them at all.

Use FIBRE WALL BOARD

THE NEW BUILDING MATERIAL For Interior and Exterior Work.

Better than lath and plaster for interior of buildings. Warmer and cooler than brick or cement.

Warmer, cooler and more durable than frame for exterior of building.

FIBRE BOARD

Is pure wood fibre compressed into solid homogeneous boards by tremendous hydraulic presses. It is thoroughly baked to remove all moisture, so that it is absolutely dry and cannot warp, crack or shrink. It is not a number of thin layers pasted together, as other so-called wall boards are. It is one solid piece of the same material. It is pressed and dried perfectly flat and therefore will not buckle or bow between the studs, like larger boards that are built up on rollers. It is nailed on the studding with common 1 1/2 in. wire nails. Can be sawn with an ordinary fine tooth saw. Does not require skilled mechanics—anyone can put it on.

For interior work it can be finished by papering, the same as a plastered wall or painted or alabastined, or coated with a putty coat of plaster. For exterior work it can be painted or coated with rough coat.

Grenville Wall Board has many advantages over lath and plaster for interior work. It is cheaper more quickly applied, leaves no dirt to be cleaned up, will not crack or jar off, and is an excellent insulator for heat, cold and sound. Fibre Board comes in boards 3 by 4 ft. by 1/2 in. thick for interior work, 3/4 in. or 1 inch thick for exterior work. It is sold directly to users only through the company's own agents, no dealers or middlemen's profits.

Household Hints

If using ammonia to soften water, put it in cool water instead of hot, as the latter would evaporate the ammonia.

If the floors of a closet are wiped with gasoline or benzine after being scrubbed, insects will be kept away.

Melted beef drippings or tallow may be used over the top of jelly instead of paraffin, if the latter is not at hand. After the tallow is cold, it has shrunk away from the glass, fill in with more.

When washing handkerchiefs, add some slices of lemons to the boiling water, and they will come forth much nearer and whiter. Another good way to bleach handkerchiefs is to wash them and then let them soak over night in water in which a little cream of tartar has been dissolved.

Borax is one of the best exterminators for ants, and shelves, and cracks, where the insects appear should be sprinkled well with it.

A preserve closet should be cool and dark. If it has a glass door hang a black curtain over it. It is a good plan to wrap jars of cherries, raspberries and strawberries in paper to exclude the light.

When poaching eggs, try adding a teaspoon of vinegar to the water. This helps to set the white and keeps it from spreading.

To remove stains from sewing machine oil, washing in a lather made of soap, cold water and a tablespoonful of ammonia will usually prove successful, but in the case of colored linens and cottons the ammonia should be employed cautiously, as it is apt to fade the color.

A good home-made polish for floors can be prepared as follows: Melt half a pound of beeswax by setting the vessel containing it in an outer vessel of boiling water, and to the wax add, while stirring constantly, a quart of turpentine. When the compound is well blended, add half a cup of household ammonia, and let it stand in hot water on the back of the stove for five-teen minutes. It is then ready to use.
Apply while warm with a flannel cloth and then polish. If you haven't a weighted polisher you can make one from an old carpet sweeper by putting a brick inside and covering with turkish towelling or wrap it around an ordinary blackboard eraser and proceed. This polish will keep indefinitely, but should be warmed each time before using.

An inexpensive and harmless way of bleaching white clothes which have yellowed is to soak them overnight in sour buttermilk, then wash them in the usual way.

Care of Cream and Making of Butter

No skill on earth can convert bad cream into good butter, nor can cream of first quality be expected from badly handled milk. Let one person fail in his duty in the dairy and the finished product suffers in consequence.
We must have healthy cows, fed whole some, mild flavored food and pure water; clean, well ventilated stables; cows milked in a cleanly manner; the milk immediately strained through two thicknesses of cheese cloth, and if put through a separator, the sooner the better. So much has been written about the care of the separator, but still we would fall short of our duty if we failed to emphasize the stern necessity of thoroughly washing and scalding the separator each time it is used. The bad flavor in lots of butter might be traced to the careless care of the separator.

The fresh cream on no account should be added to that already in the cream can, before it has been cooled. The cream should be set in cold water and frequently stirred or it may be put in a shallow pan and set on a stone floor where it will readily part with its heat.

Cream, to produce good butter, must be quickly cooled to below 55 degrees.

The cream in the can needs stirring from the very bottom to the top twice a day and the can kept covered. In winter the can should stand in a clean, airy place at a temperature between 50 and 60 degrees. In summer keep the cream in the coolest part of the dairy or cellar or in a tank of cold water.

Churn at least twice a week in warm weather and three times in two weeks in cold weather.

The cream should test from 25 to 28 per cent. butter fat and should have a clean, mild acid taste and smell and be of the consistency of easily pouring molasses.

The barrel churn free of dashes or workers inside, is to be preferred.
After scalding and cooling the churn, strain in the cream through a perforated tin strainer. The temperature of the cream depends on so many things—the richer the cream, the lower the temperature, the fresher the cows in milk the lower the temperature, the more succulent the food the lower the temperature. Much of the long churning is due to having too much cream in the churn. Never fill the churn over half full and it is better to start with it but one third full.

In summer it is not necessary to use coloring. In winter a little good butter color adds to the appearance of the butter and is in no way injurious.
Avoid over-coloring, from 2 to 4 drops per pound will be sufficient and if only making a small quantity, a greater uniformity in the color of the butter will be maintained by counting the drops for each churning.

Keeping up a good speed so long as the cream drops. Butter should come in between twenty and thirty minutes.
If it breaks soon, add a dipper of cold water. This checks the gathering and gives a more exhaustive churning.

Poultry Terms

There seems to be a somewhat hazy notion among amateurs as to the exact meaning of the terms used to designate young and old stock. A pullet, strictly speaking, is a female under one year old. After she has attained her full maturity she is a hen, but in the trade we speak of a fowl as a pullet until she has completed her first year's laying. Therefore it is correct to speak of her as a pullet until she is eighteen months old, or has begun her first moult. A cockerel is a male bird under one year old, but he is usually spoken of as a cockerel until he has at least entered well up on his first year as a breeding cock-erel. Cocks are older males, usually having passed through one season's breeding. If you order cockerels for breeding purposes you will get birds that have not been used for breeding.
When ordering pullets you will get females that are under eighteen months, at the most. A cockerel should never be used to breed from before he is a year old. A pullet, if she begins to lay at six months, may be bred from at nine months of age, but she will be better if not bred from till she is one year old. The progeny from mature stock is much more vigorous and of a larger size than that from immature stock.

A setting of eggs is thirteen, although many poultrymen have increased it to fifteen. A broiler is a bird weighing two pounds or less and from 6 to 12 weeks old. A spring chicken is a young bird weighing over two pounds. A capon is the male bird deprived of its generative organs for the purpose of improving the weight and delicacy of its carcass. A stew-ing chick weighs about three pounds. A roaster weighs four or more pounds. A poult is a turkey in its first year. A poultard is a pullet deprived of the power of producing eggs, with the object of great size.
A trio is a male and two females. A breeding pen is generally made up of from six to fourteen females and a male. The male chicken is called a cock, the male goose a gander, the male duck a drake, and the male turkey a tom.

To frost a cake evenly to the very edge, and yet prevent the icing from running down the sides, double a piece of stiff waxed paper and pin it about the cake closely, letting the band come about half an inch above the top of the cake. Spread on the icing thickly and evenly. Do not remove the paper until the icing is set.

To clean a smoke-blackened ceiling.
Make a fairly thick paste of starch and water, and apply this with a pad of flannel. When dry, brush off with a soft brush, and you will find the result well worth the trouble.

POETS AS BOXERS.

How John Keats Knocked Out the Butcher.

According to a French newspaper, the Gri de Paris, Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian poet and dramatist, some time ago agreed to spar a number of rounds with Charpentier, the celebrated heavy weight champion of Europe. The poet and the pugilist appeared on behalf of a deserving Paris charity.

The author of "Pelleas and Melisande" is thus following in the steps of another celebrated poet, Lord Byron who prided himself on being a skilled boxer. He frequently attended meetings of the "Fancy" at Bribb's and elsewhere, and in his diary he writes: "I have been sparring with Jackson this morning and mean to continue and renew my acquaintance with my muffins. My wind is in good plight, and I am not in flesh. I used to be a hard hitter."

From Byron's friend and fellow-bard, Percy Bysshe Shelley, such a resolution would have been impossible; yet, although in every sense of a retiring disposition, he could when needful resent an insult in true British style. Keats used to relate how he once astonished a drunken and abusive waterman by picking into him in such unexpectedly vigorous style with his fists that the fellow soon bawled for mercy.

Keats himself, although constitutionally delicate, was broad-shouldered, and possessed no small amount of physical strength. He was, indeed, well able to take his own part, as he conclusively proved when assaulted by a hectoring butcher, who mistook for cowardice the poet's naturally retiring manner. Quickly did he find out his error as he rose, amid the jeering laughter of his companions, from the mud into which he had been sent by a straightly-delivered blow.

Charles Kingsley, besides being a novelist, was a poet of no mean order.
He was, too, what may be termed a handy man with his fists. "There was another professor whose lectures we attended together," wrote the Rev.
Pitcairn Campbell, who was a fellow undergraduate with Kingsley at Cambridge, "one who taught the gentle art of self-defence—a negro of pure blood —who appeared to have more joints in his back than are usually allotted to humanity."

Robert Burns, besides being an adept at such athletic exercises as putting the stone, well knew how to take care of himself in a "turn-up"; while another Scottish bard, James Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd, was in his youth a doughty opponent for anyone who fancied himself as a boxer. On one occasion, it is related, he contested for upwards of an hour with a strapping guardsman, a man his superior in weight and inches, and one moreover, who had fought more than one desperate battle for a money stake. Despite his qualifications the soldier was at length obliged to own himself beaten.

In his youth the ability of Richard Hengist Horne, the author of "Orien" and other poems, as a boxer stood him on more than one occasion in good stead. During the time he was serving in the Mexican Navy he was one night, when on shore, attacked by two desperadoes, who, armed with knives, thought to have an easy prey. Woefully, however, were they mistaken, for Horne, seeing what they were up to, dodged their onslaught, and, with a couple of well-directed blows, laid them sprawling at his feet.

Duke's Private Army.

The Duke of Atholl occupies the unique position of being the only one of the King's subjects who maintains an army of his own. By a special act of grace the late Queen Victoria, shortly after she ascended the throne, presented the Atholl Highlanders with regimental colors, and thus they were duly constituted an "army." The Duke himself is colonel of the "regiment," while his eldest son, the Marquess of Tullibardine, and his two brothers, Lord James and Lord George Stewart-Murray, are officers. Many of the leading gentlemen in Perthshire also hold rank. The men, numbering about 300, are drawn almost without exception from the vast estates of Atholl. They are sturdy, stalwart Highlanders, many of them standing 6 feet 4 inches high.

Whiskers.

"Whiskers" was a word formerly used to designate the hair on the upper lip. Scott more than once speaks of "whiskers on the upper lip," and so does Defoe in "Robinson Crusoe." The Hansword defined a "whisker" as "the hair growing on the upper lip or cheek under a mustache." It seems to have taken its name from a fancied resemblance to a small brush, to
"whisk" properly meaning to sweep, and a "whisker" having been a particular kind of feather brush; also, in the slang of a former time, a switch or rod. In the seventeenth century a "whisker" signified, among other things, a brazen lie, a "whopper."

Rival to Panama.

The decision of the Hon. Frank Coeh-rane, Canadian Minister of Railways and Canals, that Port Nelson shall be the tide water terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway—work upon which is forthwith to be resumed—has given a new stimulus to the discussion of the merits and utilities of this project. The Hudson Bay Railway is designed to bring the vast grain areas of the Canadian Northwest within a hauling distance of Liverpool of 3,500 miles, or some 1,500 miles less than the existing rail and lake routes through Montreal, St. John and New York.

Town in the Making.

A city at the mouth of the new Welland Ship Canal is no longer a day dream. Far-sighted capitalists, seeing the possibilities ahead, have taken the initial steps to map out the city-that-is-to-be.

Port Weller is to be the name of the new municipality—a name chosen in honor of Chief J. L. Weller, the man who conceived the building of the new ship canal, and is in full charge of the construction of the great work.

Satiety Possible.

"My firm opinion is, you can't get too much of anything!"
"Ere, check it, Bill! Wot about 'time'?"

HEM BIDDLE'S HOBBY

It Lost Him His Bride

By KATHARINE GRAY

"Our fellow townsman, the well known aeronaut," was the manner in which the Finchville Banner always referred to Hemenway Biddle. Mr.
Biddle was the editor of the Banner, and in the great shed back of the printing office was anchored his big balloon.

On clear days after the paper had gone to press Mr. Biddle might be seen linking away at his balloon or else in the act of soaring over the heads of his neighbors in the car attached to the gas inflated craft.

Hem Biddle himself soared skyward because he liked the strange sensation of hanging between earth and heaven with the ever present element of danger attached thereto. As a counterpart to editing a country weekly newspaper he believed there was nothing like it, excepting always Amabel Paine.

At this particular moment the Banner had gone to press and was in the hands of its eager readers. Hem Biddle was scaling the airy heights, and Amabel Paine was swinging in a bam-bock under the apple tree in her front yard.

Amabel's eyes, blue as the sky above, were fixed dreamily on the green can-opy of leaves overhead. There was one spot where she could see the sky.
Suddenly across this bit of sky there raced a black blot.

"Oh, bother!" pouted Amabel, all at once remembering that she was engaged to Hem Biddle. It was rather disconcerting to recollect it, for at that very moment she had been dreamily relying a few delicious hours spent in the company of Peter Lamb the previous evening.

The gate creaked inward, and Peter Lamb's massive form plodded sturdily down the shell path to the apple tree.
Amabel watched him, delighting in the gleam of sunshine on his blond head and the unswerving gleam in his brown eyes when they met hers. She blushed and her eyes hid themselves under drooping lids as she sat up in the bambock and allowed her little hand to rest an instant in his big one.

"I accepted your invitation to call,"
he laughed rather awkwardly as he sat down in a big rustic chair and tossed his hat to the grass. "You can see that I haven't waited."

Amabel's mouth curved deliciously.
"I am glad," she murmured, soothing the seam of her white duck skirt.

"In that sort. When I want to do a thing I can't wait," he went on earnestly. "I don't believe I understand the pleasures of anticipation. I know what I want when I see it, and then I want it right away."

"Yes?" Amabel smoothed another seam.

"I'm going to shock you, Miss Paine," went on this startling young man in a determined tone.

"Please don't," she murmured.

"It sounds foolish on such short acquaintance, but you know I used to live in Finchville, and we played together when we were children. Why, we went to school together! The wonder of it all is that I should come back again and meet you at the schoolhouse dance last night and not remember your name. I suppose I used to call you Amy," he ended daintily.

Amabel said nothing, and Mr. Lamb, taking a fresh grip on his courage, leaped forward eagerly. His handsome face was quite crimson with embarrassment, but his brown eyes were pools of flaming determination.

"Don't laugh, please, but I love you, Amabel. I want to marry you," he said briefly.

The girl's eyes flashed up with a startled question in their blue depths.
It was as if she were questioning his sincerity. His eyes answered her.

"I can't," she whispered sadly.

"Why not?" His voice was tense.

A shadow passed between them and the sun.

"That." She pointed upward.
"Why, what do you mean? It's a balloon, isn't it?" he asked in a startled tone.

She nodded. "There's a man in it," she explained.

His jaw tightened. "Ah! It's the man, I suppose?"

"I am engaged to Mr. Biddle," she said with dignity.

"Biddle? Hem Biddle of the Banner?"

"Yes."

He got upon his feet, and his white lips curved in a wry smile. "Just my luck to get here too late. I hope you will be very happy, Miss Paine. Is-it to be very soon?"

Amabel reddened from brow to chin, but she held her head haughtily. "It-it is indefinite," she stammered.

"Thank you for your good wishes."

He was holding her hand tightly and looking quite unconscious of that fact.

"Something small and dark hurtled down through the branches and fell at Peter's feet."

"What's that?" he gasped.

"It's mine!" cried Amabel sharply.

"Mr. Biddle often amuses himself by dropping messages down to me from the balloon as he circles above. His poetry is very good."

Peter Lamb read the lines distinctly and it is to his credit that he did not smile, for the provocation was great:

"Sailing high in heaven's blue,
Dearest, now I think of you
Are you thinking now of me Swinging 'neath the apple tree?"

She stood there looking half wistfully, half defiantly, at Peter Lamb when there sounded steps on the footpath beyond the thick screen of birch that hedged the fence.

"Hem Biddle's sailing around. What do you make of it, Anna?" The woman's sharp voice was eagerly curious.
"Another voice beyond the hedge answered. "Pretty doings, I say, to go ballooning the afternoon he's going to get married!"

"There ain't nunny girls would wait any longer for Hem Biddle. He's been going with Amabel six years, and any one can see that the child is tired to death of him and his freakish ways.
But she's got grit, and she'll stick by her promise."

"Is what they said true?" he demanded hotly.

"Every word."

"Why do you stand it?" he hurled out.

"I was quite fond of him, and I promised, you know, and he is always so sorry, I was wondering if we could signal to him now. Ah, here comes mother!" She clasped her hands and looked apprehensively at the little roly poly gray haired woman hastening toward the apple tree.

"Amabel Paine!" cried the lady in a shocked tone. "Here on your wedding afternoon entertaining company! Oh, how do do! Peter Lamb, did you say?
Little Peter Lamb, bless your heart!
The last time I saw you you were in knee pants and calico blouses. You'll excuse Amabel, won't you? She's going to be married at 6:30, and it's after 5 now. Come, Amabel."

She tucked her hand under the girl's arm and smiled, but it was plain that she was shocked at the unconventional behavior of the bride to be. "Have you seen Hem?" she asked quickly.

Amabel pointed upward where the ball loom circled lazily against the blue sky.
Mrs. Paine's eyes narrowed, and her face flushed. "Amabel!" she cried, with tears in her eyes. "If he forgets again I shall die of mortification. I can't stand it."

Amabel's lips trembled in a smile that was near to tears.

Peter Lamb suddenly brought one knee to the palm of his open hand.

"Mrs. Paine, if Hem Biddle isn't on hand at 6:30 the wedding can go on just the same if you will listen to reason."

"What do you mean?" demanded the puzzled lady.

"Peter Lamb explained volubly, and Amabel added timid words of consent.

"If Hem isn't here at 6:30," said Mrs. Paine, "Peter, you can take his place. Come, Amabel!" And she bore the blushing bride away down the path to the house.

It was deliciously cool and pleasant up there in the evening sky. Delicate tints of primrose and pale rose flecked the blue and silver sunset sky. Hem Biddle, suborned and frowsy with disbeveled hair, leaned against the side of the car and dreamily scanned the green earth below.

Most of the afternoon had been spent in hovering over the vicinity of the Paine place, where a certain white speck in the garden represented Amabel. An uneasiness had prevailed in his mind the last hour. There was some task unfulfilled, some promise he had not kept. What was it? He gazed dreamily at the sunset and composed another poem.

The balloon drifted a little lower in the unstirred air. There came the tickling sound of church bells from below. It was Wednesday evening. He glanced at the little calendar in the cover of his notebook as he closed it, and his eyes bulged with horror.

It was Wednesday, the 17th, and he was to be married this evening to Amabel.

For the third time he had forgotten
it. Twice Amabel had forgiven him.
But now!

He looked at his watch. It was half past 6, the hour for the ceremony.
He leaned over the car in an agony of fear. There was much activity about the Paine place. Little groups of people dotted the lawn, some in white.
Those were women, and the dark ones were men. He guessed they were gar-ging up at him, waiting for him. Poor Amabel! He snatched at the rope that released the gas, and the balloon dropped earthward. Again he looked over, and now he saw that the people had streamed into the house. There was a carriage before the gate!

At exactly 7 o'clock the balloon landed in the middle of Ebenezer Paine's cornfield and destroyed about 100 stalks of prized corn.

Within the house Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lamb were receiving congratulations and answering the questions of dazed wedding guests. Mrs. Paine was explaining matters to Hem Biddle's indignant relatives and friends.

Ebenezer Paine, stiffly garbed in his Sunday clothes, creaked across the lawn, through the orchard and into the cornfield. He frowned at the broken corn, and a quizzical look came into his eyes when he saw Hem Biddle crawling out from the folds of silk that enveloped the basket of the balloon. Hem was disgracefully untidy.

"Better late than never," he said apologetically.

Ebenezer Paine smiled grimly.
"You've said that three times, Hem, and I reckon the proverb's worn out.
This time it's better never come at all than be late."

"But Amabel," murmured the crestfallen aeronaut, wiping his grimy hands on his coat.

"Amabel," remarked the bride's father thoughtfully—"why, Amabel waited till 6:35, and then she married an old sweetheart who was interested enough to be there on time."

HYMENEAL

Johnston-Molloy. An extremely pretty and interesting wedding took place at high noon in St. Paul's Church, Sandown, Wednesday, 24th September, 1913, when Miss Minnie Molloy was united in matrimony to Mr. Leslie D. Johnston, a prosperous young merchant of Lansdown. The church was beautifully decorated with asters and ferns by the lady friends of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Dixon of Ottawa. Miss Jessie Dey, cousin of the bride, played the wedding march, as the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Geo. Dey, of Dunvegan. The bride, who was unattired, looked the picture of girlish grace in a gown of ivory crepe net over caught with sprays of orange blossoms. A wreath of the same blossoms held the veil of embroidered tulle in place. After the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's mother, where a dainty luncheon was served. The dining room was prettily decorated and lighted with candles. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston then motored to Vankleek Hill where they boarded the 4.30 train for Montreal, Quebec and other points. The bride wore a travelling suit of navy blue broad cloth with hat to match. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will reside at Lansdown. A costly array of wedding gifts including cheques, silverware and cut glass, bears testimony of the high esteem in which the bride was held. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of furs, to the organist a pearl brooch. The bride's gift to the groom was a diamond stick pin. Among the guests from a distance were: Miss H. and Messrs. D. and R. Davidson, Dr. and Mrs. Crain, Crayser; Mrs. E. A. Dey and Miss Jessie Dey, Finch. Weegar-Sauva. A quiet wedding took place at the Manse, Alexandria, on Thursday afternoon, October 1st, at 5 o'clock, when Miss Bernadette Sauve, youngest daughter of Mr. J. F. Sauve of Alexandria, was united in marriage to Mr. Clarence H. Weegar, son of Mr. J. W. Weegar of Maxville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. Stewart, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Only a few intimate friends of the contracting parties were present. The happy couple carry with them the congratulations of their many friends. KALLORAN-McDONALD. The wedding of a very popular Cobalt couple took place yesterday morning at St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church, when Rev. Father O'Gorman united in marriage Mr. J. J. Kalloran, who for the past seven years has been a resident of Cobalt and who originally came here from Calabogie, and Miss Mary McDonald, formerly of Cornwall, but who has been a resident of Cobalt for some time past. The groom was assisted by Mr. M. Butler and the bride by her sister, Miss May McDonald. Last evening a dance and reception were given to Mr. and Mrs. Kalloran at Harmony Hall by their many friends and the best evidence of their popularity was that the affair drew the largest attendance of the season at the hall. The couple were accompanied from the home of the bride's parents to the hall by Pipers Sharpe and Johnston. The dance program included many enjoyable numbers and it was an early hour this morning when the entertainment broke up. Mr. and Mrs. Kalloran were the recipients of many beautiful presents. They will reside on Lang street—Cobalt Nugget. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. R. McDonald, former residents of Alexandria. OBITUARY Mr. Alexander Munro. It is our sad duty to announce the death of Mr. Alexander Munro of Indian Head, Sask., a brother of Murdoch Munro, solicitor of this town, and an old time resident of Alexandria, where for some years he carried on business as a druggist. About fourteen years ago Mr. Munro married Miss Mary E. Tomb, daughter of the late David Tomb, and sister of Mr. James Tomb of this place. The funeral on Tuesday, to the North Branch cemetery, was largely attended by old friends from Cornwall, Alexandria, Martintown, Williamstown, Apple Hill, and the surrounding country. The services were conducted at the residence of his brother, Mr. William Munro, his old home, by Rev. Mr. Govan of Williamstown, assisted by Rev. D. Stewart of Alexandria. The pallbearers were: Messrs. Hugh Munro, M.P.P., William D. W. Munro, Alex. J. Robertson, John H. Robertson, Hugh Fraser and Arch. A. McDermid. Besides his widow he leaves surviving him three brothers, Murdoch of this town, Donald and William of the North Branch, and three sisters, Mrs. D. McLeod of Vancouver, Mrs. Chas. Sinclair of Alberta, and Miss Christina of Alexandria. Particulars of the immediate cause of his death have not yet reached his friends, but it is known that he had been suffering from asthma for a long time and his death was not entirely unexpected. We extend our warmest sympathy to the bereaved relatives. Mr. John McIntosh. The funeral of the late Mr. John McIntosh, whose death occurred at the residence of his mother, at Glen Robertson, on Saturday last, took place on Monday to the Presbyterian burying ground, here, the service at the house being conducted by Rev. J. Matheson of Dalhousie Mills, while Rev. D. Stewart officiated at the grave. Mr. Hugh Cameron.
