

REV. MGR. CORBETS GOLDEN JUBILEE

(Cornwall Standard)
Preparations are well under way for the coming celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary in the priesthood of Rt. Rev. Mgr. George Corbet, V.G., pastor of St. Columba's. Already many prominent churchmen and laymen have signified their intention of honoring by their presence one who has labored during so many years for the welfare of church and state in Eastern Ontario.

The Jubilarian, Mgr. Corbet, will officiate at solemn High Mass in the presence of the Bishop of the Diocese of Alexandria at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, September 12. He will be assisted by Rev. D. R. Macdonald, P.P., Glen Nevis, as Deacon, and Rev. D. A. Campbell, P.P., of St. Raphael's, as sub-deacon. The Rev. Father Kings-ton, S.J., Rector of Loyola College, Montreal, will deliver the sermon for the occasion.

Archbishop Emard of Ottawa, Archbishop McNeil of Toronto, Bishop Fallon of London, Bishop Forbes of Joliet, Bishop Conroy of Ogdensburg and Bishop O'Brien of Peterboro are expected to be present.

At 1.00 p.m. in the Music Hall, will take place a complimentary banquet for the invited guests, and those holding tickets. Tickets may be obtained at Burns' drug store or from committee, of which T. J. Donihue is chairman, and should be procured as soon as possible.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM SCOTLAND

26 Park Row West, Glasgow Scotland.
14th August, 1923.

The Editor Glengarry News,
Dear Sir,

Some time ago I received from a friend in Canada a cutting which referred briefly to McAuslane of Scotland, who are known as a sept of the Clan Buchanan, along with the McMillans and McQuatties.

It is not my present intention to go into the matter of clanship but when I saw that the cutting was from your newspaper, I thought that your public would be composed largely of Scots, Lowland and Highland and a feeling has grown up within me, urging me to get into touch with some Scot, old or young with whom I might interchange gossip about the old and the new.

When I discovered that your 'News' was published at Alexandria, I wondered where the name had come from; I spent my youth in Alexandria in the Vale of Leven, near to Loch Lomond, an industrial centre of the Turkey-Red Trade and Calico Printing and Bleaching, now alas, in a sad condition owing to the disorganization of commerce since the end of the war.

Enclosed are a couple of cuttings of possible interest and a small piece of poetry which breathes nature although Pan was never known among our heather hills or woodlands.

If you will permit me to send you extracts such as these you may find a use for them. They may suggest something to you for publication. I should like to know how you live out there during the hard winter. In Scotland, as in England much has been accomplished in the brightening of village life by means of rural societies and in Arasig where I spent a holiday, two years ago, all the lads and lassies came from village farms and shielings one night to enjoy a dance. The pipes kept going till early morning and we could hear them laughing gaily as they started out for a five or six mile walk to their homes. This is only one feature of the Rural Society's activities. I must, however, not take up your time but I hope to hear from some one in your neighborhood.

Apart from the subjects to which I have referred there is much that we have to learn here about your country, your schools, your political views and other things woven into the texture of our daily life inciting us to higher levels of thought—Shall I say more, With best wishes I am

Yours truly,
JOHN McAUSLANE.

P.S.—I know French very well. With pleasure we include Mr. McAuslane's name on our mailing list feeling assured readers of Glengarry's Home Paper will take up this interesting proposal which should prove of mutual benefit. Ed. News.

CURLING CLUB CELEBRATE OPENING

Official opening of Alexandria's beautiful Curling Rink took place on Labour Day, when the Athletic Association working in conjunction with the St. Lawrence Amusement Company, presented the famous motion picture, "The Three Musketeers" before a large and appreciative audience. The picture itself is one of the best ever produced and is probably the one in which Douglas Fairbanks appears to the best advantage. Both the St. Lawrence Amusement Company and the Athletic Association deserve our hearty congratulations for bringing such a good picture to Alexandria and it is safe to assume that the Athletic Association will in the near future bring in other feature Productions now that the Curling Rink is completed.

Messrs. McRae, McLaughlin & Kelly, the contractors who erected the Curling Rink have certainly succeeded in putting up a building of which our citizens should be proud. Everything was done in a good workmanship manner and we believe that we now have one of the finest curling rinks in Eastern Ontario. Following the picture show a most enjoyable dance was put on in the Armouries, which nearly two hundred couples attended. The music supplied by the Rialto Orchestra of Vanleek Hill was very enjoyable and the floor was in excellent shape so that everyone spent a most enjoyable evening. We understand that from a financial standpoint the evening was also a great success. We are pleased that the new Curling Rink has got off to such a good start and trust that our citizens generally will realize what a boon it is to our community and will patronize generously the entertainments which will be put on from time to time by the new organization. The News joins its many readers in wishing the club every success for the future.

The Honour of a Scout

"I trust on your honour to keep this promise."

In these words every Tenderfoot is greeted by his Scoutmaster into the great brotherhood of Scouts. A Scout is always on his honour—not only when he is in uniform and taking part in patrol activities, but equally so at home, at school, at work or play, for Scouting aims to produce a type of personal character so high that every action of one's life will be controlled by that spirit of fair play. No matter how many badges he may wear a Scout must be doing his very best to live up to the Promise, Law, or he is no true Scout. The Scout Law and Promise have been described as the moral groundwork for the training of individual Scouts.

Notice the wording of the law. It tells what a Scout is. He is described as honorable and loyal, useful, friendly, courteous kind to animals, obedient, cheery, thrifty, and clean. Unless he is really trying to live up to these requirements he is not playing the game; his honour is not to be trusted. Notice also this point that unlike the ordinary laws of the land this Law of the Scouts is not made up of things forbidden; it is instead a trumpet call to high endeavour. Let not this feature, therefore of scouting be overlooked, for Scout training which does not take proper account of the character forming side of the work overlooks the central aim and purpose of the whole Movement.

The knightly orders of ancient chivalry were sworn to uphold their honour at all costs and it is chiefly from rules of knighthood that the Laws of the Boy Scout have been derived. In medieval times there were many tyrants—not indeed, without their imitators in these days—who believed that might was right "that they should take who have the power, and they should keep who can". Knight-hood, however, opposed itself to this selfish doctrine and taught that it was the duty of the strong to defend the poor and those who could not defend themselves.

When the country was at peace the knight used to ride out daily as a "Knight Errant" looking for the chance of doing a good turn to any in need of help. His desire was "to live pure, to do right, to speak true, follow the King". The knights of old were the patrol leaders of their day and their men at arms the Scouts. Like the Scouts, they were pledged to do a good turn every day. Their patron Saint was St. George and their cry "For Saint George and Merrie England".

INCIDENTS BY THE WAY IN THE YUKON

C. R. Sinclair)

At the time there were four saw-mills in operation in Dawson, the aggregate cut of which amounted to upwards of eight million feet per annum. The lumber was readily disposed of at $100 per thousand being mainly used in buildings, and for slince boxes. The timber was floated to the mills in rafts of 100,000 feet at a time. Dan McDermid of Martintown was snubbing one of these rafts and while doing so got one of his feet in the coil necessitating the amputation of the leg below the knee. During the winter of 1899, three men started to pull their sleigh over the ice the only way to reach the coast in winter. Before leaving they showed some of their friends a peculiar nugget of gold they were carrying and promised to write upon their arrival at the coast. Time lapsed and no word being received the police proceeded to investigate and ultimately found their names registered at one road house but not at the next. A search followed and suspicion fell on a man who had registered at the same time and upon his being searched the gold nugget referred to was found on his person. The following spring the bodies of the missing men were found and in each case bullet holes gave evidence of how they came by their death. The man arrested was tried, found guilty and paid the penalty with his life. Periodical raids on gambling halls made it unpleasant and expensive for those who frequented them. In one instance two masked men, heavily armed, got away with $1500.00. The school established at Dawson was attended by some 400 children. In the winter season it opened at ten o'clock and closed at three, while in the summer the school hours were 9 to 4. The caretaker, one Alexander McMillan, hailed from Glengarry. Dr. Grand was pastor and he also took charge of Presbyterian Hospital established by the several religious denominations and which was well attended and gave entire satisfaction. Col. McGregor of Martintown, widely known and as widely respected sang in the choir and displayed a keen interest in church welfare and in fact in all matters of public interest. Mrs. McKay of Martintown, was leading Soprano in the Presbyterian Church. Church offerings took the form of gold dust and nuggets without stint. The streets and churches of Dawson were lit with electric light and during the last two years of my time there a water system was installed. In every way it had the appearance of an Eastern city having a Governor Municipal Council, Judges, Professional Men, etc. In springtime natural flowers were plentiful and found a ready sale to miners and proprietors of restaurants. One little girl in one season sold flowers to the amount of one thousand dollars. Berries were also plentiful and those who had time at their disposal for gardening made a success of it. Two young men from two acres of land where they grew all kinds of vegetables netted in one season the handsome sum of six thousand dollars. It being necessary to dredge the Klondike River the work went to the highest bidder and it proved to be the richest dredging on the Klondike. Combines were numerous, in fact they existed in all lines with a view of enhancing prices and as an instance beef was forced to a dollar a pound. To meet the emergency moose and caribou that were plentiful were hunted. This venison sold in Dawson at fifty-five cents a pound and was the means of breaking the combine referred to. I hauled caribou with my team upwards of one hundred miles valued at one thousand dollars and my pay was half of what I was able to secure for the meat. Several of our Glengarry boys were occupying good positions. Hugh McDermid and C. Franklin in the post office; John W. Campbell was foreman of construction of the Ogilvie Bridge; Archibald Cameron was Secretary to Governor Ogilvie; a Mr. McNab was a prominent contractor of roads leading from Dawson to the several mines; one Mr. McLean was a valued member of the staff in the Land Title Office. Glengarrians also made good turnovers in the sale of claims, Angus McMaster coming from Laggan got for his claim $65,000 and with others left for the new mines at Nome. Other cases might be instanced but we will go on. Dan Munro who was a noted dog buyer found a ready sale for a good huskie at from $100 to $150. Our cabin was the resort for Glengarrians. There they periodically met, exchanged stories of what took place in Glengarry and there at all times they were warmly welcomed. Many have since crossed the bar among others John S. Campbell, Alex. McLennan, John McDougall, Dan Stewart, Alex. Fraser and Angus McMaster. The home call reached me stating your mother is likely to cross the bar soon. A steamer was leaving Dawson on the 21st of August, 1902. I dropped all work and left my son and partner to wind up business. In order to catch the steamer I walked 70 miles for ten o'clock till noon the following day and had to swim the Yukon River eventually catching my steamer. My only companion on that trip was a luskly pup, my nephew, Hugh D. Sinclair was sending to his little brother in Calgary. The pup was safely delivered but the lad had to dispose of it on account of its propensity for killing all hens that came within sight. In passing through Toronto where I saw the products of the Yukon, then on exhibition, I had the pleasure of meeting, Mr. Alexander Muir, the author of the well known Canadian Song "The Maple Leaf". After eight years' absence I reached my native home safely and had the pleasure of meeting my mother and to be with her until the close of her well spent life two months later.

CANADA TRADE IS INCREASING

Pointing to the fact that the gain in the value of Canadian sales to the United States for the twelve months ending June, 1923, was larger than the gain in the value of United States exports to Canada, as a magnificent indication of Canadian prosperity, the New York Trust Company publishes an article on the relations of Canada and the United States.

Interlocking national interests are confirmed by statistics according to the article in which it is pointed out that the total value of trade between Canada and the United States during the twelve months amounted to $979,979,000, or approximately one-eighth the total value of United States trade with the entire world. Canada purchased goods from the United States valued at $585,732,788, and sold to the United States products amounting to $394,246,215.

Another significant fact is said to be that Canada's import and export trade with the United States was greater in value than her total trade with the British Empire despite the fact that the Dominion's trade showed gains in the value of products imported from and exported to countries of the Empire in the year mentioned.

After noting that with a population approximately one-twelfth that of the United States, Canada developed a world trade to the amount of $1,844,893,547 during the twelve months as compared with a world trade of $7,738,336,000 by the United States in the same period, the article continues:

"More than one-half of Canada's trade (July, 1922-June 1923), was with the United States and there are indications that in the further development of Canadian commerce the interchange of products with the United States will continue to be greater than trade with any other country. Trade rivalry between ourselves and the Dominion thus will be for a long time to come mainly a competition as to which of the two countries sells the most goods to the other. Canada is our second best customer, and in that role is not far behind Great Britain. Her future development and expansion may easily make her our best customer."

SAYS TIES STRENGTHENED

It is then noted that commercial ties between the two countries are being strengthened by enlarged United States investments in Canadian state issues, and private enterprises, "a late estimate of which places the total at $2,500,000,000." This amount is almost as great as the British investment in Canada.

The article concludes: "Not only capital is being contributed by the United States to the development of Canada's wonderful resources. Accustomed to great movements of population from Europe to the United States we are apt to overlook the fact that there is a country into which large numbers of our own citizens find it desirable to immigrate. Total immigration into Canada in the years 1900 to 1922 was 3,667,310, and more than one-third of that number were from the United States. In fact the emigrants from this country numbering 1,395,853 exceeded the number of British emigrants to Canada by more than 30,000. "Canada has made great progress in various industries but it may be said, without detriment to her remarkable achievements, that she has yet to come into her own industrially. This applies especially to manufacturing. Naturally, with her vast expanse of territory and comparatively sparse population it has followed that agriculture and kindred industries have taken the lead. Latest available estimates of capital invested in her various industries disclose the pre-eminence of Canadian agriculture. The figures are agricultural investment (1921), $6,831,022,000; total manufactures, $3,230,686,368 (1919.)"

CANADIAN DAIRY TRADE INDUSTRY

A decrease in the number of firms manufacturing cheese in Canada during 1922 as compared with 1921 is noted in a report upon the Canadian dairy industry made public by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Butter production, however, was the greatest in the industry's history. Records show that there were 3,111 dairy factories in operation in 1922, comprising 1,161 creameries, 1,565 cheese factories, 363 combined butter and cheese factories and 23 condenseries. The creameries showed an increase over 1921 of 69, the cheese factories a decrease of 34, the combined butter and cheese factories a decrease of 14 and the condenseries a decrease of 4. In 1922 there was manufactured in Canada 147,753,774 pounds of creamery butter valued at $51,530,780, an increase in quantity over the previous year of 19,008,164 pounds, and an increase in value of $3,395,341. This production constituted a record.

During 1922 136,579,473 pounds of cheese valued at $22,007,106 was manufactured, a decrease in quantity of 25,538,021 when compared with 1921 figures. The average wholesale price for cheese in 1922 was 16.15c per pound, as compared with 17.70c in the preceding year.

Condensed products manufactured in 1922 were valued at $6,839,232, as compared with $11,526,422 in 1921.

Loyalty to one's home community goes a long way to making life happy. If your own community isn't the "best in the world," it's time you got out and hunted for one that is.

LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

Between 1800 and 2000 people availed themselves of the invitation to participate in the Labor Day celebration and picnic held on the Glengarry Agricultural Grounds, here, on Monday, under the auspices of the Parish of the Sacred Heart. Rain fell in the early hours of the morning and the downcast sky that threatened further downpours undoubtedly kept a large number away who otherwise would have enthusiastically joined in the outing and incidentally augmented the gate receipts.

The official programme opened at 10.30 with an Allegorical Procession through the main thoroughfares of the town, thence to the grounds. What with representatives of our Police Force, Outriders, Boy Scouts, Cadet Band and some fifteen well decked out floats representative of the several industries and trades of the town, it proved a procession of much interest and was indeed most creditable to those who took part therein.

The crowd began to foregather on the grounds at an early hour and the ladies committee began serving dinner at eleven o'clock in the spacious Fair building, there being a seating capacity for five hundred at a sitting. The tables with cut flowers and gaily decked cakes, etc., presented a very appetising appearance and the menu served was excellent.

The booths from the outset appeared to be doing a thriving business while the grand stand soon filled up preparatory to the afternoon programme, the feature of which was a boxing contest, six rounds, between Young Corneal, Champion Bantam Weight of Hudson district, and Kid Robert, Champion Bantam Weight of Ottawa.

A matched running race between horses owned by Messrs. A. Leblanc and Geo. Lalonde, in a series of heats, was sufficiently close to create much enthusiasm among lovers of that sport. It resulted in A. Leblanc's horse winning first prize.

The music by the Cadet Band and Pipers added to the afternoons' pleasure.

It is due to the managing committee and the officers and members of the Alexandria Lacrosse Club to state why the Champion Match with the Lauriers, of Ottawa, announced to be played at this picnic, did not materialize. It appears the executive refused permission to the Laurier Lacrosse Club to participate in a game here as it might question their championship honors.

THE INGLENEUK

(By G. Watt Smith M. A.)
My people do not consider.

No one can ever pass through any religious experience without passing into a new universe. Every one has seen a young dog who has learned for the first time that he can bark. After that there is no more peace. He barks for the sake of barking, to exercise his new found faculty. He has entered a new world and can never be the same again. The boy who can spin the gyroscope or ride a bicycle enters into a new world; it is impossible to keep him away from the toy or the wheel for a time and he feels in himself that he has an importance which gives him a new value. By whatever way we pass through a religious experience, if it has made an impression on the mind at all, we pass into a new world. Old things have passed away, behold all things have become new. Gavin Ogilvy has described the feelings of an old woman who was likely to be taken to the work house, and was spared the indignity of it by the kindly intervention of a woman. When she knew that she was not to go she looked out on the view in front of her humble dwelling and it was to her eyes a new earth, if not a new heaven. How it is that men let this moving impression slip from them? They forget the love which first was begotten in them and the aspirations which first moved them to the highest ambitions. It is harder work to reclaim a fallen man than to bring one into decent life who has never tasted the sweets of better ways. It is more difficult for the Almighty God to sanctify men than to save them. The fallen people of God constitute a more difficult problem for the Redeemer than the creatures of the devil. The ox knows his owner, and the ass, his master's crib, but many people do not consider.

By what means soever we exercise our intelligence it must be applied to the things of the soul. Otherwise we are but as the beasts that perish. Memory is stored with the instances of the goodness of God. We must reflect upon them to learn their lessons so that we may keep in the right way. Any consideration of the blessings of religion tells us how much it signifies in our domestic happiness and in the general welfare of men in the business world. It, only, affords us the solace the soul craves in the presence of sorrow and disaster, and it, only, lights the lamp ahead of our timorous feet when we tread the last valley of the deep shadow. My people do not consider. How the heart of the Father of our spirits must grieve over us when we fall into this gross sin of stupidity, heedless not only of his goodness but indifferent to our own highest good.

ALMOST TOO GENEROUS

"My dear," remarked the young husband, "did you ask the milkman why there is never any cream on the top of our milk?"

"Yes darling, and he explained quite satisfactorily. I think that it is a great credit to him."
"What did he say?"
"That he always fills the jug so full there is no room for cream."

UNDER CITY MANAGER SYSTEM

SHAWINIGAN FALLS, Sept. 3rd, H. Ortiz City Manager, Grand Mere, addressed the Union of Canadian Municipalities at its 23rd annual convention on "The Council-Manager plan of Municipal Government." He pointed out that there were 321 cities and town operating under pledge to the plan. Of these 310 are located in the United States and eleven in Canada. In Quebec province there are: Westmount, Outremont, Grand Mere, Shawinigan Falls and La Poque. In Ontario, Chatham and Niagara Falls. In New Brunswick, Woodstock. In Manitoba, Brandon and St. James, and in Nova Scotia, Wolfville. The largest and most important city under the plan is Cleveland, Ohio, with a population of 796,841. Five millions of people are either governed, or about to be governed, under the plan.

The council-manager form of control had, he said, been developed to effectively meet two requirements. First a capable legislative body to determine the policies to be adopted, and available as an advisory board. Second, a competent executive organization to efficiently administer the policies decided on. The mayor is the chairman of the board and has no vote or separate administrative powers. The functions of the council are to hire and supervise the city manager who holds office at their pleasure; also to vote appropriations, to pass ordinance and by-laws and to contribute to the city government the amateur and representative element. The city manager is always the servant of the council, but he may recommend the council for adoption such measures as he may deem necessary or expedient.

Combating the idea that the plan was not democratic, Mr. Ortiz said it had shown to the citizenship in their respective cities that centralize responsibility and authority and control, while bringing about business administration, and had not lessened to the slightest degree, the democratic principles of municipal government. The public servant from the council down to the lowest wage-earner in the municipal employ is brought closer to the public and the public closer to the program and policies and the work of the municipal government. As to the plan working in small cities but being unworkable in large ones, the speaker claimed that the larger the city the more applicable was the manager-plan.

Among the outstanding achievements of the plan were the abolition of patronage, the creation of efficient methods, the development of professional executives, the shifting of discussions in municipal campaigns from persons to issues, and separation of the legislative from the executive functions of city government.

FINANCIAL CRITIC BECOMES LEADER

By unanimous vote of the Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature W. E. N. Sinclair, K.C., member for South Ontario, was chosen temporary Leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, at a meeting of members at the Parliament Buildings recently. The same meeting selected J. A. Pinard, member for East Ottawa, to be the party whip, succeeding Thomas Marshall, ex-M.P.P., who was defeated in the riding of Lincoln, P. Wellington Hay, the late Liberal Leader in Ontario, who was defeated in North Perth, was present and addressed the members.

Mr. Sinclair, who had been regarded as a possible choice for the Ontario Leadership at the time of the selection of Mr. Hay, had no competitors for the temporary Leadership at this recent gathering of Liberals, which was well attended. He thanked his colleagues cordially for the confidence and trust reposed in him, and asked for their united co-operation and good-will at the coming session of the Legislature. There have been certain intimations from Premier Ferguson that the United Farmer-Labor group will not be recognized as a "party" in the new House, and it is probable that, with the leadership of the Liberal party, there goes the title and emolument of official Leader of the Opposition.

The new temporary Leader is a Liberal of the non-compromising variety. His criticism of his opponents in the House was always of a severe type than that of Mr. Hay, and particularly in his Budget speech of last session did he lay the heavy Administration for what he deemed to be its errors of omission and commission.

Born in 1873, in Whithy township, Mr. Sinclair was educated at Whithy Collegiate and University of Toronto and Law School, attaining the degrees of B.A. and LL.B. He is a barrister and solicitor by profession, is President of the South Ontario Agricultural Society, and a member of the Thirty Club of Oshawa. He was first elected to the Legislature in 1911; was defeated in 1914; in 1917 was Liberal candidate for the Dominion election; was elected to the Ontario Legislature at the general election of 1919, and again at the last Provincial election, after a stiff fight in his riding of South Ontario.

Encomiums for Mr. Hay

Like his new chief, Mr. Pinard, the new Liberal Whip, is a thoroughgoing Liberal. He was first elected to the Legislature in 1914; was re-elected in 1919, and again at the recent contest.

INFORMING MESSAGE OF SOCIAL HYGIENE

(Toronto Globe) Blazing the trail for the cause of social hygiene in the outlying districts of the Province has been the unique and interesting experience of three women workers in the movement, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, Mrs. R. A. Kennedy of Ottawa and Miss Hewson, Secretary of the Ontario Social Hygiene Council, have just returned from a 2,500-mile motor trip lasting five weeks during which time they brought what was in many cases an absolutely new message to men and women living in the remote parts of the Province.

Country Ripe for Message
"The response was simply wonderful," stated Mrs. Kennedy recently. "Not once did we hear a voice raised in opposition; indeed, several times at some little villages where we were not scheduled to speak, the people were so insistent we had to arrange an impromptu meeting to satisfy them. The country was traversed seemed ripe for our message, and I think the trip has been, in every way, a success."

Some 5,000 in all, it is estimated, heard the subject of social hygiene discussed wisely and frankly by Mrs. Pankhurst and her companions, who unflinching by the wear and tear of continuous travelling, faced an expectant and sometimes wondering audience every evening. In the town halls, in the schools, in fact any place where there was enough space for the crowds, the meetings were held and literature distributed. At Sault Ste. Marie more than 800 gathered in the technical school auditorium, while across the river, the American "Soo" honored the Canadian visitors with an attendance of some 500. That was the only time the party touched a point outside Ontario.

Pledged to Work
The idea in planning such a lecture tour was to bring to the people in the more remote places of the Province the need of awakening active interest in public health matters, with special emphasis on the social disease evil. As a result of the mission three local councils were formed, while in practically every place visited a group of prominent citizens have pledged themselves to the work.

As chauffeur and General Secretary for the whole trip, Miss Hewson contributed very reasonably to the success of the undertaking, and, when seen yesterday, was modestly exultant over the fact that only once during the 2,500 miles covered was the party delayed on account of car trouble, and that was when "a mean little carpet tack" embedded itself in one of the tires. Crossing from mainland to Manitoulin Island involved some slight difficulty, however, as the compartment for automobiles on the ferry was two inches or so short of the height of the travellers' Ford sedan, but, with the help of eight husky men, who stood on the running board and pressed to their full weight and strength, the car was squeezed into place. The coming of the car made history, too, for it was the first Ford sedan on Manitoulin.

Collections Paid Expenses
Meetings were held and literature distributed at the following places: Barrie, Seven Bridge, Gravehurst, Bala, Royal Muskoka Hotel, Rosseau, Parry Sound, Huntsville, Magnetawan (two), Sunbridge, Powassan, North Bay, Warren, Sudbury, Little Current, Mindemoya, Gore Bay (two), Thessalon; Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.; Orillia, Callander, Sturgeon Falls, Newmarket, Washago, Copper Cliff, Espanola.

An interesting point is that the entire expenses of the tour were paid for by the collections made at the various meetings.

Of Interest To Farmers

The Milk Shrink Season

Hoard's Dairyman
Lush green grass in spring is a wonderful stimulant of milk flow and the dairyman is delighted when the pails brim over at milking time. The cow also rejoices in the luscious succulence, for it appeals to her appetite and healthily cleanses her system.
For months dry hay and concentrates have formed a large part of the ration and the silage feed has not perfectly replaced grass in its relaxing effects. The change to grass "opens" the system and sets free stored-up nutrients besides causing the throwing off of certain effete or waste products. The amount of milk may increase seven per cent or more for a time and the percentage of fat may also increase. But the cow loses weight in many instances, possibly from the flushing process, and in time the yield of milk returns to normal or under that.

This matter is much like one's banking experiences. When the balance is big it is an easy matter to write a flock of checks and settle obligations, but the supply of cash quickly diminishes and unless the balance can be holstered the plight of the depositor is distressing. It is a case of feast and famine, of burning the candle at both ends when spring pasture stimulation quickly exhausts the balance of stored nutrients and no provision is made to maintain the supply.

It is impossible to have all dairy cows calve in fall and make much milk when the price is high in winter;
but many owners wish that might be managed. The green grass in spring increases the secretion of milk for a time in such cows and when it shrinks
she is "dried off" during the period of flies and short pastures. The cow that calves in the spring and is expected to yield a profitable flow of milk during the milk-shrink season, deserves and should have a little fairer treatment than often is given. Letting her fight flies all day on a bare-bitten brown pasture where shade and water often are lacking or inadequate not only is positive cruelty but is the poorest sort of policy for the owner.
During this time of the year the cow had better be sheltered during the heat of the day in a clean, airy stable, the windows and doors of which have been screened and darkened against flies, or at least kept in a shady place, supplied with an abundance of fresh drinking water and provided with plenty of cut green feed to replace the lush grass of spring.

Corn grows so fast and abundantly that it is an easy matter to provide it as a soiling crop. Seeded extra early and then at short intervals a supply of green cutting corn can be supplied just when it is wanted and many owners seed sweet corn, southern varieties and those which are especially rich in leaf growth, for soiling purposes.
Sorghum may also be utilized in like manner and other crops, according to districts, are available.

Spraying with fly repellents is also a means of lessening shrink of milk in hot weather and seems well worth practicing. Light sheeting of the body has proved profitable on some farms, but not where cows run in brush or where barb-wire fences enclose the pastures. Free access to salt, rock or block salt being most popular, also helps to maintain a good flow of milk and in some instances, when the shrink starts, milking three times daily, with a thorough massage of the udder at each milking time, tends to slow up the drying off process or keep up the secretion. The feeding of concentrates is also necessary and certainly pays when cows are "worth their salt" and naturally are good milk producers. Often, however, the concentrates are too long withheld. The time to start feeding them is before the shrink starts and every experienced dairyman takes his cue as to that from the condition of the pastures, the prevalence of flies, and the state of the temperature. He will also be careful to stale his cows when cold rains occur,
for they, too, quickly cause a serious shrink in milk secretion.

Curing and Keeping Onions

Upon proper curing depends to a great extent the keeping qualities of onions, and it is safe to state that unless there is uniformity in the maturity of the crop all the bulbs cannot be properly cured to keep for any length of time. When the onion tops begin to lop over and wither, this is a sign that the bulbs have reached the extent of their development. However, all the plants may not, as is often the case, ripen off themselves, but an occasional one stands erect in the patch.
Where plants show this character it is necessary to bend the tops down so as to hasten the ripening process. There are several common causes to which unevenness may be attributed; land that has been recently broken up from sod, very moist soil, and where green manure has been used in large quantities.

The tops of the plants being from half to two-thirds withered, the bulbs should be pulled and left on the ground to complete withering, or if weather conditions are unfavorable it is better to remove the crop to an open shed where the bulbs can be spread thinly on the floor to dry; or if slatted trays are available the drying process can be carried out more satisfactorily, because of the freedom of air circulation. The tops should be removed when the onions are thoroughly dry, which will require about two weeks to accomplish. When drying has been completed remove the tops, using a knife, and cut at least a half inch from the bulbs.
It has been found that if pulling is delayed after the onions are ready and wet weather occurs, the bulbs are liable to start second growth, which means a heavy loss, because once start-

News From the Villages And Country District Desired

Aiming to be a newspaper that carries ALL the news of Glengarry and surrounding districts, The Glengarry News is very anxious to have all the people in this district send in items for publication.

Those who receive news about former residents of this district who are now residing elsewhere are asked to send it in to this Journal. News of this kind is of interest to many people reading this paper. Most frequently items of this kind are regarding deaths, marriages, successes in business or professional life, etc.

Those living in the country districts around are urged to send in any news items they may have. News from the villages and farms is as welcome as any other kind at the Glengarry News Office.

In cases of sudden deaths, fires, damage by storms, or news of a more or less startling character, telephone this paper at our expense, Bell No. 9.

We ask that all contributions be signed with name and address of the sender as an evidence of good faith.

ed, it is impossible to check their development in any way.

Storing the bulbs away for winter in a frost-proof dark room where the air can be kept dry and the temperature maintained around 45 degrees F. are also as important as any of the former mentioned operations. After the crop has been carefully cleaned, selected and thoroughly dried the bulbs may be placed in slatted crates which can be piled up in tiers. A very convenient size of crate is 6 inches deep by 14 inches wide by 28 inches long, all inside measurements.

Show Ring Manners

Good manners in the show ring are very important. They help you to win.
You have trained your calf to lead, to stand and to mind you. Remember the "big three" in the show ring are the animal, the judge, and yourself bear these points in mind and act accordingly.

One of the first requirements for good showing is a good halter—neat and trim. It does not need to be an expensive one. In fact a nice rope halter is all right.

It is best to keep a space of three feet between your calf and the next.
This gives the judge a good chance to look at your calf.
The calf's deportment requires full attention. The calf should stand squarely on all four feet with its head up, at all times. It is bad to have the calf stretched out like a saddle horse
you cannot fool the judge if your calf has a sloping rump.

About yourself—stand on the opposite side of your animal from the judge, usually the left side. You want him to see the calf—not you. Be courteous at all times—a showman is nothing if he is not courteous.

When the judge steps up to go over your animal, turn the calf's head towards the judge slightly. This loos-ens the hide and make it easier for the judge to handle.

Whether you win or lose—be a good sportsman. The value of the show ring is to teach you points of perfection to strive for in developing your calf, your breed, and your character. 'Tis better to be a good loser than a poor winner. If you lose, find out why and resolve that next year
you will show again and "come back"
a winner.

TO DETECT CRIMES.

A New Use Has Been Suggested for Chloroform.

During the last two or three years
a large number of crimes due to obscure and deep-seated psychological causes have engaged the attention of the authorities. It is significant that in most cases they have been committed by persons not of the criminal classes, and are probably attributable to mental instability produced by war strain.

Ordinary police methods are unsuitable for the investigation of such crimes, and in view of the grave danger of innocent people being implicated, it has been seriously suggested that chloroform or some other suitable anaesthetic should be administered to prisoners in order to elucidate the truth, by encouraging the open confession that is induced by such drugs.

At first sight the idea may seem un-British, but when the safety of the community is threatened, no means of investigation must be neglected on the grounds of sentimentality.

For one such criminal brought to justice there are no doubt scores walking about in our midst whose morbid broodings may at any moment result in crime.

There are numerous anaesthetics known to medical science which, whilst perfectly harmless, have the effect of causing the subject to disclose his innermost secrets. The very fact that a guilty prisoner knew he was liable to be subjected to such a test would undoubtedly predispose him to make a clean breast of his guilt, and probably thereby obtain a mitigation of sentence. In cases where the circumstantial evidence was overwhelmingly strong, but insufficient to convict, the system would be invaluable.

As a deterrent it would prove most beneficial. The dread of being subjected to anaesthesia would prevent numberless crimes and lessen perjury.

If the power to order its use were confined to our judges, with the right of appeal, abuses would be guarded against. It could be applied in special anaesthetic chambers by medical men in the presence of the prison authorities.

In the case of a convict condemned to death, the system could be applied to confirm the justice of the verdict.

All arrangements are now complete and a fine programme of entertainment is announced for the second day. The Glengarry Pipe Band will furnish music and among other features we note a tug-of-war between teams representing the Townships of Lochiel and Roxboro, the test to take place in front of the grand stand, Friday, 14th, between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock. W.M.S. MOTHER GOOSE GARDEN PARTY

The members of Skye W.M.S. were certainly favored in having everything that goes to make a Garden party a success. The evening of Aug. 29th was one of the clearest and warmest in some weeks, the location ideal, the decorations effective, the lighting excellent, a good varied program and best of all a large attendance of happy people which meant a success financially. Mother Goose in her Paisley shawls and high hat took her place at the gate to welcome the guests and introduce them to the Queen of Hearts, the Old Woman who Lived in the Shoe, King Cole and his Fiddlers, who were all very merry, not forgetting the little page boy. Much credit is due the committee, Mrs. J. A. McQueen, Mrs. Alex. McNeil, Miss Finnie McCuaig, Mrs. A. N. Stewart, Mrs. Jas. Urquhart, Mrs. K. N. McIntosh, who had the arrangements in hand. The miscellaneous booth was a lovely sight with its fancy goods, home made candy and baking, all offered at a very fair price, was soon readily disposed of. The orange tree with its crepe oranges at ten cents each was a delight to both old and young. Ice cream and lunch were served and all enjoyed the evening very much. The proceeds amounted to about $119. The committee takes this means of thanking all who assisted in making the first W.M.S. Garden Party a success.

PRIDE IN PROVINCES AND COMMON IDEALS

Sounding the note of the home entente between the nine Provinces of Canada, representative women from all in-Canada gathered round the banquet table in the Exhibition Administration Building, Toronto, last week, thrilling their audience with inspiring messages of loyalty to one another and the whole-hearted plea for a better understanding. Though 1923 Women's Day has now entered the realm of things past and gone, the healthy fragrance of the sentiments expressed at this Dominion-wide gathering will linger for long days to come in the hearts and minds of the hearers.

A Message from Quebec

Her breast covered with medals, Madame Lavolette, who introduced herself as a daughter of Canada's oldest Province, rose amid cheers to present the first greeting. "I feel proud in being allowed to voice the sentiments of my fellow-citizens of both sections of the Province of Quebec, from which I come and in which my people have lived for three centuries," she said. "Quebec has at all times been whole-somely Canadian, while remaining true to the Empire. Thousands of its great and glorious sons served the cause of our country and of the Empire of which it once formed a part, when they were in danger."

With a voice trembling with earnestness of her appeal, Madame Lavolette begged her audience to understand the spirit and sentiments of the people of her Province, so that they might appreciate how patriotic and sincere they were to Canada.

Though for several years past a resident of Toronto, Miss Marshall Saunders, the well-known author, declared herself to be a true Nova Scotian, and, in delightful and amusing fashion told of some of the problems being faced by her own Maritime Province.

From Nova Scotia a friend had only a few days ago brought her one of those little "whispers of death," of which everyone had been reading in the newspapers. The Province was stagnating because Ontario and Quebec were outbidding in the various markets, and because so little had been done to strengthen trade relations with Canada's Atlantic Province and the British West Indies. Especially did Nova Scotia want West Indian sugar, so that its beautiful red apples might be made into jelly and jam instead of rotting on the trees.

We would then have a real era of prosperity; we would even have the new Union Station open, and, yes, we would have bananas every day!

NEW IMMIGRATION POLICY FOR WEST

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—Any statement relating to immigration and colonization is now noted here with keen interest, the appointment of a Minister of Immigration having quickened attention to such matters. For this reason the cable from London quoting Sir George McL. Brown's statement in the London morning Post on the Canadian Pacific's new colonization policy, which, he says, encourages mixed farming with smaller and more numerous agricultural holdings, has received more than ordinary notice.

This is pretty much in line with the opinions shared by ministers and Government officials who are charged with special responsibility for western policy. Minister of Agriculture Motherwell is one of the strongest advocates of mixed farming; Hon. Charles Stewart favors it, as does Minister of Immigration Robb, while it is understood that the opinions of Hon. T. A. Low, who has announced that he will pay special attention to western problems, run along the same lines.

This does not mean that these persons hold the west in less high estimation as a wheat-producing country; it only means that they deem it unwise that dependence should be placed on one crop alone. In other words, it is considered bad policy for the settler to put all his eggs in one basket.

PRODUCTION OF WHEAT . . . Agricultural experts here do not share the view of some that there is a strong probability that the production of wheat may be overdone. They point out that while the wheat acreage in some countries will undoubtedly be reduced, still this will probably happen only in those countries that are least able to produce wheat profitably and who only got into it to that extent through the pressure of the demand. The marked increase in the spring wheat acreage in Canada during the past ten years, while that in the United States has been greatly reduced, convinces Canadian agricultural experts that the future of spring wheat growing in North America lies undoubtedly with Western Canada.

They say that the higher price of land, with much higher taxes and higher costs generally, is steadily working in favor of the Canadian West.

It is also pointed out that the increase in mixed farming in the west will increase the demand for labor all the year round, the engaging of it for only the seeding and harvesting periods, as is so general today, being one of the chief drawbacks to the securing of an adequate labor supply. The bringing of harvest hands from the British Isles is considered a piece of good policy if being remarked that the best evidence of this is that, of nearly 50,000 harvesters carried into the prairie provinces during the last five weeks, practically all have secured work, the dissatisfied being apparently confined to a couple of hundred. This quick absorption of labor is looked on as one of the most striking features of western life in the last ten years and, moreover, is thought to be a sure indication of a big wheat crop.

BIG WORLD EVENTS:

THEIR SIGNIFICANCE.

by William Banks.

It would almost appear that the Irish Free State elections result had inaugurated a constitutional government in the South of Ireland strong enough to conduct general elections until the next general elections are held. Moreover, it is a government which apparently realizes that the progress of Ireland, and more especially of its agricultural population, depends upon the retention of connection with Britain. The proportional representation system under which voting was held, delayed announcement of the results, but out of the plethora of parties the government seems to have enough of its own pledged candidates returned and a sufficiency of independents who will support it to make its tenure of office reasonably secure. If the Republicans stick to their pledge of refusing to take their seats unless they had a majority, the Government will have an easier time. The threat of the Republicans that in the event of their defeat, by the ballot they would again resort to arms, loses some of its sting now that de Valera is a prisoner. With him in their hands President Cosgrave and his colleagues have a great advantage in their endeavor to maintain peace in the Free State. They have shown themselves capable of meeting force with force when the necessity arises, and of carrying on with statesmanlike ability in peace. It is to be hoped that a new and a happier era is dawning for Ireland.

PRESIDENT COSGRAVE of the Irish Free State

Parisian newspaper are now suggesting that the way is open for new conferences of the allies on the reparations issue. They suggest that on returning from his European holiday Premier Baldwin of Britain should stop in Paris for a few days and discuss the question with Premier Poincaré. The very close relationship that exists between the press of Paris and the Government of France means that this suggestion is officially inspired and is, therefore, of first class importance.

Another link of communication between this and the European Continent is now being forged, a new cable from Far Rockaway in the United States to France via Nova Scotia and the Azores will soon be laid and ready for work. It is promised for it that it will be another annihilator of time, being capable of carrying letters at a rate of 600 per minute in each direction. With practice even this rate will be exceeded. As time goes, it is not so long since the first deep sea cable was laid. There has been vast improvement in the sending capacity since the early days when Queen Victoria and the President of the United States exchanged messages which travelled under sea. It has been prophesied for wireless that it will eventually be the sole means of distance communication. One remembers the claim made that electricity would shortly displace steam railway engines. The whole effort of railway companies to-day is to turn out steam-engines that will haul longertrains faster than those run on the lines of their rivals. The cable is likely to be a message carrier long after the present generation has passed, and will probably be an auxiliary of immense value long after the wireless age has really arrived.

Secretary of State Hughes, though ostensibly in Canada to address the Canadian Bar Association at Montreal, will discuss with Canadian Government members and officials a number of matters of direct interest to the two countries. One of the most important of these from the American point of view is the question of run-running. Co-operation of Canada in putting a stop to it has been urged in official requests from across the border. Admitting that Canadian authorities have some difficulty in refusing clearance papers where such seem to be warranted, it must also be confessed that this country is not making a very good reputation for itself in this regard. It is quite obvious that many of the cargoes for which clearance papers are granted are not destined to go to South American Republics. How far Canada should go in compelling an observance of the law imposed by another country, is a debatable question. Probably United States smugglers are helping to break Canadian laws as much as smugglers from this side are helping to break laws of the United States. Officialdom in both countries might, perhaps, give more mutual help than is now the case.

Spain seems to be hopelessly involved in the Moroccan War. The tribes in her sphere of influence have never ceased hostilities for any lengthy period. Various treaties have been ignored, each side accusing the other of playing false, but it is probable that the native "rebels," as Spain is pleased to call them, have little regard for undertakings which are not backed up by successful military operations against themselves. Morocco at this time is a centre of interest for more than Spain. The question of dominance in Tangier will be the subject for discussion at a conference of interested powers with France claiming more than any of the others is willing to concede to her. The French are also conducting a campaign against tribesmen in the hill regions in a section where their influence is agreed to by the other powers. They are meeting stubborn opposition, but they have plenty of men and an abundance of war material of the most modern kind, backed up by leadership which proved itself in the Great War. The opposition of the tribesmen to the conquest of Morocco has undoubtedly been inflamed by the success of Turkey in its Peace victory over the powers.

While speculation is still rife as to the aggregate of the Western Canadian crop, it is gratifying to find that our exports of wheat for the twelve months ending July 31, were 228,849,410 bushels as compared with 150,935,339 bushels in the previous twelve months. Moreover, the exports for July of the present year were over 12,000,000 bushels as compared with somewhat over 9,000,000 bushels in July of 1922. The United Kingdom, Italy, Belgium, Germany, Portugal, The Netherlands, France, Japan, Norway, Denmark, British South Africa and Sweden, were the purchasers in the order named as regards bulk, of our wheat in the last twelve months. That is a range which once more emphasizes the growth of Canada's British and foreign trade relations.

Amalgamation, absorption or suspension—call it by any name one chooses, the fact remains that the disappearance of well-known Canadian banking institutions is causing a public uneasiness which is widespread. There has been nothing in the nature of a panic over the suspension of the Home Bank and the absorption of the Bank of Hamilton by the Canadian Bank of Commerce but there has been a great deal of questioning on the part of the people and there will be a great deal more. Canada has come through a very trying period with considerable credit to the financial institutions of the country, and the future is full of promise. There must, however, be a solid foundation of faith if progress is to continue. The financial institutions, more than any other body or individual, have the making of that foundation in their hands.

Recognition of Mexico by the United States should be a very good thing for the former country. Relations between the two were strained for a long period, more particularly during the activities of Pancho Villa, the noted bandit, whose death recently was a relief to the governments on both sides of the border. President Obregon, one-armed soldier who restored order in a country distracted by revolutions, which in many cases were simply cloaks for bands of plunderers to carry on their work, seems to have secured the support of the best elements in Mexico. His country and the United States, as result of a series of conferences, have practically agreed on the settlement of outstanding claims against one another. It is interesting to Canada that the report of recognition comes at a time when Mexico is making an excellent display of its produce and manufactures here, and it is noted official band is playing in this country. There is a large amount of Canadian money in the oil and other enterprises in Mexico.

The Allied evacuation of Turkey, in accordance with the agreement at Lausanne, is about completed. So is the Peace victory of the Turks, who are now busily engaged in compelling the withdrawal from areas over which they still have control, of the remaining Greeks and Armenians. It may yet be found that the Turks will be the greatest losers by the massacre or expulsion of Armenian and other foreign populations which carried on a very large part of the industry and commerce of the country of their adoption.

Italy is in a militant mood. She demands an immediate settlement with Yugoslavia of the Fiume question and she wants that settlement to favor her own claims. She also was prompt to adopt a stern attitude against Greece in the matter of the murder of all members of the Italian mission engaged with French and British missions, in settling the frontier between Greece and Albania. The Greek government is alleged to have inspired the campaign of hate against the Italians in particular, because their leader, General Tellini was head of all the missions. He and his staff were ambushed and shot to death on Grecian territory by parties unknown. Greece seems to have a faculty for making trouble for herself.

Italy's bombardment of Corfu with the result that fifteen people, mostly Greek and Armenian refugees were killed, and the seizure of Corfu and Samos Islands has dazed Europe and brought near danger of a new general war. Corfu was an easy prey without the use of the guns of the warships, and it will be difficult for the Italians to explain themselves. They propose to blockade the ports of Greece and to seize Greek Customs until their demands for the slaying of the Italian mission engaged in the delimitation of the boundary between Greece and Albania are satisfied. Greece was given short time to accede to these demands which most European observers consider were humiliating, but had agreed to some of them while asking time for the consideration of others. Italy taking this as an ovation has proceeded to acts of war without any reference to the league of Nations of which both countries are members. The situation is complicated by the fact that Roumania and Yugoslavia with Greece are members of the little Entente which organization France has many agreements and alliances. Yugoslavia at the same time is said to have agreed to all the Italian demands respecting Fiume in regard to which there has been considerable friction. It looks as if Italy had determined to clear up all matters relative to her ambitious in the Mediterranean and adjacent territories regardless of France or anybody else. If she is obdurate in the matter of referring her claims against Greece to the league of Nations, and if that body fails in the effort to bring the two nations together peacefully, then the league's usefulness has received a deadly blow. Meanwhile, one may wonder how far the commitments of France in the Ruhr have been responsible for the new developments.

Allan Crawford, a Toronto man 22 years of age, and all other white members of the party which planted the British flag on Wrangel Island in the far north, are dead according to briefs despatches from Alaska where the ship which went to relieve them has arrived. The only survivor of the expedition was an eskimo woman. Russia had protested against the holding of Wrangel Island and had made a claim thereto.

Twenty Uses for Lemons

Few people realize the value of lemons, which cannot be over-estimated. Two or three slices of lemon in a cup of hot, strong tea will cure a nervous headache.

A teaspoon of lemon juice in a cup of black coffee will relieve a bilious headache.

The juice of half a lemon in a cup of hot water on awakening in the morning is an excellent corrective.

A dash of lemon juice in plain water makes a cleansing tooth wash.

A lotion of lemon juice and rose water will remove tan and whiten the skin.

Lemon juice with olive oil is considered by many as far as superior to vinegar for salad dressing.

Lemon juice and loaf sugar are good for hoarseness.

Outward application of the juice always irritates caused by insect bites.

A refreshing drink is made by adding a freshly-beaten egg to lemonade and the same mixture when frozen makes a delicious ice.

If when boiling sago or rice a teaspoon of lemon juice is added the kernels will be whiter and a delicate flavor is added.

An old-fashioned remedy for croup is lemon juice, honey and alum.

We all know the value of lemon juice and salt for removing rust stains from white goods.

After the juice is extracted the rind dipped in salt cleans brass beautifully and conveniently.

It also removes unsightly stains from the hands.

For flavoring cookery lemon juice is unexcelled.

After the pulp is removed the skins makes dainty receptacles for serving salads, ices, etc.

Tough meat may be made tender by adding a teaspoon of lemon juice to the water in which it is boiled.

Slices of lemon garnish fish of all descriptions.

Tea is greatly improved by the addition of a slice of lemon, either iced for summer's use or as Russian tea on a winter's day.

OUNCE OF PREVENTION

It is easier to keep milk clean by keeping the dirt out of it than it is to clean it after the dirt has contaminated it. A clean udder will go far toward clean milk, and a few seconds spent in wiping the udder with a clean, damp cloth will prevent much future trouble.

OLD ROMANCE RECALLED.

Princess Louise of Belgium Disobeyed Her Father.

The elder generation of European court society had the days of past romance vividly recalled by news from Prague recently that Count Geza Mattaschich, erstwhile husband of Princess Louise of Belgium, had been suddenly stricken with paralysis. His condition, in addition to his abject poverty, has forced the princess to find refuge in the home of her sister, the Countess Lonyay, who was the wife of Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria.

The families, once dependent upon the bounty of the late King Leopold of Belgium, Louise's father, have responded belatedly with condolences and offers of pecuniary assistance. She will not return to the former riding master, however, but continue alone the legal battle she has waged in Austrian and Belgian courts for fourteen years, in an attempt to recover a more equitable division of her father's estate. Her husband is in a sanitarium.

The romance of Mattaschich and Louise was one of the most celebrated episodes of the last century. After a duel with one of the most prominent Austrian courtiers, Prince Phillip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Louise's first husband, the young Lieut. Mattaschich, found himself a penniless exile from Vienna. Louise had been confined to an asylum because of this treatment of her lover, but was rescued by Mattaschich and his friends. The couple bolted to Paris, going later to England, where they lived in poverty till public disapproval forced European royalty to intercede. The sentence of banishment was lifted, and certain allowances of money were made by Louise's relatives.

The couple's estates, however, were not restored to them, Leopold's will practically disinheriting the daughter who had disobeyed him and had checkmated a king who turned the Belgian Congo into one of the world's greatest commercial enterprises.

Recently Louise found her monthly allowance of 120,000 marks received from the Grand Duchess of Schleswig-Holstein inadequate and brought an action against the heirs of Prince Phillip for the restitution of some personal property. She is now with the Countess Lonyay at Castle Ordshaza, in Hungary. Louise lived with Mattaschich for years before they were married, which occurred after Phillip's death. But the wedding failed to conciliate her relatives, among whom were the Baroness Vaughn, Leopold's favorite daughter, who received the major share of his estate, and the present King Albert of the Belgians, her cousin. What personal possessions she had were spent or confiscated during the war. She is a niece of former Empress Charlotte of Mexico, who lost her mind following the execution of her husband, Maximilian, and lives to-day in the Castle Bouchout, near Brussels.

Can Animals Talk?

A doctor declares that, although his dog says "out" quite distinctly when he wants to go out, reports of speaking dogs are fallacious. The animals may emit sounds which resemble words, but it is impossible that they are trying to talk.

A French scientist tried to teach a monkey to talk, and got it to say "feu" (French for "fire") whenever a match was struck. The scientist smiled when asked why he did not teach the animal English. Really the animal enjoyed blowing out the flame!

It has been estimated that the maximum vocabulary of monkeys is about thirty "words"—a word being a definite cry common to all members of the species, and indicative of an emotion.

The more intelligent lower animals have word perception, but are entirely lacking in word expression. Dogs have a relatively large perceptive vocabulary of proper names compared with common nouns, verbs, and adjectives, but this merely suggests association of sounds with objects or actions. One dog knew fifty persons by their names.

Ants as Housemaids.

For its size there is no creature more terrible than the ant. The small kinds we know in this country are comparatively harmless, but in South America there are several species that would cover a shilling with ease. Fiercest of them are the Army Ants, which organize themselves into battalions.

At certain times of the year these insects move in dense masses along the narrow forest paths. No living creature, not even the jaguar or the tapir, can face them. If any animal failed to move out of the way of the army they would simply pass over it, each ant taking a bite without stopping, and in a few minutes nothing would be left but bones.

Amongst these ants there are special classes. The fighters have huge jaws, almost as big as their bodies. The workers collect food and build the colony, but they do nothing of the tiding up, which is the work of a special class of housemaid ants. Others make massage their particular duty. When tired workers come in the masseurs take charge of them, rubbing down their weary limbs.

Ruins of Old Convent.

On St. Margaret Island, a well-known summer resort in the Danube, near Budapest, excavations have just disclosed the ruins of a Dominican convent founded in the fourteenth century. In the centre of the ruins a flower garden has been uncovered. At the corner there appears to have been a fountain, surmounted with four bulls' heads. It is intended to restore these ruins. There has also been traced in the neighborhood of this convent the remains of a church of Premonstratensian monks dating from before the invasion of Hungary by the Tartars in 1241. These ruins, which have been covered with earth by successive floodings of the Danube, will be taken in hand and restored as far as possible.

The Importance of Being Pretty

Many a girl's fortune is determined by her face. A skin which is fresh, smooth and alluring with the radiance of health, predicts a happy future, because this is the greatest of all womanly charms.

Every girl can have a beautiful, attractive skin if she will only learn to give it proper care.

The constant application of cold creams, lotions, powder, and rouge tend to make the skin sluggish and inactive. Dirt accumulates and blackheads and other blemishes appear.

Thorough cleansing once a day prevents such a condition and keeps the complexion fresh and smooth. Cold Cream is beneficial when applied to a clean skin and rouge and powder are harmless beautifiers—but—start fresh every day on a clean foundation. Keep your skin active and it will be clear, fresh, youthful and attractive.

Soap to be thorough, need not be harsh. The mildest toilet soap made is the most thorough of all cleansers, as you will know after you have once tried Palmolive.

HYMENEAL

GELINEAU-MACDONALD

At 8.30, Tuesday morning, Sept. 4th, the marriage was solemnized in St. Finnan's Cathedral of Mary Lucy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Macdonald, of Alexandria, and Mr. Peter Gelineau, of Toronto, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Gelineau, of Loehel, the Bishop of Alexandria officiating, assisted by Rev. Dr. McRae, Pastor. The main altar and sanctuary were adorned with cut flowers and potted ferns.

As the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, Miss Cnddon, the Cathedral Organist played Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The bride looked very sweet in her going-away costume of navy blue Poirer Twill and carried a bouquet of pink roses. She was assisted by her sister Miss Isabel Macdonald who wore a becoming gown of fawn Canton Crepe, her bouquet being of yellow roses. Mr. Val. J. Chisholm of Montreal, was bestman.

During the nuptial Mass the choir rendered several appropriate hymns very pleasingly.

Mr. and Mrs. Gelineau left immediately after the ceremony on their honeymoon which included a trip up the Saguenay and a visit to the Ancient City of Quebec and vicinity, and will later take up their residence in Toronto.

Both young people are held in very high regard and their legion of friends heartily join in offering congratulations and best wishes.

ROSS-ROSS-CARSON

The wedding took place at Bala, Muskoka, on Saturday, at the home of the bride's father, of Mary Kathleen elder daughter of Mr. A. H. C. Carson, of Toronto, to Mr. Donald De Courcy Ross-Ross, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ross-Ross, of Lancaster, Ontario. The bride was unattended, and wore a gown of grey tafeta, made in old fashioned style with basque bodice and bouffant skirt, hat and shoes to match and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Philip Ross-Ross acted as best man for his brother. After spending their honeymoon in Muskoka, Mr. and Mrs. Ross-Ross will reside at 164 A Mareil avenue, Notre Dame de Grace, Montreal.

Voice of West and East

Mrs. David Balfour, for Saskatchewan, told of that Province's natural wealth, emphasizing its importance as a wheat-producing country.

"A colorful little land of ruby, emerald and sapphire," was the way Prince Edward Island was characterized by its distinguished daughter, Mrs. Ewan McDonald, better known as L. M. Montgomery.

"It is a land where we still have real grandmothers and genuine old-maid aunts; it is a land where it is thought a great honor to have a minister in the family; it is a land where it would be safer to commit murder than to have less than three kinds of cake when company comes to tea," she said.

The burning question of the hour was touched upon upon by Miss Susy Bawden, representing Alberta, who urged that some effort be made by the Eastern women to procure a part of the 14,000,000 tons of coal produced in her Province each year.

Pledges to Service. Telegrams containing felicitations were read from Mrs. Nellie McClung, for Manitoba; Mrs. Isabel Eccleston MacKay, for British Columbia, and Mrs. Lawrence, for New Brunswick.

Mrs. W. F. Nickle, wife of Ontario's new Attorney-General, briefly summed up the part the women of this Province had played in obtaining much-needed legislation.

Miss Elizabeth McCallum, speaking for the Yukon, told of its great fascination and beauty, and of the wonderful spirit of loyalty and service imbued in its people.

A Tribute to Dr. Banting. A worthy tribute to Canada's great scientist and his work was paid by the women of the Dominion in choosing for their speakers Dr. Gladys Boyd and Miss Muriel Park, two young women who have been closely associated with Dr. P. G. Banting in his insulin discovery and experiments.

"None of the praise that has been accorded to Dr. Banting for his wonderful work has been at all exaggerated," Dr. Boyd declared at the conclusion of an interesting outline of the research work.

Miss Park, who had charge of the dietetic end of the work, read an illuminating paper on that phase of the treatment.

Mrs. Robert Miller, wife of the President of the Exhibition, presided. During dinner several bands of gipsy singers in bright costumes added to the enjoyment of the party with their merry songs.

Here and There

Protection of migratory birds has been added to the duties of the Canadian Pacific Railway's constabulary.

Airplanes attached to the Ontario Forestry Department are now equipped with radio sending apparatus so that they can keep in constant touch with the chief and other rangers.

There was an increase of sixty-three per cent in the number of immigrants to Canada during the last three months as compared with the corresponding period of last year.

Canadian Pacific agents in Britain recruited nearly five thousand men for work in the harvest fields of Western Canada and, through lack of steamship accommodation closed their doors on as many more who, attracted by the special harvest rate, sought to enter Canada.

The branch lines program of the Canadian Pacific Railway carried out this year will bring into operation on the prairies a larger mileage than any one year since 1914. Of the 431 miles of line under construction, 281 miles will be ready for handling grain in the Fall, and of the balance, 115 miles will be ready for steel by the winter freeze-up.

A building has been acquired by the University of Toronto to be entirely devoted to the manufacture of insulin. This will be the only factory in Canada to manufacture the curative fluid in commercial quantities and, although it is manufactured in the United States, Great Britain and Denmark, the Canadian product will be sold throughout the world.

Dawson City recently celebrated the twenty-seventh anniversary of the discovery of the Klondyke. In an exhibition of Yukon products cabbages 16 inches in diameter and weighing thirty pounds, potatoes as big as a man's head, pumpkins as big as watermelons, wheat, oats and barley bore witness to the fertility of the Yukon soil. Side by side with these ranged gold nuggets, gold dust and silver bars.

Dr. James Inches, Commissioner of Police, Detroit, and a guest at the Canadian Pacific Bungalow Camp at Nipigon, holds the record for the biggest speckled trout caught in the Nipigon River this season, having captured a fish weighing 7½ pounds. This catch was above the average, but a large number of six pounders have been taken from the Nipigon this season. Several years ago, and from practically the same place, Dr. J. W. Cook, of Fort William, caught the world's record speckled trout, which weighed fourteen and one-half pounds, and was more than two and a half feet long.

A record was established recently when one of the latest type of Canadian Pacific locomotives drew a train of 42 cars of newsprint, weighing more than 1,100 tons, from the plant of the Abitibi Pulp and Paper Company, North Bay, to Toronto, without mishap. Ordinarily, it would have taken two passenger engines to haul such a load for the 320 miles. After proving its worth by this feat the huge engine, together with an all steel train consisting of the latest model tourist, dining and sleeping cars, and a baggage and compartment car, formed part of the Canadian Pacific exhibit at the National Exhibition at Toronto.

The Little Things

By BERTHA M. REEVES.

When John Harris died leaving nothing but a few thousand dollars and his pretty cottage, no one was more surprised and bewildered than his pretty daughter, Betty. Brought up by an adoring but very busy father, and an equally adoring aunt, Betty Harris had already spent 22 years of her life in idle pleasure.

Every whim had been satisfied, until her selfishness completely buried every trait of a lovely, generous nature which really lay dormant in the girl's soul. She had not known or even cared that her father could afford to grant her every wish only by living up to every cent he earned, always hoping that his ship would come in and he would be able to lay aside something for a rainy day. But that time never came.

After the first shock of the loss of her dear father, it was Betty's aunt who really spurred the girl into action.

"What will become of us? Of course we must starve," she wailed, and finally Betty said:

"Auntie, I am going to work."
"To work!" almost shrieked her aunt, "to work! Oh, what would your mother say! Oh, dear, oh, dear!"

But Betty was determined, and to the surprise of neighbors and friends, she obtained a splendid position with Mr. Smith, head of the E. J. Smith Manufacturing Company. Mr. Smith was an old family friend.

Betty tried hard, and for the first time, life began to mean something more than bridge parties and country club dances. To be sure, she had her usual amount of invitations, for Betty prided herself not a little on her popularity with the opposite sex. One thing was lacking—Jack Burns, popular and rising physician of the town, no longer called to see her, and in her heart the girl was grieved and piqued.

The final blow came when, one night at a small select party, Betty overheard two girl friends talking.

"Well," said one, "we can't count on Betty for the bridge party Wednesday afternoon. She's working now."

"Oh, I know it," came back the petulant reply; "but, really, can you imagine Betty's working? It's a wonder she didn't marry some of her ardent suitors. What about Doctor Burns?"

The other girl answered quietly: "I like Betty, but I am sorry for her. She is so selfish, and doesn't realize this last act of working? Dr. Burns loves Betty even now, but his good sense told him she would never make a good doctor's wife. A doctor's wife needs qualities above the average to help him on to success. Maybe his apparent change of mind may open Betty's eyes. Let us hope so."

And Betty left the dance early, her face flushed, her eyes so bright with unshed tears that her aunt, in a flurry of nervous apprehension, dismissed the puzzled escort and put her niece to bed.

Once in her room alone, the girl waged a battle with herself, and self lost out. Only the loving eyes of her departed parents gazed from their places upon the wall, understood, and almost seemed to smile encouragement.

In the morning a new Betty arose, pale and quiet. She had no flippant reply for her aunt's anxious remarks—only kind assurances that she was better.

At work, Mr. Smith decided there was more to the girl than he had thought, and in the following weeks the girls in the office thought they were mistaken in their earlier impressions of the new secretary, and the young men thought that Miss Harris really wasn't the first she was reported to be.

Walking thoughtfully home one evening, Betty was interrupted by a small voice.

"Good evening, Miss Harris." Betty, amazed, beheld sturdy Bobby Lane, once her next-door neighbor; his great dog, Pal, and a funny "For Sale" sign perched upon a fence beside the road.

"Why, good evening, Robert," and, going closer, "what is for sale, you, Pal, or the fence, Bob?"

The child tried to smile, but lowered his head, a tear slowly rolling down his cheek and splashing on the sleek brown head of Pal, who promptly snuggled closer to the boy and raised appealing brown eyes to the girl.

"Why, Miss Harris, mother's sick and has had no work for a long time. I thought I could sell Pal. He—gets hungry, too, and he never complains. Oh, Miss Harris, do you think some nice, rich man will give a whole dollar for him?" The child came closer and gazed in eager appeal into the girl's face.

For the first time in her self-centered life tears of real pity came to Betty's eyes. She had known Robert's mother once, but the girl had married a poor young man, not in Betty's set, and Betty had promptly dropped her calling to see her only once after the death of her husband.

Not knowing what she did, the girl tore down the sign.

"Bobbie, dear, Pal is worth much more than one dollar. You must not sell him. Mother needs such a brave little boy and his faithful dog to care for her. We will find another way. Will you take me to see your mother?"

And as they walked along, hand in hand, the child talking eagerly, Betty was thinking. She remembered that Mrs. Lane once worked in an office, and suddenly an idea came to her. She put it from her, but it returned again and again.

As the trio trudged along, a big gray machine slid near them and stopped.

"Won't you folks ride the rest of the way to town?" asked the owner.

Betty raised her eyes, met the steady gaze of Dr. Jack Burns' dark eyes, smiled coldly, and said:

"No, thank you; it is such a beautiful evening we think we will walk." The young man hesitated, then lifted his hat and drove on wonderingly.

Once at Robert's home, Betty Harris piled the sick woman with eager questions, and left with a promise of returning surely before seven.

From there she hastened to a drug store to phone to whom she knew must be a thoroughly alarmed aunt. "Aunt," she fairly gasped, "don't keep dinner, I am working late tonight. Now, now, I'm all right. I'll be home soon." And without waiting to hear her aunt's protest she hung up the receiver.

Betty wanted to work fast; she was doing something which might make someone happy at last, but it was a sacrifice she didn't wish to think about.

Within ten minutes she was in the presence of her employer, pouring out the sad story of Bobbie Lane, his mother and Pal.

"Now, Mr. Smith," she added, "I am resigning—yes, sir, it is true. I want you to try Mrs. Lane in my place. She knows much more than I about stenography. Will you please give her the chance?"

Mr. Smith removed his glasses, wiped them, and replaced them before he replied.

"But, Betty, you said you needed the work. Are you quite sure you wish to make this change?"

"Oh, Mr. Smith," eagerly cried the girl, "I know, but please do not question me—only give her a trial. I know I am leaving you abruptly, but it isn't because I do not like my work or appreciate your goodness to me; but—I have other plans, and, oh, Mr. Smith, will you please try her?"

The manufacturer regarded the girl with a keen glance until her eyes dropped and a flush mounted her cheeks.

"Miss Betty Harris, your resignation is accepted, and Mrs. Lane is elected to fill the vacancy." Mr. Smith arose. As the girl stood up, he put his hand on her shoulder. "There may be a chance to help you whenever you want me to do so. I had no idea John Harris had such a kind and unselfish girl."

Betty dropped her head for a moment as though ashamed, but recovered her self-possession.

"It is not much, sir. It is such a little thing to do in a lifetime," she said.

"A little thing! Ah, but it is the little things that count in life," replied the man.

Some hours later Betty walked slowly home through the sweet-smelling June dusk. Her heart was singing; her eyes moist at the thoughts of the happiness she had left behind her. She knew that three new friends were hers at the end of this perfect day—Bobbie, his mother and Pal.

As she turned in at her own gate, the lights from the living room shone out to greet her.

But who was that? Yes, surely, some one was peering through the window, but it was not her aunt. The moon suddenly emerged as on gifted wings from behind a shadowy cloud. Its soft beams fell upon an object drawn up close to the veranda. Yes, it was a car, long, glistening and pearly-gray.

POINTERS FOR THE RUNNER.

Things That Contribute to or Retard Speed in Footwork.

To run properly requires regular training, but some hints may be useful, says London Answers. Never lean forward. You will never see a crack sprinter in any other posture except an erect one.

All distances up to a mile should be run upon the toes. For longer distances one should run on the ball of the foot.

Be very careful not to overstride. Anything over seven feet four inches is too long a stride and will speedily tire the runner.

Care must be taken not to run heavily, for you will bruise the feet and jar the whole body. Nothing causes fatigue more rapidly than this jarring.

Do not kick up heels behind you, for this means wasted energy, and do not spread your feet widely apart. The best runners put their feet out in a perfectly straight line.

The arms from the shoulder should swing in unison with the legs, the right arm moving with the left leg and vice versa.

Sermon-strous of Her.

"Oh, George!" cried Ethel to her husband, "you really ought to have come to church with me this morning. Such a lovely sermon. I'm sure it would have done you good. All about dishonesty and stealing and petty meanness. No one could help feeling better for it. I do wish you could have heard it."

"Really, my dear," said George, trying in vain to stifle a yawn; "trying in vain to stifle a yawn; and—ah—did you walk home?"

"No. I took a tram. And I had such a stroke of luck. The conductor forgot to ask me for my fare, so I saved a nickel."

An Unacceptable Condition.

Jones—"I hear that you called upon old Grumper yesterday and asked his consent to your marriage with his daughter."

Smith—"That's so."

Jones—"What was the outcome?"

Smith—"Well, he imposed rather too severe a condition, which, fond as I am of Miss Grumper, I cannot see my way to accept."

Jones—"Indeed! And what was that, if it is a fair question?"

Smith—"Oh! Well, you. It's no secret. He said he'd see me hang first."

Had Comeback.

"Say, Blink," asked Jinks, as he walked into Blink's store, sample case in hand, "can a cowhide in a shoe store?"

Sicilian Feud in New York

Near the Sicilian town of Palermo in 1898 Ignazio Lupo, the proprietor of a small store, shot and killed one of his customers named Salvatore Morello. He escaped the police and fled to New York, where he became notorious as "Lupo the Wolf," head of a gang of Italian criminals. He was tried in absence as is sometimes the custom of Italian courts, and was found guilty and sentenced to a term of imprisonment. Italian law never reached Lupo, and only once did American law hamper his plans; but the murder near Palermo started a feud which has resulted in a score or more of murders in New York since then. Perhaps fifty would be a nearer estimate. A few days ago another chapter was added to the feud when a man named Vincent Salemi was shot by two men from a doorway. They rushed up the stairs, dashed across roofs and by using fire escapes and back yards got away. The police do not know who they were. No doubt there are more than a few Italians who know. A few months before, Salemi's brother-in-law was killed by a shot from a passing motor.

It would appear that Lupo adopted a life of crime as soon as he arrived in the United States, though it was not until 1903 that he got his name on the police blotter. In that year with Vito di Luca and "Petto the Ox" he was tried for the murder of Benedetto Madonio. The case was famous as the "Barrel Murder," because the body of the murdered man was found packed in a barrel. The men were acquitted, one reason being probably that Madonio was supposed to have been connected with a counterfeiting gang and that he had either tried to scare the accused into buying the bogus money or having supplied them with it had sought to collect his share of the spoil and had been murdered. Three years later Petto was found dead with sixty-two stab wounds in his body. Di Luca went to Italy and was murdered there. Lupo, however, remained unharmed and became a Mott street merchant. His name again appeared in the papers when he failed for $100,000 with no assets.

In the fall of 1909, the Washington Secret Service made one of the most sensational and important arrests of counterfeiters in modern times. The criminals were all Sicilians, and the leader of them was Lupo, while in the gang was his brother-in-law, Giuseppe Morello. For years they had been flooding the country with bogus $2 and $5 bills and through cunning and terrorism, the latter not stopping at murder, had eluded the police. Lupo got thirty years, and Morello twenty-five, the severest sentences ever handed out for counterfeiting in the United States. At the trial was a relative of the Morello who had been killed in Palermo and he announced his intention of following Lupo till he shot him. But after serving ten years Lupo was released and went to New York, and when he desired to return to them in 1922 he was held up by the immigration authorities. His present whereabouts is unknown. But his occupation can readily be guessed.

About the time of the trial the Italian quarter moved up town and the blackmailers who preyed upon it gave up their old haunts in lower Manhattan and Brooklyn. The Italians established themselves in 107th and 108th streets and the adjoining avenues. On First avenue, peddlers, junkmen and similar wagon dealers had their various lairs and stables. One of the latter became notorious as the "murder stable" in 1915 when three proprietors in succession were murdered, all of them supposedly connected in some more or less obscure way with the crime that Lupo had committed in Sicily. The murderers were never caught, and the police theory was that the place was a "den" for stolen horses. In those days the theft of peddlers' horses was an everyday occurrence. The owner would leave his wagon to enter a house, and when he returned his horse and rig would be vanished. In a day or so he would receive a letter telling him that for the sum of $100 he could recover the outfit. For fear of worse hefalling him he usually produced the $100.

A feed store not far off seemed equally unhealthy, for two proprietors were shot. These two murders were part of a series of eighteen straight which occurred among the Italians in a comparatively few months and within five minutes' walk of the notorious stable. Several of them were connected with the career of Glosue who called himself the "King of Little Italy" and who appears to have been the greatest ruffian after the imprisonment of Lupo. Glosue and his son Luca were murdered by a gang of men in their coffee house, where the "King" himself had seen two of his henchmen shot and killed a short time before by one Zopo, an Italian cripple, who had the hardihood to try and blackmail the ruler. Later on, Lupo himself was shot to death by two others whom Glosue had provided himself with. His henchmen received short sentences but Glosue was acquitted, leaving the court with the threat of another Italian in his ears that he would not live long. He survived a few weeks. The only hope of the New York police is that eventually all concerned in the ancient Sicilian feud will be killed. They have no expectation of arresting or convicting any of the murderers.

Discoveries.

That brilliant artist, Mr. Joseph Simpson, has a gift of repartee. The other day a friend remarked, "I see you are billed to write an article for one of the papers. I didn't know you could write."

"Well, if it comes to that," replied Simpson, "I didn't know that you could read!"
