

To the Electors of Glengarry-Stormont

On the 6th day of December you will be called on to make a decision which is bound to have a marked influence on the future welfare of this constituency and this country. I know you are deeply interested in all our public questions and that you have the best interests of your country at heart and would like to decide this momentous question in a way that will promote the continued advancement of our democratic institutions as well as the prosperity and contentment of our people. For this reason I would like to appeal to you in a personal way for the purpose of placing the issues fairly before you and helping you to decide aright.

Three parties are appealing to you for your support, the National Liberal and Conservative Party, the Liberal Party and the Progressive Party. The first mentioned of these three represented in this contest by Brigadier General Hervey claims to be the natural successors of the Conservative Party of the days of Sir John A. Macdonald. They put forth their appeal to the party traditions and sentiments of the old Conservative party but they do not stand by the principles of that party. They have entirely reversed the slogan of Sir John A. Macdonald "that we must have reciprocity of tariffs in order to secure reciprocity of trade"; they have repudiated the principle of reciprocity of trade with the United States which Sir John tried so earnestly to bring about during the whole of his political career. They have likewise forsaken another cardinal principle of the old National Policy as laid down by that great statesman, namely that as our industrial institutions advanced in strength and were able at each advance to secure a firmer hold on the home market, when they began to form mergers and to cater to the export trade, then the tariff should be reduced and adjusted. Those conditions have long ere now been fulfilled but instead of reducing the tariff and thereby lessening the cost of living to the average Canadian they have yielded to the demands of the Protected Interests and actually increased our tariff barriers. To use the words of Arthur Meighen himself when in opposition, they are allowing "protection to run rampant, they have become the slaves of those who helped them into power and who now are maintaining them there behind ramparts of gold."

Mr. and Mrs. Voter do not be deceived by their party appeals, they have already forsaken many of the traditions and principles which once made that party great and are no longer worthy of your confidence.

Then you have the Liberal Party represented in this contest by Mr. J. E. Chevrier. They claim to be the natural successors of the Liberal Party of Laurier's day and they are appealing to you to support the "Laurier tradition and the Laurier tariff". They too are unfortunate in their appeal and their record does not substantiate their claim that they are supporting the principles of the Liberal party as generally understood throughout the country and as proclaimed in their platform. It is true that Mr. King appeals for the "Laurier tradition", but Sir Lomer Gouin, Messrs Lemieux, Fielding and Mitchell who are now dominating the Liberal Party are not appealing for the "Laurier tradition" but for the "Laurier Tariff". Now let us see the difference between these two appeals. The "Laurier tradition" was a policy of gradually diminishing the tariff burdens borne by the people of Canada and securing reciprocal trade arrangements with the United States. He made several attempts to secure these ends and was in a measure foiled in each attempt and when he secured the Reciprocity Act of 1911, which was unquestionably in line with his own policy as well as that of Sir John Macdonald, many of his supporters forsook him and he went down to political defeat rather than sacrifice his principles. Laurier failed in securing for Canada his tariff policy because the Big Interests of Toronto and Montreal turned against him and therefore his tariff was still where he left it a protectionist tariff, hence the present appeal for the "Laurier tariff" by men who are allied with the Big Interests, who are protectionists and who are using the name of that great statesman as a party slogan when they are themselves opposed to his trade principles. Those men have long ere now forsaken the principles and pledges of the Liberal party. They are not worthy of your confidence because they too have become the servants of those who helped them into power by replenishing their party war chest.

These two parties are backed by the financial interests of this country and after the next election will in all probability form an alliance with one another for the purpose of carrying on the Government, an alliance of this kind may cause some heart breaking among the faithful party men but if their financial backers order it so they have no choice in the matter.

You have also appealing for your support the Progressive Party. This is a new force in Canadian public life, it is the voice of the people asserting their rights and their independence of the domination of political partisanship. It is a force which springs from that sense of fairness and justice which is a saving characteristic of the Canadian people. It gathers its strength from the common people, the workers, the farmers, the artisans, the business men in our villages and towns and professional men and women who live on salaries and fees. It stands for equal opportunities for all and special privileges to none; it seeks to free our public life from the corrupting influence of the secret campaign fund; it would reduce the tariff where it is now excessive with a view to lowering the cost of living; it would have a tariff based solely on the necessity of revenue and require every claim for tariff protection to be heard publicly before a committee of parliament; it would adopt measures that would compel mergers with greatly inflated capital to squeeze some of the water out of their stocks, not only for the benefit of the consumer who uses their goods but also to safeguard the investor who sees a safe investment for his money; it stands for a clean businesslike administration of this country's affairs and the abolition of party patronage; it would free our people from the menace of a controlled press by requiring the publication of the names of the owners of every newspaper and periodical in Canada; it would try to make parliament more dependent on and more representative of the people by working out a system of transferable vote to secure proportional representation.

Mr. and Mrs. Voter the Progressive Party stands for you and sees to give you a fuller opportunity of contributing to the further development of our democratic institutions. We invite you to join the ranks of the Progressives and help the good work along and strive to bring about in this great country that measure of unity and contentment among the common people which is the only guarantee of national greatness and the true measure of national prosperity. If you will support me with your votes on December 6th, I shall always strive with you to bring about those great things for Canada.

Yours very faithfully,

J. WILFRED KENNEDY.

Williamstown the Scene of Nomination Proceedings

Tuesday, 22nd inst., was Nomination Day for the Federal House and some minutes before the official hour two o'clock, up to which time nominations were receivable by Mr. D. P. McDiarmid, Returning Officer, electors began to pour into the village of Williamstown in goodly numbers to participate in the proceedings thus displaying a lively interest in public issues which is commendable. It is estimated some four hundred persons, including many women voters were present in St. Andrew's Hall by the time the meeting opened.

Mr. D. P. McDiarmid of Avonmore, the Returning Officer took the chair at 2 p.m.

His reception was second only to that accorded the several candidates and was expressive of the pent up feeling of the average voter. He announced that Messrs J. Wilfred Kennedy, Progressive, J. E. Chevrier, Liberal, and Brigadier-General Hervey, Conservative, had been duly nominated. He stated further that amicable arrangements had been arrived at for the holding of a meeting then and there, that the electorate generally might hear the public question of the day thoroughly discussed from various standpoints and he further declared that a poll would be held between 8 A.M. and 6 P.M. in the several sub-divisions that comprise the Federal county of Glengarry-Stormont on the 6th day of December next.

Upon motion of Lt. Col. H. A. Cameron and H. Elfe, Mr. McDiarmid was elected to the chair and it must have been more than pleasing to him to note how smoothly and amicably the proceedings were carried to a termination. It was a striking example of how the average elector is now able to accept politics sanely, to feel that his neighbor has an equal right to his opinion without questioning or quarrelling over same and this happy conclusion we believe, like one of the speakers stated, is largely due to the general levelling that followed the Great War.

Each candidate and his co-speakers were allowed forty minutes and at the late member, Mr. Kennedy was setting the ball in motion, it was agreed he should have an extra ten minutes at the close to reply. For upwards of two hours, as we have already said, the electors were regaled with speeches of high order and if now they are not familiar with all sides of the question it is not chargeable to lack of desire or effort on the part of the speakers. The candidates were warmly received in each case.

Mr. Kennedy, the first speaker said in effect that Nomination day might in effect thought a bugaboo to an ordinary candidate, a member or an ex-member of parliament and this would not be far from the truth. After thanking them for the confidence already placed in him some two years ago, in electing him to parliament and expressing the hope that that confidence, not merely still existed but had increased as he had endeavored to serve one and all impartially and would continue to do so with best efforts if re-elected, the speaker said that on this occasion it was his intention only to dwell on a few of the important questions of the day.

One thing which very few people stopped to consider and yet was a big issue was that of a candidate's election expenses, campaign funds, etc. There were three ordinary ways of providing the money required to finance an election; first, when the candidate was asked to pay his own expenses, secondly, when the people themselves insisted on contributing and thirdly through a secret party fund. Election expenses which ranged from three thousand to five thousand dollars and at times went even higher, made running for parliament a rich man's game and the ordinary man seem'd altogether out of it. If a man put up three, four or five thousand dollars he would feel that he was independent of his constituency, that he had practically bought his way in and if he were not strictly honest would no doubt reimburse himself and feel very little gratitude towards his constituents. Taking the second point being human, he naturally would feel grateful to those who financed him and would feel equally under an obligation to them and thirdly if the money came from a secret fund and until after election probably he would not know who contributed towards that fund, that candidate would be in a very unfortunate and unenviable position. He might go to parliament as the representative of the people, honest and good and trying to serve the constituency and the people but could he take an independent stand bound and tied as he was by the big interests behind the fund. R. B. Bennett of Calgary, now Minister of Justice, in a debate in 1914, as much as admitted that both sides of the House were guaranteeing bonds to the extent of some forty five millions of dollars in return perhaps for contributions to their election funds one side proposing the 'other acquiescing. This was hard to believe said the speaker but Bennett must have known what he was talking about. Mr. Kennedy to further strengthen the arguments he was advancing as to election funds quoted the late Sir Richard Cartwright as having stated "the moment you introduce the protective system you create a class whose interests are essentially different from those of the people and who become the ready contributors to corporation funds, sharing with their masters the plunder which they have been able to take from the people." The speaker did not desire to throw mud at the statesmen of our great country as many of them were honest and very often only victims of the malicious system of financing political campaign funds.

As for the tariff, which seemed to be the big issue of the day, he thought a tariff of ten or fifteen per cent would secure far more revenue than the present tariff of thirty-five per cent. Had the tariff given employment to labor? There were more idle at present than ever before, and while almost two million immigrants had come to this country during the last ten years the population had increased only by a little over one million. Where have they gone? Canada evidently could not keep her immigrants. In the city of Brantford, recently an appeal was made for help for the unemployed and on investigation it was found that the only men who were still at work were the employees of the Binder twine industry unprotected by tariff while the others were closing down or had already closed down. This could only mean that the protected tariff had prevented Canadian factories from adopting efficient methods and from getting their industries on a firm foundation. This protection has been used to exploit the Canadian people by forming mergers and combines. Mr. Arthur Meighen had promised to diminish and adjust the tariff as soon as Canada had a firm enough hold on the market. This had not been done and the reason was attributable as he had said in the beginning to the financing of election funds. Before resuming his seat, Mr. Kennedy made a strong appeal for the support of the electors in the election now being waged.

Appearing in the pink of condition and apparently keen for a contest General C. L. Hervey, the candidate of the Conservative party, next took the platform. In opening his speech the genial General thanked one and all for the support and courtesy shown him in the bye-election which he contested some two years ago coupled with the hope that it would be as generously extended him in the present campaign and result in his return at the head of the polls. He then proceeded to answer Mr. Kennedy taking up the question of campaign funds. He agreed with the previous speaker that they were wrong further that they were illegal, but the trouble was that the law could not be enforced in the matter. Turning to the Tariff and touching the question lightly the General said that Mr. Meighen who had promised that the Tariff would be adjusted had kept that promise as far as he was able with the result that the Tariff now in operation was lower than that existing in Laurier's time. A great question much debated was that of the money spent by the present Government on railways. Sir John A. Macdonald had built the Canadian Pacific Railway, had given a subsidy to that Company of twenty five million acres of land and had lent against that land twenty-five millions of dollars. The promoters of that railway at the outset had had a hard struggle but results had proved the great foresight of that able statesman. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier came into power he planned the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Railways. At the time he could not foresee the war nor the period of depression to follow. "The Grand Trunk and Canadian Northern would eventually win out however, as had the Canadian Pacific. Some of the Western grain districts depended on these two railways and if the present administration had not stepped in and bought these railways these districts would have been famine stricken. In his opinion under the administration of the present government Canada today has the best credit of any other country with the exception of the United States and even the Yankees will agree that Canada had something to do with winning the war. Some one, not his opponent, had circulated during the last election the report that he had stood for conscription. The truth of the matter was that in France he had voted against conscription because he thought that those who could possibly go from Canada would do their duty. Mr. Crerar had joined the Union Government at the time conscription was passed to get a good job but had now left that government to try for a bigger job. He did not think that if the people were so fussy about conscription they should give a man like Crerar such a position although personally he knew nothing against Crerar's integrity. General Hervey resumed his seat amid applause.

In his opening remarks Mr. J. E. Chevrier, Reve of Cornwall, and the Liberal candidate for this riding, confessed that this was the first time he had been chosen as a candidate in an election and at this somewhat late hour his friends had imposed quite a task upon him.

The nomination had come to him unsought and therefore he was all the more proud to be the standard bearer of the great Liberal party. Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Hervey, his two opponents, were great personal friends of his and this would undoubtedly prove a friendly fight. He had never fought any fight that he was afraid to repeat and anything that would be done in this election would from the Liberal angle be above board, right straight from the shoulder with all sincerity and in the interests of this great country of ours and of those two great counties of Glengarry-Stormont. As his time was limited he did not intend to discuss politics that afternoon, that would be done by his friend, Mr. Smith. Everyone knew, however, how the country had prospered under the Laurier administration from 1896 to 1911. To illustrate this the speaker recounted an anecdote that was told at a recent Liberal meeting of how a Conservative farmer, when Laurier came into power, thought himself ruined because he owed two thousand dollars on his farm and pork at the time was selling at four cents a pound, in fact he was prepared to quit right there, were it not for the persuasion of his son who was more optimistic. Within two or three months they were getting seven or eight cents for their pork and during the period of prosperity which followed, father and son voted Liberal. When Mr. Chevrier divulged that the farmer's name was McDonald the laugh was general. Proceeding Mr. Chevrier said the Liberal policy of today was that enunciated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and therefore it was not necessary for him to be a great orator to make the people understand what he represented. No one could deny what that Liberal policy had done between 1896 and 1911. The Liberal party today would mate out the same justice as Sir Wilfrid had in the years gone by. Mackenzie King, the present Leader of the party, was a young administrator but quite capable of following in the great Chief's footsteps and he had the complete confidence of Liberals generally. Before addressing his compatriots in French, he wished to impress on the minds of his hearers that they must not consider him in their vote so much as the great party for which he stood.

Speaking in his native tongue Mr. Chevrier pointed out that it was ten years since the Liberals had had a chance of voting. He asked every one of them to go to the poll on the 6th December and on that day mark their ballot for him and the great policy for which he stood. They knew what that administration had done for Canada. He might not be as good an advocate of his cause as his opponents were of theirs but the cause itself was good. The fight before them was a difficult one. He had come in almost at the last minute because he wanted to give to the Liberals the chance to vote Liberal. In the coming election he depended a great deal on the vote of the ladies. He knew it was often hard for the ladies to come out and vote but he asked them to make a sacrifice this time and come out and do so for him. Britain he said was the mother country of the English speaking people of Canada but for the French Canada alone was theirs. For this reason Canada must have an administration which was wholesome, honest and for Canada. He hoped to meet them again at other centres and thus place the issues before them and sincerely trusted they would help his cause to victory on December 6th. That Mr. Chevrier had many friends in the audience was evidenced by the enthusiasm manifested.

Speaking in French in the interests of the Progressive Candidate, Mr. J. O. Leger who had been supporting the Progressive Candidate in Vaudreuil and Soulanges, announced that Mr. Charlebois appeared to have a very good chance of winning out. His was a French voice from Quebec talking to them. The tariff he said was not invented to give pleasure to the farmers but rather for the manufacturers. In the olden days the country people had helped and voted to support the town people in elections. Now they want to send those who would be interested in their problems. The speaker claimed that the Liberal speakers had said nothing against the policy of the Progressives. Mr. Kennedy's party favored Agriculture, the Mines and Fisheries upon which the whole country depended. If the Progressives came into power many beneficial changes would follow. Meat now sold as low as twelve cents a pound while those who bought it at this price retailed it at forty cents, the speculator benefiting. This would be changed. As to taxes they would not be put on land but rather on luxuries. After a few words on the railway question, and before resuming his seat, Mr. Leger wished Mr. Kennedy all success on Dec. 6th.

Speaking in the interests of General Hervey and the Conservative party generally Mr. McClenaghan of Ottawa, expressed great surprise that Messrs Kennedy and Chevrier had put forward platforms that were hardly those of their respective parties and actually falling directly in line with the policy he was prepared to enunciate. He thought that they should at least stick to the platforms their parties had solemnly laid down. Free Trade, he claimed, would be excellent if every nation subscribed to it but where other countries had a tariff of some 7 1/2 to 300 per cent Canada's was 14.2 to 21 p. c. on dutiable articles. The United States tariff was in the neighborhood of 30 p. c. a direct discrimination against the Canadian retail farmer in Eastern Canada. By advocating Free Trade the Western farmer was prepared to throw the Eastern farmers into the arms of the United States. The speaker gave statistics showing the great decrease in Canadian export to the States since the ordinary tariff came into force and went on to say that if the farmers of Eastern Canada were to be protected a Protective Tariff here in Canada was of vital importance. After devoting a little time to the Liberal platform in this connection he stated that as a result of putting into force such a policy the Canadian dollar would still further depreciate in the United States until it would be only worth from 50 to 70c according to the ratio of Canada's diverse trade balance. "Have Free Trade if you wish," said Mr. McClenaghan, "but it will do you no good". It will lead only to annexation with the United States. In 1911 Canada returned 75 seats against this very question of Free Trade.

Mr. C. E. Laurin of Ottawa, spoke in French on behalf of General Hervey for a few minutes and received a good hearing.

Col. Robert Smith, ex-M.P. needed no introduction to a Glengarry audience and his fifteen minute address supporting Mr. Chevrier was closely followed and frequently punctuated with applause. In opening he commented on the friendly way in which the meeting was being held. From the Progressive candidate's speech he thought that Mr. Kennedy could very easily vote for Mr. Chevrier and still support his own view. His friend Chevrier in turn would most likely vote for Kennedy while the amiable General Hervey seemed to feel that he would like to be impartial and give each of his opponents a vote.

Mr. Kennedy had spoken vaguely against the accusation that his was a class movement. He had not explained why a farmer only could be their candidate, and farmers only support their cause. If the United Farmers wished to succeed, they must appeal to all classes to help on the good movement. General Hervey, he said, was a gentleman who, both through his good services Overseas and his own personality, would appeal to the people. Let them remember however, that it was not the man they must judge but the party for which he stood. His must be the responsibility and burden throughout the campaign of the party which has been governing us since 1911. He must be judged by the record of that party.

As for Mr. McClenaghan, he had come to preach the policy of Meighen, who travelled far and wide denouncing all who advocated the lowering of the tariff. Yet his best boast today for the government was that they have lowered the tariff and cut it down to 14 p. c. He told us of all the gigantic disadvantages of having the tariff so low, of the adverse trade balance and of the immense amount of goods in competition with us. The only thing to do according to Mr. McClenaghan, was to keep the Conservative government in power. But did he tell us why all these things had not been remedied since the Conservatives came into power in 1911, and why they were allowed to take place? What was the sense of leaving it off until after the election in December? Why wasn't it done six months ago, a year ago? If keeping the tariff wall up would have cured all our evils, why did they not do it in all the time they were in power? Yet their greatest boast is that they lowered the tariff. It was a terrible thing that the Fordney Bill should have been brought into force, and yet it was in 1911 that Sir Wilfrid Laurier negotiated a treaty by which we would have free trade, and it was by this government that he was defeated. The time was past, said Col. Smith, for all this ranting talk of loyalty and no trade with the Yankees. Canada was too great a country ever to be in danger of stark staring ruin from either the Americans or the Germans. How could the farmers Mr. McClenaghan was speaking to be expected to endorse over the idea of keeping out cheaper agricultural implements. Yet he was so little consistent that his best boast was that the government had reduced the tariff.

The Liberal Party had stood in the past and stood today, not for high protection, not upon free trade, but upon that reasonable measure of tariff that will supply the needs of the country, keeping in consideration the need of protecting our manufacturers. There had been no proposition of abolishing the tariff, as it would mean direct taxation, an impossible measure.

Col. Smith spoke of the tremendous increase in the cost of administration, of the huge prices paid for the railroads, and of the many useless lines of railway throughout this country. He spoke also of the mismanagement of the funds given over to re-establishing the soldiers. We owed them everything we could give, but the money was being grossly mismanaged.

We heard a lot of Sir Lomer Gouin going into politics, involved with money interests in Quebec, he said, of the great menace to the people of Canada. Yet we knew what Gouin had done for Quebec. It is by far the foremost province in Canada today.

Col. Smith gave a short history of Mr. Chevrier's career in Cornwall, showing him a man in whom his town had every confidence, and who had a sound sense of management of public affairs. In closing, he appealed to the people to give their best consideration to their vote, that it might be for the interests of our common country.

Mr. Kennedy was now given his ten minutes to reply, and stated his pleasure in the spirit of friendliness shown throughout the meeting. Especially was he glad to hear Gen. Hervey join in with him concerning campaign funds. The General had said that a law existed against these funds, but that it could not be enforced. But the names of the con-

Aux Electeurs de Glengarry-Stormont

Le six décembre on vous demandera de faire une décision qui aura nécessairement une influence profonde sur l'avenir et sur la prospérité de ces comtés et du pays entier. Je sais que vous vous intéressez d'une manière toute particulière à toutes les questions du jour, que vous avez à cœur les intérêts de notre pays, et que vous voulez décider cette question importante d'une manière à assurer le progrès régulier de notre démocratie et de la prospérité et du bonheur de notre peuple. Je désire, alors, vous faire un appel personnel afin de vous expliquer avec justice les questions qui se luttent et vous aider à décider correctement.

Il y a alors trois partis qui demandent vos suffrages—le parti Libéral-Conservateur National, le parti Libéral et le parti Progressif. Le premier que je viens de mentionner qui a comme candidat M. le Brig. Gen. Hervey, prétend qu'il est le successeur direct de l'ancien parti Conservateur de Sir John A. Macdonald et de Sir George Etienne Cartier. Ils font leur appel aux traditions et aux sentiments de l'ancien parti Conservateur; mais ils ne suivent pas les principes de ce parti-là. Ils ont absolument renversé le cri de bataille de Sir John A. Macdonald: "qu'il fallait la réciprocité dans les tarifs si l'on voulait la réciprocité dans le commerce." Ils ont refusé d'accepter le principe de la "réciprocité du commerce avec les États Unis" à l'accomplissement de laquelle Sir John a dévoué sa carrière entière. Ils ont abandonné aussi un autre des premiers principes de l'ancienne plateforme nationale adoptés par cet homme d'état éminent "qu'aussitôt que nos institutions industrielles prendraient de la force, et pourraient contrôler de plus en plus le marché local, aussitôt qu'ils commenceraient à se combiner et se faire une clientèle à l'étranger, alors il serait temps de réduire et d'ajuster le tarif." Ces conditions se sont remplies il y a longtemps mais au lieu de réduire le tarif et ainsi de réduire le coût de la vie, ils se sont soumis aux demandes des intérêts protégés et ont actuellement augmenté les barrières du tarif. Suivant les paroles de M. Meighen lui-même, en opposition, ils permettent à la protection de prendre l'épouvante. Ils sont devenus les esclaves de ceux qui les ont placés au pouvoir et qui les gardent là derrière des ramparts dorés.

Mesdames et messieurs les électeurs, ne vous laissez pas aveugler par leur appel partisan. Ils ont déjà abandonné beaucoup des traditions et des principes qui étaient autrefois la gloire de leur parti, et ils ne sont plus dignes de votre confiance.

Il y a aussi le parti Libéral représenté ici par M. J. E. Chevrier. Ils prétendent qu'ils sont les successeurs naturels du parti Libéral de Sir Wilfrid Laurier, et ils vous demandent de supporter les traditions et le tarif de Laurier. Malheureusement leurs paroles et leurs actions ne corroborent pas leurs prétentions qu'ils veulent maintenir les principes du parti Libéral tels que le pays les comprend, et tels que leur plateforme les annonce. Il est vrai cependant que M. King base son appel sur les traditions de Laurier, mais Sir Lomer Gouin, et MM. Leuieux, Fielding et Mitchell, qui dominent aujourd'hui le parti Libéral ne demandent pas les traditions de Laurier mais le tarif de Laurier. Considérons maintenant la différence entre ces deux appels. La tradition de Laurier était de réduire graduellement le fardeau du tarif sous lequel notre peuple gémissait et d'obtenir la réciprocité avec les États Unis. Il a essayé plusieurs fois d'obtenir ceci, mais il a jusqu'à un certain point été repoussé chaque fois, et quand il a réussi à obtenir la réciprocité en 1911, un objet tant désiré, recherché par lui-même et par Sir John A. Macdonald, une grande partie de ses amis supporteurs l'ont abandonné et il a subi une grande défaite politique plutôt que de sacrifier ses principes. Laurier n'a pas réussi à obtenir pour le Canada ce tarif avantageux, parce que les Grands Intérêts de Toronto et de Montréal l'ont rejeté, et son tarif était alors quand il a laissé un tarif de Protection. Voici pourquoi on demande aujourd'hui le tarif de Laurier, la demande des alliés des Grands Intérêts qui sont protectionnistes, et qui se servent du nom de ce diplomate éminent afin d'aveugler les électeurs, quoiqu'ils soient eux-mêmes opposés à ses principes commerciaux.

Ces hommes-ci ont déjà depuis longtemps abandonné les principes et les promesses du parti Libéral; ils ne méritent pas votre confiance, parce qu'ils sont devenus les serviteurs des capitalistes qui leur aideront à retourner au pouvoir en fournissant les fonds nécessaires pour faire la lutte électorale.

Ces deux partis sont supportés par les Capitalistes du pays et après cette élection ils se réuniront probablement afin de nous gouverner. Une alliance de ce genre répugnera sans doute aux fidèles des deux partis, mais cependant si les Capitalistes l'ordonnent ils ne pourront agir autrement.

Mais il y a aussi un troisième parti qui demande vos suffrages, un nouveau parti dans la vie publique du Canada. C'est la voix du peuple exigeant leurs droits et leur indépendance de la domination partisane. Voici un parti de l'amour du droit et de la justice qui caractérise le peuple Canadien; un parti qui prend ses forces parmi les citoyens ordinaires, les journaliers, les cultivateurs, les hommes d'affaires de nos villages et de nos petites villes, parmi les hommes et les femmes de profession qui travaillent à salaire; un parti qui veut dire: "droits égaux à tous et pas de privilèges spéciaux à personne." Ce parti aimerait à purger notre vie publique de l'influence banale des contributions secrètes aux fonds électoraux, il tacherait de réduire le tarif ou il est aujourd'hui bien que trop haut, afin de réduire en même temps le coût de la vie, il voudrait un tarif tout simplement pour nous fournir un revenu, et il exigerait que chaque demande pour un tarif protectionniste soit considérée publiquement par un comité du Parlement. Il passerait des lois afin d'obliger aux combines ayant un capital trop élevé de réduire leur capitale pour le bénéfice de ceux qui se servent de leurs produits et pour la protection des actionnaires. Il désire une administration propre et prudente des affaires de notre pays, et l'abolition du patronage partisan. Il aimerait à sauver notre peuple du danger d'une presse contrôlée par les Capitalistes, en faisant publier le nom de tous les propriétaires de nos journaux et de nos revues. Il voudrait bien rendre notre parlement plus sujet au peuple et plus représentatif de l'esprit du peuple, en étudiant la question de la représentation proportionnelle.

Mesdames et messieurs les électeurs, le parti progressif vous appartient, et son ambition est de vous donner une meilleure chance de contribuer au développement de nos institutions démocratiques. Nous vous invitons de vous joindre au parti Progressif, d'encourager cette bonne oeuvre, et d'essayer avec nous d'obtenir parmi vous le peuple, l'union et le contentement qui sont les seuls garants de la grandeur nationale et les seuls mesures de la prospérité d'un pays. Si vous voulez voter pour moi le 6 décembre, je ferai mon possible afin de vous aider à obtenir ces bonheurs et ces avantages pour notre pays bien aimé—le Canada.

Votre Fidèle Serviteur,

J. WILFRID KENNEDY

Give the Farmer A Square Deal

We are repeatedly told that Canada's credit must depend chiefly on agricultural production.

If our Government is really desirous of stimulating the production of food all they have to do is to extend to the farmers the same encouragement they have extended to others.

We have stimulated the manufacturers by a protective policy that has enabled them to obtain prices fifty per cent. above the real value of their products, and giving them free raw material, or by refunding the duty they pay on raw material.

We have stimulated the big publishers by exempting their presses and type-setting machines from taxation, even the war tax.

We have stimulated our railway magnates by giving them subsidies to the amount of a billion dollars, and then practically tax exemption.

We have stimulated our many bankers by allowing the people only three per cent. interest on their savings, while we pay some Jew in Europe or New York five and six per cent. on Government loans.

On the other hand we have taken the very lifeblood out of the farmer by excessive taxation for the benefit of the combines, and then further handicapped him by making him carry the burdens that the privileged classes have escaped.

Now, suppose we try the plan of stimulating the farmer by placing him on something like an equal footing with those in other occupations. Put all his implements on the free list, (he won't ask to be exempt from the war tax); secure for him fair transportation, under his market outlet and relieve him from the payment of the taxes which the railway and other corporations should pay.

In a word, give the farmer a square deal. When it is made profitable to increase production there will be no trouble about the increase.—Forest Free Press.

"Crude Inexperienced Farmers"

The Tory organs and newspapers never tire in abjuring their own slogan of the campaign of 1911. It was "No truck or trade with the Yankees." They cannot get away from it. They also deny Mr. Meighen's appellation of Bolshevism against the agriculturists. But the farming community will not be deceived by the pseudo protestations. Not satisfied with such things, a leading Conservative woman in Toronto has addressed a letter to other Conservative women in which she says that "Crude and inexperienced farmers are not to govern the upper classes." The Farmers' Sun was sent a copy of the letter and verifies its authenticity. Here is the letter:

"Dear Madam,—In this crisis of our country where vital issues are at stake, my services have been requisitioned by the Conservative party in an effort to bring out the leading Conservative women of Toronto. Personally I call them 'Conservative women of the upper, educated class,' and by that is meant women of refinement and cultivation, who still count for so much in the community.

"The coming election, so far as the future of our country is concerned, is as serious as the war. Women of the upper class cannot afford to stand still.

"A series of drawing room meetings, in the interests of the Conservative party, is being arranged all over the city. If a number of women or men and women, can be brought together in a drawing-room meeting, a good speaker, a gentleman either from Ottawa, or Toronto, will be glad to address them. A good woman speaker will be sent to address any group of women."

"I beg to remind you that press notices of these meetings will put energy and vitality into the women of Ontario throughout the province. It is not our intention to be governed by a group of crude, inexperienced farmers.

"If you will be kind enough to consider the situation and consent to invite your own friends to a drawing room meeting, you will arouse great interest among women of your own class, whose influence; at the present moment, is very much needed. May I beg the favor of an answer at your earliest convenience? "Yours very truly,"

Evidently the writer of the foregoing has followed the cue of the Tory leaders in defaming the farmers, men and women. Such language and such a conception of high-browism will be resented by the electors. The Liberal party is not restricted to the "drawing-room class," it is the party of the people. There is no class distinction among Liberals. They form the party of all the people.—Brookville Recorder Times.

In The Political Melting Pot

The farmers have decided that it is about time to wear those "infant" industries which they have been supporting for forty years.

Two hundred thousand people are out of employment in Canada today, largely due to the lack of confidence in the Government.

The Western farmer, who is getting only 70 cents a bushel for his wheat, cannot be blamed for asking manufacturers of all he requires to share also in the decline of prices.

Well, if the Meighen Government wants to take credit for the present condition of the country, let it go ahead and help itself to any it sees being around loose, says the Winnipeg Free Press.

The Toronto Globe makes the interesting query: "Does the Meighen Government accept promissory notes for its election campaign fund, or only for the payment of taxes?"

Meighen still continues to narrow the fight to the tariff, leaving out the railway deficits, the loans to Greece and Rumania, and the millions paid to Mackenzie and Mann for worthless scrip.

In the long run we find that we can only sell to other countries as we buy from them. If every country produced everything it used there would be an end of commerce.—Owen Sound Sun-Times.

If the manufacturers of Canada are as enterprising and capable as they claim to be why are they continually clamouring for public aid? It is all right to extend charity to the deserving needy, but it is hardly fair to keep a lot of wealthy manufacturers on the list.

The Government campaign sheet says: "Vote for Meighen and work at home, or vote for King and Crear and pack your trunk for Buffalo." The Toronto Telegram, one of the Government's strong supporters, says that in ten years $19,000 Canadians have packed their trunks for the United States.

If a 7½ per cent. tariff (according to Mr. Guthrie) is enough for the implement men, why give 30 to 40 per cent. to other manufacturers? Taking exchange into consideration, the protection, on some goods is at least 50 per cent. Isn't there room for reduction?—Godrich Signal.

Parliamentary candidates and others who are so eloquently pleading with the electors of Glengarry-Stormont to buy only made-in-Canada goods, drive to their meetings in autos imported from the United States. It is all right for the specially privileged classes to buy in the States, but the common people must buy at home, or the equity will go to ruin. What a farce!

The Canadian Ford Company is engaged extensively in the export of the cars made at Ford City. This export business brings the Canadian Ford Company in competition with other automobile makers in the countries of the world where it has no advantage from the Canadian tariff and where it must make its prices to compete with other automobile manufacturers, including the American Ford Company, as it is not compelled to do in Canada, thanks to our tariff. In other words, Canada is being taxed in order that Europe and Asia and Africa and Australia may get Canadian Ford automobiles as cheaply as they can be bought from the Ford Company in Detroit, and more cheaply than they can be bought in Canada and to that extent the effect is to make other countries cheaper places to live in than Canada.

J. E. Chevrier Announces Candidacy

To the Electors of Glengarry-Stormont:—

In accepting the unanimous nomination tendered me by the Liberal Convention in Alexandria on November 10th, to contest the Federal constituency of Glengarry-Stormont in the interests of the Liberal Party in the present election I wish to heartily thank the delegates for the great honor they have shown me. Particularly am I gratified because this splendid honor came to me unsought and unsolicited.

The unprecedented enthusiasm displayed by the delegates and the spontaneous and whole-hearted support promised me by the rank and file of the Liberal Party of Glengarry-Stormont since my selection have fired in me a fighting faith to believe that as your standard-bearer and with your undivided loyalty and support I shall be returned at the head of the polls on December 6th next.

The grand old party of Laurier and Mowat, is not, as has been intimated, dead in this riding. On the contrary the Liberal Party was never more alive and fighting than it is to-day. The Liberal Party to-day is fighting against the Old Toryism as represented by the Conservative Party, and against the new Toryism as represented by the Progressive Party. The Liberal Party strong in the faith of Liberalism, united by high ideals, and inspired and unswerving in its principles and policies shall not yield to class movements or historic enemies. The Liberal Party presents a solid and united front against the common enemy. I have been promised the support of all classes of the community and I believe the outcome of the election is assured.

I am indeed proud to have been selected as your candidate. My policies and platform I hope to present to your considered judgement during the campaign. We enter this contest full of hope for success and undaunted by all obstacles. I, as your candidate, call on all loyal Liberals throughout the constituency to organize, to work, to vote. The fight is yours. The victory is yours if you will but do your part. Be assured that as your candidate and realizing to the full my duty to the Liberal Party and the Federal riding of Glengarry-Stormont no effort will be spared on my part, no stone left unturned, no time lost in winning a glorious victory for Liberalism and my Chief, the Hon. Wm. Lyon McKenzie King.

Politics For Women

(Toronto Sunday World)
Canadian women have the vote in the Dominion election this time on the same terms as the men. Most of them have not taken much interest in political questions and their questions in trying to elucidate party platforms, "interpretations," "reservations," the intricacies of the National Railway issue, etc., will put their menfolk in mind of the queries asked by sweet young things at baseball games.

Indeed, the attempt to initiate the mass of women into the mysteries of politics will furnish a comedy side to the campaign. We observe the Woodstock Sentinel Review editor already at it. He says that "it may be that ladies, who are beginners in the study of party politics, will have some difficulty in arriving at an intelligent understanding of the issues involved." Then he proceeds to quote the various platforms, and endeavors to explain what they mean. The effort he makes to be fair is obvious—no gentleman would seek to deceive the ladies. When he comes to the Liberal fiscal platform in particular, the extremely uncertain nature of it as modified by the party leaders in their speeches, makes his explanation somewhat ludicrous. However, a mystery always attracts. The ladies know it better than anyone else—for their chief weapon is mystery. And thus politics may be quite interesting to them.

We can imagine some confident young beau taking his girl to a campaign meeting. The speaker will be gin, like the late Sir Sam Hughes often did, by declaring that he would rather have a wave from a lady's handkerchief than ten thousand waves from the ocean. "I prefer Marcelle waves, myself," she murmurs. Then the speaker says "I shall attempt only a brief speech. 'In fact, I shall only skirt the issues just now.' 'Goody, Goody,' she exclaims. 'His speech is going to be very short.' Then the speaker loudly demands: 'Shall we not have 'free' necessities of life?' 'Sure,' she says, 'I pay far too much now for my silk stockings, my pumps (agricultural implements), my lingerie, and even my powder (mining material). Is that man going to give us all these things 'free?' she gasps. 'Then I vote for him.'

Truly many a man is going to be forced into getting some knowledge of the campaign issues in order not to expose his ignorance to his wife.

Chopped Stuff

The cost of transportation to the average market is about double the price received by the U. S. producer of feed corn this season. Provide the poultry with plenty of green feed in the form of sprouted oats, mangels, cabbage, pumpkins, clover chaff, etc.

With the commencement of cold weather the amount of corn in the poultry grain ration may be increased gradually up to 60 per cent. Get all the spare poultry down out of the trees at night and shut them in their own quarters until they become agreeable to stay there.

A Duroc-Jersey sow in Kansas has farrowed 154 pigs in four years or eight litters averaging 19½ pigs, ranging from 14 to 23 in number.

Seventy-five per cent. of all the hogs purchased by Canadian packers are fit for export, but only a small proportion of them would sell as No. 1 bacon.

In cutting out the fuel supply this winter, where possible use only those trees which have matured or whose growth is hindering the development of more valuable species.

De Laval cream makes the best butter

WHETHER you make butter yourself or sell butter-fat to a creamery, the value of your cream depends largely on the kind of butter it will make.

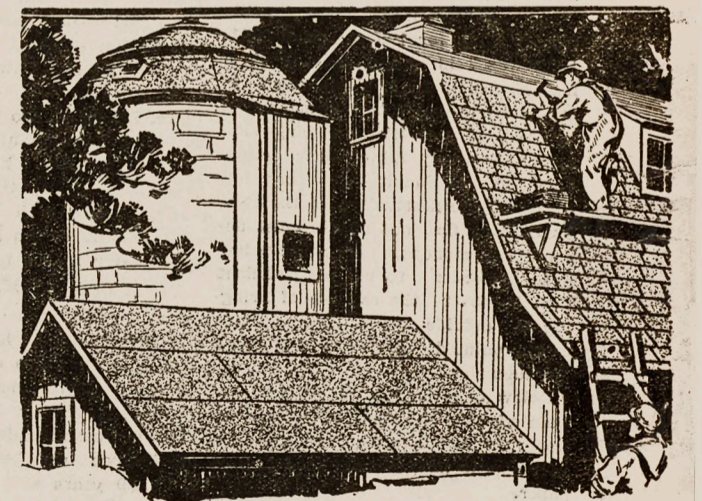

It is easy to prove that De Laval cream makes better butter. Every first prize awarded at the Convention of the National Buttermakers' Association since it was started twenty-eight years ago, has gone to butter made by De Laval users, or from gathered cream largely De Laval-separated.

The De Laval Separator is more sanitary; its bowl runs at lower speed and delivers the butter-fat globules unbroken. It is used in practically all of the world's creameries, because it gives not only more cream but better cream as well. And the fact that the De Laval runs at lower speed adds years to its life.

Let us demonstrate to you why the De Laval is the World's Standard Cream Separator

A New Cheese Originated At Central Experimental Farm

(Experimental Farms Note)

A new, medium high flavour cheese has been originated by the Animal Husbandry Division of the Dominion Experimental Farms System. It is called "Meilleur Cheese," or Le Fromage Meilleur, and is being manufactured at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. The process of manufacture is, briefly, as follows: The milk is heated to a temperature of 90 degrees F. when it is renneted and cut. The curds are then cooked at a temperature of 115 degrees F., and afterwards moulded and pressed, in one and three pound sizes, ready for the curing room. The process of curing is one of the most important features in the successful manufacture of this high class product.

This new cheese possesses a very pleasing and delicate flavour with no objectionable odour, and has been pronounced a very superior product by the numerous experts and connoisseurs by whom it has been tried. It is a distinct and valuable acquisition to the cheese industry and the present indications are that it will meet with a very popular demand.

The Illustration Station and its Relation to the Farm

(Experimental Farms Note)

The Division of Illustration Stations is a branch of the Dominion Experimental Farms, direct to the effect of this Division is to carry results and information gained on the Experimental Farms, direct to the farmer. These Stations were started in the year 1914, at twenty-two different points, in Alberta and Saskatchewan. By 1921 eighty-eight Stations were in operation, including a keen interest to be taken by Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick.

The farms on which the Illustration Stations are located, are owned by the private farmer, thereby causing a keen interest to be taken by the neighbors, which naturally develops into considerable rivalry.

The general scheme of co-operation between the Department and the farmer is as follows:

The planning and carrying on of a suitable systematic rotation of crops for the Station, and its neighborhood.

The sowing of varieties and strains of grain suitable to the soil and district.

Different rates per acre to ascertain the most suitable rate of seeding.

The sowing of different amounts of clovers and grass seed.

Testing home grown seed vs purchased seed.

The sowing of mixed crop for summer pastures.

The introduction and use of labor-saving devices and up to date machinery.

The practicing of after-harvest cultivation, to kill weeds and insects, conserve moisture, and increase yields.

The care and economy of barnyard manure.

The encouragement of a good farm garden.

To encourage the raising of pure-bred poultry, proper feeding, and housing.

In the Eastern Provinces many meadows and pastures are left down too long and when renewed, too often the soil is poorly prepared and not enough clover and grass seed is sown.

The example given by the Illustration Station is noticeable.

Part of the field is sown with about the same amount of seed as is usually sown in the district, and the other part is seeded with a heavy mixture, making such a contrast, that the farmers stop to make enquiries as to the cause of the difference in yield.

SELECTED SEED

One of the principal objects of the work is to grow good seed in large quantities so that farmers will have an opportunity to purchase, at reasonable prices. On several Stations, a special line of work is the growing of pure seed. The varieties chosen for the Illustration Stations are those that have been grown for a number of years on the nearest Experimental Farm, and have proven suitable for that particular district.

AFTER HARVEST CULTIVATION

Weeds in some sections are taking possession of the land, and to eradicate them, after harvest cultivation along with hoe crops must be practiced. After harvest cultivation destroys weeds, and insects; sod surfaces are made available for plant food, moisture conserved, and the

The fourth of the new houses Mr. A. J. McEwen is erecting on Peter street is fast nearing completion.

On Wednesday evening the members of the Presbyterian church choir had a sleigh drive to the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McIntosh, Dominionville.

Keep in mind the date of the Christmas entertainment in the Presbyterian church, Monday, 26th December.

Mr. Charles R. Sinclair who spent the past few months with his son at Mecheche, Alta., returned home on Friday.

Regret is felt at the serious illness of the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, Mechanic street.

Mr. A. Gordon Macdonald, of Halcyon, spent a few hours in town on Sunday, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Villeneuve.

Miss Margaret Macdonell, of Alexandria, paid our town a visit on Monday.

Practically the last of our lads have arrived home from the West in the persons of Messrs Harold Blaney, Leonard Urquhart, John Urquhart, Peter Lobb and Lorne Frith.

Mr. Geo. D. Barrett has purchased Mr. Charles Julien's residence on Marlborough street, the latter will enter business in Moose Creek.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute will be held on Saturday afternoon.

As the Institute Hall here, will be occupied on Saturday evening, by a political gathering all exchanges of books will have to be made that afternoon.

Dr. James T. and Mrs. Munro had a very pleasant surprise on Saturday when they had an unexpected visit from their son John who is now a prominent lawyer of Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Munro whose last visit home was made twenty years ago was in New York on legal business and took advantage of his presence in the east to spend the week end at his old home, where he received a cordial welcome from his many old friends. He left on Monday afternoon for his Western home and was accompanied as far as Montreal by his father and mother.

MacDERMID—MacLENNAN
A pretty wedding was solemnized on Thursday, Nov. 17th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John J. MacDermid, Maxville, when their youngest daughter, Alberta became the bride of Mr. William J. MacLennan, Watertown, N.Y. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. H. Stewart, B.A., of Maxville. The bride was attended by her sister, Cassie, the groom being ably supported by Mr. John R. Urquhart. After dinner was served, the happy couple left on the evening train for New York city, and other eastern points. The bride travelled in a sand serge suit, with a flesh colored georgette waist, a hat to match, and brown wolf fur. Congratulations.

The first meeting of the Maxville Hockey Club for the season of 1921-1922 was held on Wednesday evening, November 16th. This branch of our many sports was very successful in the past year both in being victorious in nearly all of their games and also in financial standing but owing to the destruction of the Public Hall by fire, one of the most depended on money-making schemes has gone. In order to raise a sufficient sum to cover the expense of bringing in outside teams a committee was appointed to canvas the town for subscriptions.

Below is a list of the officers appointed with the exception of the honorary members, a list of which will appear in the next issue of this paper.

H. Tracey, President, W. H. Sparham, Treasurer, D. J. Kippen, Sec'y, B. Villeneuve, Playing Manager, T. H. Merkle, Captain, W. S. McLean, Official Referee, Gordon Stewart, Asst. Referee, A. E. St. Elmo
A very interesting and profitable meeting was held as a Thanksgiving Festival at Gordon church. The supper was in the Literary Hall, the meeting in the church and both were well attended. The addresses as well as the musical numbers were all contributed by members of the community. Mr. W. E. Arkinstall gave an address on "The Church and Family Life", Mr. W. E. McKillican on "The Church and Evangelism", Mrs. Peter McGregor, on "The Church and Missions" and Mr. Allan Macdonald on "The Church and the Young People". In the addresses there was a judicious mixture of the grave and the gay with much good sober wisdom. They were all of a high quality and gave abundant evidence that a purely rural church has all the latest ability to supply all its own talent for any public occasion.

The St. Elmo Literary Society held its regular meeting last week when the programme consisted of a Mock Trial a highly respected young man of the locality being charged with the grave offence of stealing apples from one of the far famed orchards of the country. After counsel had done their part to prove the accused both guilty and innocent there was proved that the law has still its old time delay and the judge adorned the case without giving the jury an opportunity to retire for their deliberations.

It has been decided to have the usual Christmas Tree entertainment on Friday, December 23rd and the children are already busy preparing their contribution to the general delight; their attention is being given to the study of a cantata entitled "Santa's Surprise".

Miss Margaret Laurie of the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal is a guest at the Manse.

News reached the Manse that the projected visit of Rev. C. W. Gordon D.D. has been cancelled as have all his engagements within the Synod of Montreal and Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Barkley and family of Avonmore, Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ferguson.

Messrs R. J. Kennedy, J. A. McDonald and Dan A. McDonald of Greenfield, W. G. Cleary, Harrison's Corners, Peter Chisholm and Alex. Chisholm, of Lochiel, were among the visitors to town on Saturday.

Mrs. Bam Grant had as her guests over the week end, her son-in-law Mr. P. J. Nolan and his mother, Mrs. Nolan of Maniwaki, Que., also her nephew, Mr. Lawrence McDonald of Glen Roy.

Mrs. M. A. Munro left on Monday to spend a few months of well earned holidays with her sister, Mrs. Simpkins of Bay City, Mich. Her many friends wish her a pleasant visit and hope to have her home again early in the new year.

MRS. DONALD K. McLENNAN
The many friends of Mrs. Donald Kenneth McLennan heard with regret of her death which occurred at the home of Mr. Thomas Carlyle on Sunday, November 13th. Mrs. McLennan whose maiden name was Annie Munroe was born at Munroe's Mills, 89 years ago and lived all her life in that vicinity. Her husband Donald K. McLennan who predeceased her by twenty five years was proprietor of the Munroe's Mills lumber and grist mills for a number of years. She was a sister of the late Malcolm (Mack) Munroe and is survived by three brothers, Thomas Munroe, Kenosha, Wis., and John and Angus Kennedy, half brothers of Spokane, Wash., also two sisters, Mrs. Catherine McDonald, Wyebridge, Ont., and Mrs. Sarah McLennan (half sister) of Apple Hill.

The late Mrs. McLennan had a genial disposition and had many friends throughout the county. Although unable to attend the local Red Cross, she always took an active interest in it and knitted over a hundred pairs of socks.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon from Zion Church to the North Branch cemetery, service being conducted by her pastor Rev. J.

S. McIlraith. The pallbearers were Messrs John Munroe, Ben Munroe, Donald Stewart, Hugh Campbell, John C. Campbell and George Munroe. Those present from a distance were Miss Donald Carlyle, Sherbrooke, Que., Miss Margaret Munroe and Mrs. Christina McDonald, Montreal and Mr. Thos. McLennan, Eamer's Corners.

Sandringham
MRS. R. C. MCGREGOR
At her home Sandringham, Ont., on Sunday, Nov. 13th, 1921, peacefully and patiently as she had lived, there passed away Elizabeth Kennedy, widow of the late Robert C. MacGregor, sickness having developed from an accidental fall, six weeks previous. Deceased who was the eldest daughter of the late David Kennedy of Vernon, Ont., was born in Old Rattary Perthshire Scotland on the 12th Oct. 1847. When seven years of age she along with her parents came to Canada settling in the Township of Osgoode. Prior to her marriage, she, with marked success, taught school at Vernon, Mountain and Billing's Bridge and was a thorough scholar of "The Old School".

The late Mrs. MacGregor was a faithful member of the Presbyterian church, taking an active part in all branches of church work until failing health prevented her. The funeral which took place from her late residence on Wednesday, 16th at 2 P.M. to St. Elmo church and cemetery was conducted by her pastor Rev. G. Watt Smith assisted by Rev. J. H. Stewart of Maxville and was largely attended, the service throughout being pre-arranged by deceased. During the service Malcolm MacGregor late of Moose Jaw, Sask., sang sweetly "Blessed Assurance". Today her four children, who survive, mourn the loss of a fond mother, Burns and Maud at home, Mrs. J. R. Sprout and Mrs. Norman Stewart of Maxville, also six grand-children, two of whom are with their father Arthur Baylis in England and are at present attending school there, also one brother, James W. Kennedy and three sisters, Mrs. James York and Mrs. Peter Crozier all of Vernon, Ont., and Mrs. John Angus of Thurso, Que. The pallbearers were J. J. Campbell, Athol, John M. MacGregor, Dan W. MacGregor, Dan A. MacGregor, Alex MacGregor of this place and Duncan A. Cameron, Finch. Friends from a distance who attended the funeral were Mrs. John Angus Thurso (sister), Mrs. D. M. MacDougall, Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan A. Cameron, Finch and Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacGregor, Avonmore, her brother James W. Kennedy arriving that evening too late for the funeral on account of an accident on the way.

Athol
The Cottage Prayer Meetings are again being held in this vicinity this year. The first meeting was held on Monday night at the home of Mr. D. D. MacGregor.

The chicken supper held at St. Elmo on Tuesday was voted a great success by all those who had the pleasure of attending.

The funeral of the late Mrs. R. C. MacGregor passed through our hamlet en route to the St. Elmo cemetery and was followed by a large number of carriages.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McPhail were the guests of the Misses Aird last week.

Mr. Norman Campbell had the misfortune of having his finger jammed at the Borden plant but under the skillful treatment of Dr. McDiarmid we are glad to report the injured member is doing nicely.

Mrs. W. Campbell spent Sunday afternoon with Sandringham friends.

We are pleased to state that Mrs. W. T. Arkinstall who was on the sick list is able to be around again.

Mr. W. Vallie spent part of last week helping Mr. Arkinstall prepare for the coming cold weather.

Instead of the tractor's hum we now hear the crosscut saw as Mr. Andrew Fisher has men cutting all the trees on the roadside converting what were once beautiful shade trees into firewood.

Mr. John Urquhart and daughter called on citizens of this place in the interests of the Freeholder. We understand his daughter comes second in the contest.

Mr. Coleman and family have moved back to, Moose Creek for the winter.

Mrs. J. Woods, dressmaker, is prepared to receive customers. If in need of having sewing done, give her a call.

Getting Ready

The Store of The Christmas Spirit.

We are busy opening up and getting things in readiness for our Christmas Opening, advice of which will be given later.

Useful articles will be featured largely and we hope to have a worthy display. The children haven't been forgotten either, and Santa Claus is to be with us again this season.

Santa's Christmasgram
No. 2

My dear children: Baby Bunny, Pouting Pete and Smiling Sue, are making such a racket that I can't hear myself think. They are shouting at the top of their voices:

"The man in the moon came tumbling down
And asked the way to Norwich
He went to the South and burnt his mouth
With supping cold Pease Porridge."

Crazy eh? but they must let off steam some way. They're so delighted because I've promised to take them and Ducky Webfoot, and Bruin Bear, and Kitty Cat, and Jane Carrots, and Little Betty Blue, with me to your town—IF I HAVE ROOM—But blast me! I'm afraid I've got myself into trouble, as they might break all the toys. However, we'll see. Am sending you some of the loveliest picture books telling all about them. Will soon be leaving, so keep your little peepers and ears open. More later.

WHICH?

HERVEY of Montreal - Conservative -

Represents a defeated candidate and a defeated Conservative Government--Placed in the field at the eleventh hour to save the face of the Ottawa Administration and leading a lost cause and a discredited Party. His selection at the Conservative Convention upset the plans of local Conservatives to nominate a cut-and-dried candidate.

A Vote for Hervey is a vote thrown away

KENNEDY of Apple Hill - Progressive -

Represents class or group government and advocates policy of Free Trade which would destroy Canada's industrial and economic structure---A political theorist following in the footsteps of Crerar---the visionary---who in turn is dictated to by Wood, the American political boss of Alberta.

A Vote for Kennedy is a vote for Chaos.

CHEVRIER of Cornwall - Liberal -

Represents all that Sir Wilfred Laurier and the Grand Old Liberal party have always stood for. Successful in business, loyal in his Liberalism, courageous in his convictions, and upright in character---Believes in a fair deal for the farmer and a loyal friend of the workingman.

A Vote for Chevrier is a vote for the return of the Liberal Party to Power and Nationwide Prosperity.

Glengarry-Stormont Needs Chevrier.

PREVENTS THAT SINKING FEELING

THE MYSTERY OF THE GREEN RAY

By William Le Queux

CHAPTER I.—(Cont'd.)

"Still," said Dennis, "you've got a thundering lot to be thankful for too. To begin with, she'll wait for you, and then, if necessary, marry on two-pence-halfpenny a year, and make you comfortable on it, too. As far as her father is concerned, she's very devoted to him, and would never do anything to annoy him if she could possibly help it, as I easily spotted the night we dined with them at the Carlton. But she's made up her mind to be Mrs. Ronald Ewart sooner or later; that I will swear!"

"I'm very glad to hear you say so," I answered, "but the thing that worries me, of course, is the question as to whether I have any right to let this go on. If war is declared—"

"Which it will be," said Dennis. "Well, then, my practice goes to the devil as you say. How long after the war is it going to be before I could marry one of Myra's maids, let alone Myra? And, supposing, of course, that I use the return half of my ticket, so to speak, and come back safe and sound, my own prospects will be infinitely worse than they were before the war. The law, after all, is a luxury, and no one will have a great deal of money for luxuries by the time we have finished with it and wiped Germany off the map. Besides, if there's no money about there's nothing to go to law over. So there you are, or rather, there I am."

"What do you intend to do, then?" my friend asked. "I shall go up to Scotland to-morrow night—well, of course, it's to-night, I should say—and see her—and—"

"Yes—well, and—"
"Oh, and tell her that it must be all over. I shall say that the war will make all the difference, that I must join the army, and that she must consider herself free to marry someone else, and that, as in any case I might never come back, I think it's the best thing for us both that she should consider herself free," I ended weakly.

"Just like that?" asked Dennis, with a twinkle in his eye. "I shall try and put it fairly formally to her," I said, "because, of course, I must appear to be sincere about it. I must try and think out some way of making her imagine I want it broken off for reasons of my own."

Dennis laughed softly. "You delicious, egotistical idiot," he said. "You don't really imagine that you could persuade anyone you met for the first time even that you're not in love. By all means do what you think is right, Ron. I wouldn't dissuade you for the world. Tell her that she is free. Tell her why you are setting her free, and I'll be willing to wager my little all that you two ridiculous young people will find yourselves tied tighter together than ever. By all means do your best to be a good boy, Ronald, and do what you conceive to be your duty."

"You needn't pull my leg about it," I said, though somewhat half-heartedly. "I'm not pulling your leg, as you put it," Dennis answered, in a more serious tone. "If ever I saw honesty and truth and love and loyalty looking out of a girl's eyes, that girl is Myra McLeod."

"Thank you for that, Den," I answered simply. There was little sentiment between us. Thank heaven, there was something more. "And so you see, you lucky dog, you'll go out to the front, and come back loaded with honors and blushes, and marry the girl of your dreams, and live happy ever after." And Dennis sighed.

"Why the sigh?" I asked. "Oh, come now," I added, suddenly remembering. "Fair exchange, you know. You haven't told me what was worrying you."
"My dear old fellow, don't be ridiculous; there's nothing worrying me." I pressed him to no purpose. He refused to admit that he had a care in the world, and so we fell to talking of matters connected with the routine of army life, how long we should be before we got to the front, the sport we four should have in our rest time behind the trenches, our determina-future happiness to poor old Dennis's inability to join the army. Truly, as events were to prove, "he did his bit."

CHAPTER II.

The Man Going North.

We "made" Richmond about half-past eleven, and completed the necessary arrangements for the housing of the boats and the disposal of our superfluous fodder, as Jack called it, for by this time we had all made up our minds that the war was inevitable.

The bustle of mobilization had already taken possession of the streets, and as we stepped out of Charing Cross Station we stumbled into a crowd of English Bluejackets and Tommies and French reservists in Villiers Street. We parted for the afternoon, each to attend to his private affairs, and arranged to meet again at the Grand Hotel Grill Room for an early dinner, as I had to catch the 7.55 from King's Cross.

I dashed out to Hampstead to my flat, and packed the necessary wearing apparel, taking care to include my fly-book and my favorite split-cane trout rod in my kit. I should only be in Scotland for a couple of days, but I knew that I should be fishing with Myra at least one of them, and no borrowed rod is a patch on one's own tried favorite. I snatched an half-hour or so to write to the few relatives I have and tell them that I was joining the army after a hurried visit to Scotland to say good-bye to Myra. And then I got my kit to Dennis's rooms in Pantons Street, Haymarket, just in time to have a chat with him before we joined the others at the Grand Hotel. I found him hopefully getting things ready for a long absence, sorting out unanswered letters, putting away papers, etc. On the table was an open copy of a stores catalogue. He had been trying to find suitable presents for his two small step-sisters. Dennis invariably thought of himself last of all, and then usually at someone else's request.

"Well, old man," I asked, "how do you feel about it now?" "Rotten, Ronnie," he replied, with a rueful smile. "I've been on the phone to my silly doctor chap, and he shouted with laughter at me. Still, I shall have a jolly good shot at it as soon as the thing is done."

"I only pray to heaven," I said seriously, "that no slipshod fool of a doctor lets you through." "They won't let me in, old chap; no such luck. It's a ghastly outlook. What on earth am I to do with myself while the war lasts?"

"My dear chap," I exclaimed, "it won't be as bad as all that. There will be thousands of men who won't go to the war. I shan't be surprised if you see very little difference about town when the war's in full swing. You can't go, although you want to, and it's jolly bad luck, old man. Don't think I don't understand, but believe me, you won't be the only man left in London by a million or two."

"I know," he said penitently, "I'm grousing and worrying you. Sorry! But I can see you setting out for the Temple in the morning and leaving your house on fire. It wouldn't make it easier simply because you knew you weren't able to do anything to put out the fire. In fact, it would be a jolly lot worse. Still, we'll cut that and let the subject drop. When you get back from Invermullach give me a look up. I expect I shall be here. And, of course, give my kindest regards to Miss McLeod—oh, and the General," he added, as an afterthought.

One of His Gifts.

A sudden sound of whistling disturbed the air of the class-room, and the strains of "I'm For Ever Blowing Bubbles" floated over forty small heads bent over forty small slates. "Who's that whistling?" screamed the teacher, as soon as she had recovered from her surprise.

"It's just mazel," answered little Jack McGay, with true Scottish imperturbability. "Did ye no kin Ah cud whistle?"

A "Fare" Agreement.

Isaac boarded a bus with his little son Moses. "How much to the Spurs' ground, conductor?" he asked. "Twopence," said the conductor. "And how much for my little boy?" asked Isaac. "There's no need to pay for him," said the conductor.

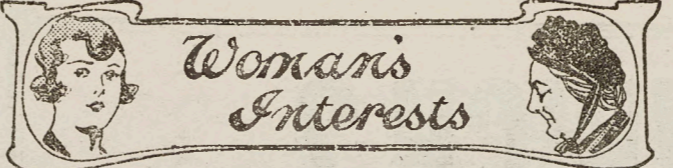

Isaac rubbed his hands. "Sit where you are, Moses," he said. "The conductor will put you down at the Spurs' ground, and I will walk."

Woman's Interests

How to Choose a Becoming Hat.
An expert offers these suggestions to aid women in selecting becoming hats:

A brim which rolls up gently on the right side and down on the left. Whether this is a wide or narrow brim will depend on the face beneath it. A stout woman, generally speaking, must wear a wider brim than the slender one, since width in the brim and height in the crown will tend to overbalance roundness of the face.

The short, slender woman with a small face should almost never wear a hat with a brim averaging more than three to three and a half inches in width.

The long-faced woman, especially if she is tall, should avoid the tall crowned or tall trimmed hat. She may, however, wear a wider brimmed hat than the short, slender woman.

The tall stout woman is often stunning in a large brimmed hat, because her height makes it possible for her to wear a hat which would make the short, stout woman appear grotesque.

Hats with mushroom brims belong entirely to youth. Downward turning lines in the face, are not desirable, and should, therefore, be not emphasized by downward turning lines in brims of hats.

For the person who wears glasses, hard lines and edges in hats should be studiously avoided. An edge may be softened by a bias fold, a ribbon slightly filled, or a band of fur.

A hat with a stiff monotonous edge is not likely to be becoming to many persons especially to those who are no longer young.

The most successful child's hat is the soft, pliable kind which may be pulled down on the head and subjected to more or less rough treatment without very materially injuring its looks and wearing qualities. Stiff, fussy hats have no place in the wardrobe of the child.

For every day wear, a Tam O'Shanter made from old dress skirts, coats, or woolen materials will serve well.

The Palatable Prune.
With the approach of winter the varieties of fresh fruits become fewer and we find ourselves searching for new ways of serving the ever serviceable dried fruits.

Among these fruits, prunes, which are merely a dried plum, lend themselves readily to a variety of attractive dishes. They furnish material for body building and energy, give bulk to the diet (which stimulates the muscular activity of the digestive tract) and supply acids and minerals which tend to counteract the acidity of the blood and body fluids and regulate the body processes.

Prunes are economical and contain considerable nutritive value. They are a splendid substitute for children for candy and sweets because in addition to the high percentage of sugar they contain iron and other minerals useful in diet.

There are three simple processes in cooking prunes: 1. Soaking to restore the water lost in drying. 2. Slow cooking in the water in which soaked until tender, and juice has been soaked up by the fruit. 3. Addition of smallest amount of sugar necessary to sweeten without destroying the natural flavor of the fruit.

The following practical recipes offer a pleasing variety of ways for serving prunes:
Stewed Prunes.—1 lb. prunes, 1 quart water, 1-3 cup sugar, 2 teaspoons lemon juice. Wash the prunes thoroughly; put in clean water and let soak for several hours. Leave the fruit in the water it soaked in, cover and cook slowly until the skins are tender. Add the sugar and lemon juice when almost done.

Prune Whip.—1 cup strained stewed prunes, 3 egg whites, 1-3 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Wash, soak and cook the prunes until soft. Rub through a sieve. Add the sugar and lemon juice to the thick pulp. Beat the egg whites stiff, fold into the prune pulp, place in a buttered baking dish, and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve cold with cream, whipped cream or a custard made from the yolks.

Prune Cake.—1/4 cup butter, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 1/2 cup milk, 1 1/2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Cream the butter, add sugar gradually, and egg well beaten. Sift the flour and add alternately with the milk. Then add the vanilla, and lastly fold in the baking powder, sifted over to top. Pour batter in two greased layer pans, cover top with steamed pitted prunes and sprinkle with nuts. Bake 30 to 40 minutes in a moderate oven. Frost with uncooked frosting or whipped cream.

Paint for Wall Decoration.
The flat wall paints now obtainable afford immense variety of shades and tints from which to choose. Delicate French grays, light buffs, cream tints and ivory whites for the bedrooms, rich browns, blues and greens for the dining-room and living-room, provide an almost endless variety of pleasing combinations to harmonize with any desired color scheme. On the border or on the body of the walls attractive stencil designs, which bring out in relief the color combinations, may be applied. The use of flat wall paints is not limited to new work, but is equally effective on old unpapered surfaces or those from which old paper has been scraped.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR
Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal-oil).

The inventor, F. T. Johnson, 246 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

DYEING
YOU will be astonished at the results we get by our modern system of dyeing and cleaning. Fabrics that are shabby, dirty or spotted are made like new. We can restore the most delicate articles.

Send one article or a parcel of goods by post or express. We will pay carriage one way, and our charges are most reasonable.

Continuity.
Many persons have little power of continuity in thought or action. They are constantly finding it necessary to rest either their minds or their bodies; they turn from one task to another; they are desultory in their mental processes; they think, but they get tired before they have thought to a conclusion.

The trouble is that they have never found anything to deal with continuously. The routine of life doesn't interest them enough; the daily job, whether it calls for mental or manual effort, does not engage their thoughts as a continuing process in the shaping of which their faculties are employed as well-selected instruments. Perhaps they are somewhat depressed with the feeling that they are not particularly well-selected instruments, that they are razors being used as saws or spoons being used as shovels, and that the imposition of any greater continuity of service on them than already is required would wear them out so much the faster.

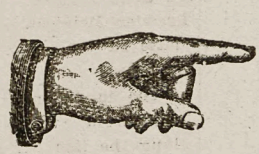

But for his own happiness, everyone should try to achieve continuity of thought and self-expression. It may be that for some persons such continuity is not to be had in the daily vocation. The work may be of so mechanical a nature as to offer no material for thought to work on, or it may be of so uncongenial a nature as not to stimulate thought. Then there ought to be some avocation that would supply both the material and the stimulus; in a man's leisure hour he can be continuous. Every normal person has a special and healthy interest in something, yet few persons ever learn to pursue their special interest intelligently. Most persons dawdle over it instead of working over it; they aren't continuous in dealing with it, and consequently it never assumes a definite importance or communicates a real purpose to their lives. The people who by continuous thought and effort discover in their special interest a purpose that is personal to them are pretty sure to make their lives happy and fruitful, however dull and dragging may be the daily job.

Roses were formerly the symbol of silence, hence the Latin phrase "sub-rosa" meaning "under the rose" and so "in confidence."

ALEXANDRIA, ONTARIO

SOME CANADIAN AUTHORS OF TO-DAY

November 18th, 1921.—The Liberal Leader, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, according to reports which have reached Ottawa, is now completing a most successful tour of the Western provinces. At the head of the lakes as well as in the Prairie Provinces themselves the Liberal chieftain has been given a splendid reception and as a result of his frank exposition of the Liberal policies and principles there has been a decided swing toward the Liberal candidates. The people have found out for themselves that the Government's cry of a different tariff policy being preached by the Liberal Leader according to the location of his speeches, is all poppycock, and they are preparing to take revenge of the government which has been so industrious in trying to mislead the country in this and a score of other ways.

In Saskatchewan there is a decided swing toward Liberalism. Many purely rural seats promise to elect Liberal candidates as the farmers themselves find that they will lose rather than gain by splitting the opposition against the present Tory government and thus, in many cases, letting a Tory gain a seat in a constituency where the vast majority of the people are opposed to the Government which has hung on to power for the past eighteen months.

Just how many seats this swing will bring into the Liberal fold it is hard to estimate, but there is every reason to believe that the voting on Dec. 6th, will return a greater number of Liberals from that province than had been anticipated up to the time the Liberal Leader left Ottawa.

The Liberal Leader read a lesson to the Progressives when he addressed the first of his series of Prairie meetings at Melville, Sask., last Saturday night. Mr. King told his audience that their present course meant dashing their party on the rocks of discussion. If the Progressives desired to be truly progressive, then their place was in the ranks of the Liberal party which had fought their battles in the past and had gone down to defeat in the effort to pass reciprocity for the farmers in 1911. The Progressive movement was likely to be responsible, Mr. King stated, for the return of a remnant of Toryism to the House, for the Progressives, by placing their candidates in the field to split the vote in constituencies where the Liberal was sure of victory in a straight two-candidate fight, would let many Tories slip back into the House.

There was talk of coalition after the election, said Mr. King, but he warned the Progressives that if they wanted to seek unity with the Liberal party which undoubtedly would be the party in the next House with a majority was sufficient to form a government. Then they should seek that unity before and not after the elections. The country was sick of coalitions, the Liberal chief asserted, and it was useless to talk of Liberals and Farmers coalescing after the election if in the meantime the Farmers were going to do their best to elect Conservative members by splitting the true Progressive vote.

The Progressives had gone into this fight on the basis of a class group. They were determined that their party was to have "no truck nor trade" with either of the old parties. If that was the attitude which the farmers were to adopt toward the Liberal Party, they could hardly expect the Liberal Party after it was returned to power to rush out seeking to embrace the Farmers. Mr. King's speech had a telling effect on his audience and set the intelligent farmers thinking. Many of them afterwards expressed the thought that in the back of their minds there had been something of the same nature waiting for a means of expression.

Dr. Michael Clarke, formerly of the Progressive and representative of Red Deer for the past eleven years, was also a speaker at the Melville meeting. Dr. Clarke gave his audience a further explanation of his reasons for turning away from the Progressive movement when he found that instead of being Progressive as he had thought and hoped it would prove to be, it was really a reactionary class group seeking to attain power for its own ends rather than for the benefit of the country at large. The country was saddled with immense debts and national burdens, Dr. Clarke said, and the only hope of solution would lie in the election to power of the Liberal party, which was the people's party standing for the rights of both consumers and producers and which, if returned, would give Canada an era of honest and straight forward government and whose record and personnel was the only one to be trusted with government at this critical time.

The Liberal Leader and Dr. Clark were both warmly received and were cheered as they finished their speeches. Another speaker on the western tour is Col. Andrew Thompson of Ottawa who, speaking as a returned soldier, is able to give the returned man's viewpoint and who freely gives his reasons for getting behind the Liberal movement for the betterment of Canada as a whole.

The government appears to have driven the final nail in its coffin, if there was room for another one, by its action in the case of the Riordan taxes. This corporation, while wealthy and declaring a 10 per cent cash in dividend in 1916, 1917 and 1918, was nevertheless allowed by the government to give promissory notes for its business profits and other taxation and now that it has reached a stage of virtual bankruptcy, the government is in the position of having promissory notes and no likelihood of being able to collect them. And from the information which has already been gathered, the Riordan company is only one of several wealth corporations which has been allowed to escape taxation, while the less industrial business man has been threatened with dire punishment and also with heavy fines if he dared to make an error in the computation of his tax. Mr. King hit the nail on the head in reference to this matter when he protested against the practice of the company. There was nothing in the law, said Mr. King, which gave the Minister of Finance, or anyone else discretionary powers with regard to the acceptance of note for taxation. And if the government was going to do this for the big industrial corporations there was no reason why the poor man, unable to pay his income or other taxes should not be entitled to give the government a promissory note for them.

The Liberal leader starts this next week on his final tour of Ontario and will finish the campaign with a two weeks tour of cities which he has thus far been unable to visit.

Trade Follows the Ad'

If any evidence were required of the growing interest in Canadian literature, one need only point to the remarkable progress of the Canadian Authors' Association, which already numbers over seven hundred members, although it was organized only eight months ago. Canada ranks exceptionally high in the world of poetry, with names such as Bliss Carman to her credit. In the world of fiction Arthur Stringer, Ralph Connor, L. M. Montgomery, Basil King, Bertrand Sinclair, Isabel Ecclestone Mackay, Madge Macbeth, and Frank L. Packard, are only a few of an army of popular novelists. Life on the prairies has been admirably depicted by Janey Canuck (Judge Emily Murphy), Nellie McClung, Robert Stead, and Sergeant Ralph Kendall with his stories of the North-West Mounted Police. The chief object of the Canadian Authors' Association is to create a wider interest among Canadians themselves in their own literature.

It has an official organ called the "Canadian Bookman." It has helped to organize Canadian Authors' Week for the third week in November, in which libraries and bookstores will make special displays of Canadian books, and it has conducted a vigorous campaign for the improvement of Copyright conditions in Canada.

Valuable Accidents

Accidents rather than necessity seem most often to be the mother of invention.

The X-ray is one of the most remarkable of modern discoveries; yet mere chance revealed it to Roentgen while he was working with a Crookes tube.

How should we get along without pneumatic tires? That wonderful idea sprang from nothing more remarkable than a piece of garden hose which a man in England tied around the wheel of the wheelbarrow.

A Frenchman named Montgolfier, airing one of his wife's frocks, noticed that it tended to rise when inflated with warm air. When his wife came home she found him sending up paper balloons—the first balloons ever made.

A careless workman in a paper mill forgot to add "size" to a batch of pulp and the paper made from it had to be thrown away. Somebody used a scrap of it to write on, and discovered its absorbent quality. Hence our blotting paper.

In 1825, the wife of a blacksmith at Troy, washing her husband's shirts, was annoyed to observe the collars got dirty before the garments were much soiled otherwise. She made separate collars, the first ever known, and sold them to her neighbors. A few years later several collar factories in Troy were doing a profitable business, and today that city is the collar-making centre of the United States.

George Westinghouse accidentally picked up on a train a magazine which contained a description of a compressed-air drill used in boring the Mont Cenis tunnel. It gave him the idea for his pneumatic brake, which revolutionized railroading.

A glass cutter at Nuremberg dropped some aquafortis on his spectacles. Very provoking, for it spoiled them. But the accident gave rise to the art of etching on glass.

A railway switchman in England, in 1846, had two station signals, some distance apart, to mind. He fastened the two levers together with a long wire, using a broken iron chair for a counterweight, and ran the wire on into his hut, where he sat nightly by the stove comfortably working the signals without setting foot outside. The management of the road learned of the trick, reprimanded him for laziness, promoted and rewarded him for his ingenuity and adopted his invention.

You Will Never Regret

Keeping your temper under insult or serious provocation.

Telling the truth when all else would have helped you out of difficulty.

Turning away from pleasures that would injure your health or your manhood.

Holding steadfastly to your purpose when everyone insisted you were on the wrong track.

Forming the habit of always trying to better your best, to improve something somewhere every day of your life.

Refusing to listen to malicious gossip, or stories that are "off color."

Having the courage to wear shabby clothes rather than go in debt for what you could not afford.

Daring to say "No" when "Yes" would have made you a "good fellow" and won the applause of your companions.

Not peeing that cutting, sarcastic letter, or uttering the angry words that sprang to your lips when smarting under a sense of injury or injustice.

Getting up every time you fall and pushing right on towards your goal, no matter how dark the way.

Keeping faith with yourself at any

The Moncton Transcript has a good article when it says:

"As the decisive days in the campaign are approached the Government forces are seen to be retreating all along the line. Meighen's courageous attempt to stem the tide has been unavailing. No man single-handed can hope to do anything like off-set the tide that is running so strongly against the Government from one end of the country to the other. Even the stars in their courses fight against the forces under Premier Meighen. He can't win; because he can't accomplish the impossible.

"The conditions are altogether different from those that existed all along the line in 1911 and enabled the Conservatives to snatch a victory. In that year, though it had given the country fifteen years of the best rule that it had ever enjoyed, the Liberal party undoubtedly suffered from some of the drawbacks to which a party, having been long in office, is subjected. Aside from the leading issue of the campaign, there is no doubt that the old cry, 'It's time for a change,' had effect.

"Then again in 1911, through the misrepresenting of the reciprocity issue, thousands of Liberals, especially west of Ottawa, were undoubtedly stampeded against their party, and that through the waving of the old flag. The ill-advised utterances of certain leading American statesmen to the effect that Canada was at the parting of the ways, stirred these people far more than any other consideration could have done. They were mistaken; they listened to false voices, but they were sincere. To-day this element is solidly behind the Liberal leader.

"As was the case in the Maritime provinces, the Ontario tour of Premier Meighen has failed to rally the old forces. As was natural, he had good meetings; for Canadians are always respectful to the man who occupies the position of Prime Minister. But he has utterly failed in his attempt to arouse the old spirit that did such execution for the Conservatives in 1911, and which resulted in the return of 72 candidates of that party. As the hopes of the Government have been centered on a repetition of the events of ten years ago in that province, one can readily see that its campaign has failed at the most strategic part of the field.

"The truth is that the tariff by itself has not, during the last forty years, been the big factor that some have thought. Premier Meighen had to fall back on it this year, for he had nothing else. Besides, he needed an organized following and support in the form of campaign funds, and this was more obtainable from the big interests than from anything else. But the use of the tariff issue in the present campaign has been of a strained nature. There has been nothing in the situation that warranted the playing of it up, as Premier Meighen has done. It matters not that he reiterates the charge that the Liberals are for free trade. The public does not believe it, and that is all there is to the matter.

"The result in 1911 was not obtained on the straight issue of reciprocity. Flag-waving and the arousing of a hysterical feeling of loyalty produced that result, and not reciprocity. It was the same back even as far as 1891, for in that year Sir John Macdonald won his last victory, not on the trade issue as much as through the slogan, 'A British subject I was born; a British subject I will die.' This really had nothing to do with the issues of that election, but realizing the powerful nature of this appeal the 'old Conservative' chieftain believed that he could rally the crowd quicker with such a cry than with anything else.

"The tariff issue as used by Premier Meighen to-day is devoid of this appeal. For one thing, the people, having realized how completely they were fooled on it ten years ago, are not so easily taken in again. If any Government supporter were to rise and say that Canada is at the parting of the ways to-day, as she was declared to be in 1911, he would be laughed at. So the Premier's great big shell, that was expected to do so much damage, has proven to be nothing more than a 'dud.'

UNKNOWN OILS AND FATS

Until the war came we did not realize how precarious and indispensable to human health were oils and fats.

It is interesting in this connection to consider the fact that—herring linseed, which is not edible—all of our fats and oils are derived from by-product materials, says an American newspaper.

Take cottonseed, for example, which formerly was thrown away. It now yields more than a billion pounds of oil annually, which is used in enormous quantities in the manufacture of artificial lard.

Corn oil is a by-product of starch and hominy plants. We produce 160,000,000 pounds of it in a twelvemonth. Tallow, lard and other animal fats are by-products of the packing houses. Eighty-seven million pounds of peanut oil were produced in the United States in 1919 for use in lard substitutes, as a salad oil (equal to a fair quality of olive oil), and in the making of "nut margarine." The high price of butter during the war made nut margarine so popular that the consumption of peanut oil for this purpose rose to 23,000,000 pounds in 1918.

In 1920 the production of peanut oil in the United States fell, with slackening demand and lower prices, to 13,000,000 pounds or nearly one-seventh that of 1919. Farmers in the South have been accustomed to plant peanuts for their hogs, allowing the animals to gather the crop. They have found, however, that it pays much better to harvest the peanuts, sell them at the mill for crushing and take back the residuum of "cake." A ton of cake, ground into meal, is worth more as hog feed than the original peanuts, and it makes much better pork.

Bits of Canadian News.

Expenditure for good roads in Manitoba December 1, 1920, amounts to $1,700,000 during the fiscal year, which is $59,929, according to a statement issued by the provincial government. This amount represents expenditures by municipalities for which they have submitted statements to the good roads board. The government, in accordance with the act which specifies that it must bear the cost of from one-third to two-thirds of the work, according to its nature, disbursed $873,109.

Beavers and Persian lambs, the latter known in the industry as "Karakul," will be raised on W. C. Dunn's ranch at Wabamun, Alberta. Mr. G. H. Patrick has more than 1000 Karakuls on his ranch near Calgary, and these Bokhara are thriving lustily.

An official return shows that there are in Alberta 15 fur farms with animals worth approximately $140,000. These farms include one of the two Karakul sheep farms of the Dominion, with 1,100 head, valued at $30,000. There are on the fox ranches of Alberta, 183 silver foxes, 98 patch foxes and 25 red foxes.

A new method of extracting by-products from waste and otherwise useless apples, including the most intensely acid and worthless, which have heretofore gone to waste, has been discovered by Graham's, Limited, Halifax. From a simple process it is claimed that a syrup, which has been pronounced eminently desirable as a basis for other connections, can be produced. Calcium Malite, the same as derived from maple sugar and known as sugarsand, can be produced by this new process. The process is being treated in two evaporators and it is thought will lead to the development of an entirely new industry in the Annapolis Valley.

Operations will shortly begin on the sinking of a new shaft at the colliery at New Waterford, N.S., which will mean the establishment of a new community in that town. This is part of the development work consequent upon the amalgamation of the Nova Scotia Steel and Dominion Coal Companies on the great submarine area, which is estimated by mining men to contain over one hundred million tons of coal.

A branch plant of the Lewis E. Myers Company of Valparaiso, Indiana, and the Canadian Austin Machinery Company, at Chicago, have been established at Woodstock, Ont., the former to manufacture art desks for schools, and the latter earth-moving and concrete mixing machinery.

A new milk powder plant at Chittiwack, B.C., has been completed and operations commenced. It will have a daily capacity of three thousand pounds.

Safeguard Baby's Eyes

In Budapest recently a midwife dropped into the eyes of a newborn baby a 10 per cent. solution of nitrate of silver instead of the 1 per cent. solution that is obligatory there. The result, of course, was destruction of the eyeball and total blindness. To prevent the recurrence of such a disaster the highest sanitary authorities are ordering that a 1 per cent. solution of silver acetate be used instead of the silver nitrate, for the reason that it is impossible to make a stronger solution of the former.

STERN REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

The Trouble Must be Treated Through the Blood.

Every rheumatic sufferer should realize that rheumatism is rooted in the blood and that to get rid of it it must be treated through the blood. The old belief that rheumatism was caused by cold, damp weather, is now exploded. Such weather conditions may start the pains, but it is not the cause. Liniments and outward applications may give temporary relief, but that is all they can do because they do not reach its sources in the blood. The sufferer from rheumatism who experiments with outward applications is only wasting time and money in depending upon such treatment; the trouble still remains, and it is all the time becoming more firmly rooted. Treat this disease through the blood and you will soon find relief. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly on impure weak blood; they purify and strengthen it, and so act on the cause of the rheumatism. Mr. P. J. MacPherson, R.R. No. 5, Cardigan, P.E.I., says: "About three years ago I was attacked with rheumatism. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and soon the trouble disappeared and I am in better health than before. I also know of an old lady acquaintance who was badly crippled with rheumatism in her arms and legs, and who suffered very much. She, too, took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and is now able to do her housework. I tell you this in the hope it may be of benefit to some other sufferer."

You can procure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or they will be sent you by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

British Leaders Appeal for League.

A public letter signed by Premier Lloyd George, Herbert Asquith, Lord Grey, Lord Robert Cecil, John Robert Clynes and Sir Huhert Gough, representing nearly all political factions, makes a stirring appeal for funds to carry on the work of the League of Nations Union, says a London despatch. It says that without considerable donations the league must curtail many of its activities. The appeal is for a million pounds, or "just the cost for maintaining one capital ship for a year."

The letter goes on to say that "if the world will hut rally to the League of Nations a substantial reduction in armaments will be possible. We shall save the million pounds many times over in taxation, to say nothing of what we will gain in security and happiness."

Substitute for Tea.

The active principle of tea is "theine." That of coffee is caffeine. But caffeine and theine are exactly the same thing.

This agreeably stimulating alkaloid is found in other plants one of which grows wild and plentifully in the South Atlantic States, where it is called "yaupon," or sometimes "Christmas-berry tree."

The Indians brewed a beverage from the leaves of the yaupon long before the first white man landed on this continent; and during the Civil War it was used as a substitute for tea by people in the South.

The U.S. Government Plant Bureau is experimenting with it, in the belief that the leaves, when properly cured after the manner of tea, will furnish a palatable cup at a much less cost.

In the Island of Rhodes honey is still a factor in the marriage rites. After the wedding the husband dips his finger in honey and traces a cross over the doorway of his home before the bride enters. Meanwhile the spectators cry out to the bride, "Be always good and sweet as is this honey." Minard's Liniment for Distemper.

WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she would not be without them. The Tablets are a perfect home remedy. They regulate the bowels and stomach; drive out constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make baby healthy and happy. Concerning them, Mrs. Noble A. Pye, Ecum Secum, N.S., writes:—"I have found Baby's Own Tablets of great benefit for my children and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Railroad Safety Device.

The chief mechanical engineer of an English railroad has recently perfected and put into operation a device which serves the double purpose of providing railway carriages with a huffing appliance and an interlocking arrangement which will maintain the alignment of a train and prevent the telescoping of the carriages. The huffers are designed with working and reserve stroke springs of five tons and fifteen tons each, giving an ordinary resistance of twenty tons per huffer. Should the impact be still greater, the bolts which resist the springs are designed to break away at about fifty tons pressure per huffer and the corrugated fenders to become engaged. These fenders are designed not only to prevent vehicles mounting each other, but also to preserve the alignment and absorb the shock.

His Hearing Restored.

The invisible ear drum invented by A. O. Leonard, which is a miniature megaphone, fitting inside the ear entirely out of sight, is restoring the hearing of hundreds of people in New York City. Mr. Leonard invented this drum to relieve himself of deafness and head noises, and it does this so successfully that no one could tell he is a deaf man. It is effective when deafness is caused by catarrh or by perforated, or wholly destroyed natural drums. A request for information to A. O. Leonard, Suite 437, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City, will be given a prompt reply. advt.

A Clock for Aircraft.

The Air Service of the U.S. War Department has developed a new and peculiar kind of clock, to be carried on airplanes. It is "built like a watch" having a watch movement, and is wound by electricity, being connected with a small storage battery. Hitherto it has been found difficult to get a clock to do satisfactory work on a plane. The vibration made the timepiece unreliable, and its accuracy was further affected by changes of temperature with altitude. The new clock, thanks to certain "compensation" arrangements, keeps good time at any temperature from 90 below zero to 150 above, and vibration does not bother it. Tests made by the Bureau of Standards have given it a full indorsement.

He struck a match to see if the gasoline tank was empty. It wasn't. He patted a strange dog on the head to see if the critter was affectionate. It wasn't. He tried to see if he could heat a train to the crossing. He couldn't. He touched a wire to see if it was charged. It was. He took a drink of hootleg liquor to see if it had any wood alcohol in it. It did. (Loud shouting and great acclaim by chorus of undertakers).

"Eve, Oh!"

The temper of the teacher who was presiding over the drowsy class was approaching the end of its tether. The youngsters were so exasperatingly cheeky that their instructress trembled with righteous anger.

The lesson was about the history of machines. They had touched upon Edison and his voice-reproducer. The boys, however, despite the lesson's interesting theme, were lethargic and lazy.

"Now, then," the teacher asked, impatiently, "from what was the first talking machine made?"

The class pricked up its ears. Here was a chance to shine. For two seconds forty minds sought for something brainy. Then a shuffling of feet at the back, and a voice: "Please, miss, a rbl!"

"I never go to church," said the millionaire. "I guess you've noticed that, bishop?"

"Yes, I have noticed it," replied the bishop, gravely.

"I suppose you wonder why I never go to church, don't you?" the millionaire pursued. "Well, I'll tell you why. There are so many hypocrites there."

"Oh, don't let that keep you away," retorted the bishop, with a smile. "There is always room for one more."

Mrs. Rose M. Brown Gained 20 Pounds In Four Weeks Time

Declares It's Simply Astonishing To See The Wonderful Benefits She Has Derived From Tanlac—Says Terrible Headaches Have Disappeared.

MRS. ROSE M. BROWN

"It sounds unreasonable, but I have actually gained 20 pounds in less than a month's time by taking Tanlac, and the wonderful benefit I have derived from the use of this medicine is simply astonishing," said Mrs. Rose M. Brown, 111 Third Street, Manchester, N.H.

"Why, I am so happy to be relieved of my troubles I can really never praise this medicine enough. Up to the time I began taking Tanlac, I suffered for something over two years with a very bad form of stomach trouble.

"My appetite was so poor I could scarcely eat a thing. My stomach would be so badly bloated with gas sometimes I was almost afraid to go to bed for fear I would actually smother. I felt tired and worn out most of the time and became terribly discouraged over my condition. I often had such violent headaches I was unable to be out of bed for two or three days at a stretch.

"Four bottles of Tanlac completely restored my health and anyone can see at a glance the wonderful change that has taken place in my condition. I have a splendid appetite now and the stomach trouble has entirely disappeared. I can eat just anything I want without ever feeling a sign of indigestion. The best of all, I am never bothered any more with headaches and this was the greatest relief of all. I want to tell everybody what this medicine has done for me." Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere. Adv.

tributors were allowed to be kept secret, and this is what must be made public in order to stop the abuse of the law.

One of his opponents had stated that the Meighen government had lowered the tariff. Taking it comparatively, there was absolutely reduction in the tariff. The tariff must be reduced on boots, shoes, clothing, etc., as well as on agricultural implements. As to the railways, Canada had enough for double her population. In the West, railways could be found lying side by side in sight of each other. It was not the Conservative Government which granted votes to women, but the United Government. The United Farmers had been agitating the people up to it for a long time.

He wished to put Gen. Hervey right about Mr. Crerar. Mr. Crerar did not leave the Liberal party to join the Conservative party. It was a joint Union Administration. He wanted conscription in Canada, and Mr. Kennedy left it to the electors of the county as to whether he had done right or not. When the war was over, Mr. Crerar left the Union Administration, and had he not done right?

Neither party, said Mr. Kennedy, were following the policies of their old chieftains, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir John A. Macdonald. Sir John A. Macdonald's policy was to lower the tariff as soon as the country had a great enough control on the market. Sir Arthur Meighen had tried to do so, he did so as far as he was able, but he could do no more. If Meighen is returned to power, will he revise the tariff or will it be done by the men behind him? Mr. McGlenaghan had expressed surprise on hearing that Kennedy was in favour of protective tariff. Mr. Kennedy assured him that he had not heard him say that. He had said that we must have tariff, not protective tariff. Anyone would have taken Mr. McGlenaghan for a city man from his remarks. He had said that the grain growers of the west wanted to buy butter and cheese from the northern states instead of from Eastern Canada. Why, the people of the west had far more butter, cheese and pork than they knew what to do with. To him the object appeared to be to drive a wedge between the East and West of Canada, and this would be unworthy of any party who appeals to the support of the Canadian people.

There had been some talk of the depreciation of our dollar in the United States! Take out a five dollar bill in Canada, was it worth $5.00 in gold in this country? We have not got a gold standard, and that is another reason and a very large reason why our money is at a discount.

This talk of blue ruin in connection with the lowering of the tariff was unworthy of Canadians. This great country of ours could never come to anything like that.

This very interesting meeting was brought to a close with cheers for the King and the several candidates.

MacPHERSON-FRASER
On Thursday evening, Nov. 17th, at seven o'clock, the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Fraser was the scene of a happy and interesting event, when their daughter Nora became the bride of Mr. W. MacPherson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Allan Morrison of Kirk Hill, in the presence of some seventy five guests. The bride who was given in marriage by her father, was beautifully gowned in white charmeuse satin, with the customary veil and carried a bouquet of roses and ferns. The only ornament worn was a string of pearls, the gift of the groom. The bridal party and guests were entertained at a sumptuous dinner after which a pleasant time was spent in music and dancing. The presents were numerous, including cheques, cut glass, etc. A few evenings previous to the marriage a kitchen shower was held by friends of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. MacPherson will reside in West Summerland, B.C. We wish them every good wish and prosperity in their new home. — Glen Sandfield correspondent.

MR. ARCHIBALD McDONALD
The funeral of the late Archibald McDonald was held on the 18th inst, from his brother's residence, near Dalkeith, to East Hawkesbury cemetery. The late Mr. McDonald was the second son of the late Andrew A. and Mrs. McDonald and was born in East Hawkesbury, on Nov. 18th, 1875. In 1898, he married Carolina, youngest daughter of the late Norman D. and Mrs. McLeod, of Dalkeith and besides his sorrowing widow, he leaves to mourn his loss five children, Andrew N. of Detroit, Mich., Clarence, Herman, Dorothy and Kenneth at home as well as his mother, four brothers and two sisters.

For the last fifteen years, the late Mr. McDonald resided at Cobalt, where he was engaged in the mining industry. He was a member of Silver Lodge A.F. & A.M., Cobalt and Masonic honors were given in interment by the officers and members of St. John's Lodge, Vankleek Hill.

MR. DAN D. CAMPBELL

It is with sincere regret that we are called upon to record the death of Mr. Dan D. Campbell of McCrimmon which sad event occurred on Sunday morning, Nov. 6th, at his late residence, 1-9th concession of Kenyon. The deceased had not been enjoying good health for some time, but not until a few weeks ago was his illness thought to be serious and despite skillful physicians, tender nursing and loving care he passed peacefully away surrounded by his family and a few intimate friends, on the above date. His death has cast a gloom over the community, where by his quiet, consistent Christian life of loving unselfish devotion, he had endeared himself to all and he will be greatly missed not alone by his heartbroken family but by his many friends who had learned to appreciate his many good qualities.

In early life he became a member of Kirk Hill Presbyterian Church and when health permitted was ever found in his place in church. He was a chartered member of McCrimmon S.O.S. No. 93 and being a past chief always took an active part in all its proceedings. He was active in the building of the McCrimmon S.O.S. Hall which will give further proof of his many good qualities. He was a member of McCrimmon L.O.L. 771 being a past District Master of Vankleek Hill District and also a member of Alexandria Lodge A.F. & A.M. under whose auspices his funeral was held on Nov. 8th. Service was conducted at his late residence by his pastor, Rev. A. Morrison who delivered an impressive sermon relating his life as that of a good Christian man. Rev. J. R. Douglas also assisted in the service.

The pallbearers were Messrs Donald McCaskill, Myles Campbell, J. A. McCrimmon, J. A. McGillivray, K. J. Chisholm and Angus D. G. McMaster. He is survived by his sorrowing wife, (nee Margaret McLeod, of Dalkeith) three daughters, Ethel, Florence and Bettie and one son, Donald. He also leaves one brother, Duncan, at home, one sister, Mrs. Rory J. McLeod, Kirk Hill, and his aged mother, Mrs. Dan C. Campbell, on the homestead.

In Memoriam

KINNELL—In loving memory of Mrs. Peter Kinnell who passed away on the 15th November, 1920. One year has passed since that sad day. When one we loved was called away, God took her home, it was His will, forget her, no we never will. God loved her too and thought it best. And took her to His heavenly rest. Inserted by her husband and family.

What is Retracing ?

This is a question that is asked by many people not familiar with Chiropractic phraseology. Here is the answer: A disease reaches its maximum through gradual stages of development. IT MUST RETRACE THROUGH THOSE STAGES. Inflammation appears gradually. When it reaches its maximum, it begins to decrease and to pass through the various stages it has already passed through, except in the reverse order. First there was redness, then gradual swelling, then excessive heat and pain. In retracing the pain begins to decrease, the heat to reduce, the swelling to go down and the redness to finally disappear. This is RETRACING; and if you want to fully understand WHY this must occur, ask your Chiropractor to give you a pamphlet upon the subject. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free.

Eye Specialist Again Visiting Alexandria

G. W. Goodwin the eye specialist whose offices are at 95 Bank St. Ottawa, is again visiting Alexandria and while here will be located at Dr. Sargent's. The people of this vicinity will no doubt appreciate his coming as he is an expert in his profession. It will be a distinct advantage as otherwise it would be necessary for a great number to go to the city with their eye troubles. Anyone having trouble with their eyes will do well to consult him for better vision.

He will be here on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 25th and 26th. Appointments may be made beforehand with Dr. Sargent. 43-3
