

Farmers of Glengarry Organizing

That the farmers of Glengarry are fully alive to agricultural conditions today, at home and throughout the Dominion, and that the time is ripe for concerted action, was manifested by the large and representative gathering that filled the main hall of the Highland Society's Club Rooms, here, Tuesday night. They met at the call of Mr. Arch. J. Macdonald, Director for Glengarry of the Eastern Ontario Dairyman's Association and the interest displayed throughout the meeting which had for its consideration the organization of a Cheese Factory Patrons Association for the county of Glengarry, the object of which would be inter alia, the improvement of production, weighing, grading and marketing of cheese in co-operation with existing and similar organizations to be formed in the province.

It was also pleasing to see a number in the audience from the counties of Stormont and Prescott, who are also alive to the present situation and anxious for its improvement.

In opening the meeting, Mr. A. J. Macdonald, who was in the chair, brought out the many advantages that accrued from thorough organization in other business and the absence of such organization among the farming community, which was so absolutely necessary to ensure their welfare in the future.

Mr. H. S. Marjerrison of Apple Hill, gave a pen picture of conditions existing on the farm to-day and emphasized the dire necessity of such an organization for relief.

Mr. Geo. H. Barr, Director of Dairying, Eastern Ontario, in his opening remarks referred to his first visit to Alexandria, thirty-one years ago as the guest of the late Mr. John F. MacGregor. He was a firm believer in organization and always advocated it where it would benefit the farmer. No single factor had done so much in the past twenty years as the formation of the Cheese-makers Association which accounted for the improved quality of Ontario cheese. He told his hearers that Cheese Factory Patrons Associations had been formed throughout Central Ontario, were functioning satisfactorily and were receiving through his authorization every assistance possible at the hands of cheese inspectors. He favored formation of such a body here in Glengarry as there was great need for improvement in production and that thousands of Ontario cows were practically boarded. This past season, he said, the producers generally had furnished better milk than ever before and as a consequence our cheese, in spite of a difficult season, was improved in quality. To sum up there was a great need of a Cheese Factory Patrons Organization and through his inspectors in the district he would lend every aid for its formation.

Mr. Stephen O'Connor, speaking in French, gave a synopsis of Mr. Barr's address.

It was then moved by John McPhee, seconded by John G. McDonald that a Cheese Factory Patrons Association be formed in the County. The motion being put to the meeting was favorably received.

In discussion the Chairman read the by-laws of the Central Ontario organization which gave them an insight as to its objects and aims.

The meeting then proceeded with the election of officers as follows:

President—Mr. Horace Marjerrison, Apple Hill; Vice President—Mr. Douglas Cameron, Summerstown; Directors for Kenyon—Messrs. A. R. McDonald, F. McLeod and J. D. McRae; Lochiel—Messrs. N. Boulanger, Mal. McRae and F. Sabourin; Lancaster—Messrs. Rod. M. McLeod, W. J. Major and J. J. McDonald; Charlottetown—Messrs. C. McIntyre, Colin Campbell and Benet Conroy; Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. Arch. J. Macdonald.

It was decided to have the Board of Directors meet in the office of Mr. F. C. McRae, District Agricultural representative here, on Monday evening, October 31st, when the organization and adoption of by-laws will be proceeded with.

Important Pipe Order

The Ontario Wind Engine & Pump Co. has received an order for some 12,000 lineal feet of 8 inch wire wound wood pipe for St. Andrews East, water system now being installed; 5000 ft. will be made of California Redwood and the remainder of B.C. Douglas Fir. The above will give work to the factory for approximately three weeks. There is a probability of a further call for 4,000 ft. of a smaller size for a town a few miles East of Montreal.

With The Glengarry Plowmen At Ottawa

(J. W. McRae)

Quite a few farmers from our county visited Ottawa and the Dominion Experimental Farm during the week of the Provincial Plowing Match. They visited the plowmen in the fields and inspected the machinery on display in the tented city. Did they pause to consider the plowmen who competed in the different events to uphold the good name of our county? We were represented in all classes and types of plowing—Tractor by R. Fraser, Lancaster; high cut plowing by Duncan Thompson, Bainsville; plain and pointer flows by Rod McRae, Lochiel and Jack Thompson, Bainsville; double furrow plowing by J. Fisher, Bainsville.

The county team for the last day and all the four days' boy classes were represented by Graham Thompson, Bainsville, Donald McGillivray and Alexander Hay, both of Lochiel. The contestants from the county took one first, 2 seconds, 2 thirds and 2 fourth prizes in competition with plowmen from two provinces.

Simple words of praise would be inadequate to bestow on our county plowmen. They gave their best to uphold the traditions of our county. They plowed a good furrow, even to the best finish. What more can we demand? Their example should help us to do likewise.

The Honourable Mr. Weir, Minister of Agriculture, at the closing banquet stated that a good plowman made a good farmer, as it took patience, courage and perseverance to plow a good furrow to a finish. Patience, courage and perseverance were not lacking in our county plowmen who in spite of bad weather plowed day after day in all types of soil and under trying conditions, giving of their best even if their names did not appear at the head of the list.

We noted among the interested spectators from our county, our Federal member, Angus McGillis; our former champion plowman, William Wightman of Lancaster, who has always shown a keen interest in our junior plowmen, also J. Lockie Wilson, managing director of the Ontario Plowman's Association who delights to meet and encourage Glengarrymen and hosts of others who helped our plowmen by their encouragement.

Alexandria Defeated By Niagara Falls

In an exhibition box lacrosse game played at Chisholm Park here, Saturday evening, before a crowd of approximately one thousand spectators, the Niagara Falls team who are on a tour of Eastern Ontario defeated Alexandria to the tune of 10-5.

As Niagara Falls is in very good lacrosse territory and this team played off with Fergus, Ont., for the Championship of their senior group it was expected that they would field a good team and they did so, entering an aggregation made up of a number of veterans in the game, including several former Cornwall players.

The first period was fast and very keenly contested and showed every sign of a real good game. Niagara Falls got the first two counters, Bill Penny scoring on a pass from R. Cody and J. Warburton getting the other on an individual play, the locals then started to play lacrosse and notched four goals in less than ten minutes, Frank Morris counting on a pass from Frank McCormick, then McCormick got another on a neat play and Ray Morris followed this to score on further individual play. A very neat display of combination was then shown the spectators, when the locals again made a rush and just in front of the net a three way goal was executed, Bazil MacDonell to Frank McCormick to Ray Morris thence into the net. Just before time was called J. Warburton notched another for the visitors on an individual play. The period ending 4-3 in favour of Alexandria.

In the second both teams worked hard and only the splendid work of the goal tenders kept the scoring down, each team getting one, J. Nash counting for the visitors while Joe Marcoux scored for Alexandria on an assist from Bazil MacDonell. This session ending 5-4 again in Alexandria's favour.

In the third and fourth periods the Alexandria squad seemed to go up in the air as they could not score again while the visitors got three more counts in each session. Lack of condition told on our boys, doubtless to their only having one or two practices since their last game, nearly three weeks ago. In the third the scorers Bill Penny on an assist from R. Cody, A. Shaw on an individual play and the other was a fluke in off a defending players stick.

In the fourth, J. Warburton notched another on an assist from J. Nash while R. Cody and E. Downy each got one on individual plays.

The game was not as clean as it should have been for a friendly exhibition match but it could not be called rough either. Fifteen penalties were handed out, eight to Alexandria and seven to Niagara Falls.

The encounter was ably referred by C. McGillivray and Dr. H. L. Cheney. The teams.

Niagara Falls—N. Young, E. Downey, J. Nash, R. Cody, Bill Penny, A. Shaw, J. Warburton, Subs. C. Wilkins, H. Trapnell, J. Greene.

Alexandria—A. Danis, J. Gagner, M. Pilon, M. Pilon, C. McConnell, B. MacDonell, R. Morris, Subs. F. McCormick, J. Marcoux, A. MacDonald, W. Morris.

Egg Grading

Much has been written during the past year about the new egg grading regulations which the Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to enforce. We have heard the subject discussed from so many angles that frankly we are at a loss to understand why and for what reason it is all about.

We are to have a chance on Oct. 24th, next, at a meeting to be held in the Town Hall, Alexandria at 8.30 o'clock in the evening to hear Inspectors from the Department and others discuss and explain the new egg grading regulations. Everyone interested in farming, for at the present time the production of eggs is in many cases the bright spot for farmers, should avail themselves of this opportunity to hear just what is expected in the new regulations and the benefits to be derived from same.—J. W. McRAE.

Bogus Bills in Circulation

Cornwall, October 19.—Bogus $10 and $5 bills were in circulation here today and warnings have been issued to businessmen, not only in the city, but in surrounding centres. The bills are crude imitations of Royal Bank of Canada currency, the reverse side, in particular, being poorly done. All counterfeit bills received at local banks were soft and very dirty. They are believed to have been passed by two men who motored through Cornwall Monday, stopping at several restaurants and service stations.

Glengarry Military Badminton Club

What gives promise of a successful season for the winter game of Badminton was the large and enthusiastic meeting held in the office of Mr. Edgar Irvine, who very kindly lent his office for the occasion, on Monday evening 17th inst.

The election of officers was the first order of business—Honorary Presidents—Colonels A. G. F. Macdonald, J. A. Gillies; Hon. Vice President Lt. Col. W. J. Franklin; President, Capt. D. C. Cameron; 1st Vice Lieut. G. Kinloch; 2nd Vice C. Q. M. S. C. MacPhee Sec'y reas., Pte. Harold Stimson; Match Committee, Sgt. E. Bradley and Cpl. B. Macdonald; Entertainment Committee Mrs. D. J. Dolan, Mrs. D. A. Macdonald.

General discussion followed and it was decided that the fee should be three dollars with the exception of High School pupils who would be admitted for two dollars—all fees to be paid by the 15th November.

Further that the Armouries will be open for Badminton, Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings, also Saturday afternoon. It is planned to have an opening night in the near future, on which occasion prospective players will be initiated into the game by older members. It is to be hoped that many of our citizens will take advantage of this opportunity to learn and enjoy one of the best and most popular winter sports.

Wood Specialties Plant Destroyed By Fire

About 2.15 Tuesday morning the persistent sounding of the siren, always a dreaded warning, awakened our citizens generally and our fire brigade members in particular, the more so when it became known that the plant of the Wood Specialties Co., familiarly known as Schell's mill, was on fire with the flames spreading with rapidity.

The brigade responded quickly and four streams were in play in short order. It was evident that the mill and shop were doomed to destruction and efforts were made to save the office on the north side of the road and the foundry building, immediately west of the mill. Both buildings, however, were victims of the flames and while Mr. A. Lothian, owner of the plant, is a heavy loser, the Corporation of Alexandria and the Edgar Irvine Construction Co., which had goods stored in the foundry building, suffered materially.

Presentation To Mr. A. E. Richard

On Saturday evening, 15th inst. in the presence of a large gathering, at the Highland Society rooms, here, a fine black leather bill fold, was presented to Mr. A. E. Richard, who recently left for Hawkesbury, by the officers and members of the Alexandria Tennis Club.

Dr. M. Markson acting as spokesman made the presentation, and in a commendable way thanked Mr. Richard for the efficient manner in which he cared for the welfare of the Club and guided its destinies during his term of office.

The appreciation of the members of the Club was made manifest by the hearty applause which followed the genial Doctor's remarks and all wish Mr. Richard the best of success in his new sphere of work.

In responding the recipient thanked all those present for the sudden surprise they had given him and assured one and all that his predecessors during their terms of office had discharged their duties so faithfully and well that he merely followed in their footsteps and carried on the good work started by them.

Mr. Richard then made the presentation of the trophies, Miss Marion McGillivray, winner of the ladies singles trophy received the hearty congratulations of all for her skill and the excellent style of play she showed on the courts during the past season.

Mr. Winslow Lee, winner of the men's singles, was unable to be present to receive his trophy.

Several dance and vocal numbers during the evening with Miss McLeisler at the piano, proved most enjoyable.

A dainty repast was served and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of "For he's a jolly good fellow" and "Auld Lang Syne."

Mr. John D. McGillivray Killed When Truck Leaves Road

A fatal accident occurred on Monday night, Oct. 3rd, one quarter mile east of D. Cochrane's home, near Kirriemuir, Alta., when a light truck driven by Martin Anderson of Moutier district went over a high grade pinning the driver and J. D. McGillivray underneath; another passenger named Malcolm McSweyn was thrown clear of the wreck but stunded and injured about the head. The story of the accident as given to The Enterprise, Moutier, Alta., is as follows:

McGillivray and McSweyn had been thrashing near Provost and wished to get south, as Mr. McGillivray planned a visit with his cousin Mrs. Dan Chisholm at Naco, whom he had not seen in 20 years. They met Martin Anderson and arranged to ride with him to Moutier and the accident befell them near Kirriemuir.

When McSweyn recovered sufficiently to realize what had happened he found both men pinned under the truck, but he was unable to release them. He however secured assistance as soon as possible, but McGillivray was dead before the truck was removed from him with the aid of a team of horses. The other two were taken to the Consort Hospital and bandaged up somewhat, but were both able to leave again the following day.

The late Mr. McGillivray was a son of the late Donald McGillivray and Mrs. McGillivray, of the 18th Lochiel. He was 45 years of age and unmarried. Surviving are one brother, Malcolm McGillivray of St. Elmo and five sisters, Mrs. A. Deans and Mrs. Christina McKinnon, of St. Elmo; Mrs. Duncan Fletcher, of Dunvegan, Mrs. F. Bennet, of Lachine, Que., and Mrs. F. Bottom, of San Diego, Cal., Mrs. Dan Chisholm of Naco, Alta., and Mr. J. D. McCuaig, postmaster at Moutier, are cousins.

Mr. Chisholm and Mr. McCuaig wired relatives and on Wednesday word was received from the sister in California instructing them to bury the body at Consort. This was done on Thursday, the service being conducted at the cemetery by Rev. J. R. Brown, of Knox United Church, the pallbearers being D. B. Chisholm, J. D. McCuaig, Malcolm McSweyn, Geo. McFetridge, F. L. Wiltse and W. G. Burke. The remains were laid to rest in Consort cemetery.

Township of Roxboro Loses Prominent Son

At his home, in the township of Roxboro, on Wednesday, the 12th October, the death occurred of Mr. Angus C. Cameron, one of the most widely known and respected sons of that district. The deceased was born at Dunvegan, 78 years ago, being a son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Cameron and like many of Glengarry's sons, he, early in life, undertook the activities of public works construction.

In company with another Glengarryman, in the person of Dan Fraser, also a native of Dunvegan, Mr. Cameron played a very considerable part in the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Their contracts were in divisions as far west as the Columbia river.

At the outbreak of the Riel Rebellion in 1885 Messrs. Cameron and Fraser, owing to their equipment and knowledge of the country and it needs, were engaged by the federal government to transport supplies and equipment to the troops, in the territory menaced by the half-breed Riel and his Indian followers, and which, at that time, had not yet been linked by railway to the eastern provinces.

Upon completion of the main line of the C.P.R. the firm followed railroad contracting in several of the states of the Union, starting in Montana, their operations extended southward, their last contract being in West Virginia. Upon retiring from contracting some years ago, Mr. Cameron took charge of the Cameron farm, which his father had bought in the first concession of Roxborough, adding to his real estate holdings. It is now some time since his health began to fail, a stroke he sustained on September 26 was the immediate cause of his death.

Mr. Cameron never married. He is survived by four brothers and two sisters, A. Norman Cameron, San Diego, Cal.; Alexander in Vancouver, B.C.; John of Osnabrock Center, and Roderick, Maxville; and Dan MacKillican, Montreal, and Miss Mary, resident at home.

The funeral service was held from his brother's residence, Peter St. Maxville, Friday afternoon to St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, where the service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Dr.

The subject of the address by Rev. Dr. T. I. Forsythe, field secretary, was "The Project Method in the Church School."

"Give the child something to do, instead of doing everything for him," was his advice.

At the evening session, Rev. C. H. Daves had charge of the song service, which was followed by the worship period, conducted by Rev. Mr. Mathewson. The greetings of the young people's societies were conveyed to the association by Wilbert Crawford, president.

The nominating committee proposed the following as officers for 1932-33, which report was adopted: President, Mr. W. MacArthur; first vice-pres., Rev. G. N. Maxwell, Finch; 2nd vice-pres., D. H. C. Eastcott, Avonmore.

At the second session Miss Semmens had as her topic, "The Child's Approach to Religion." She stressed the value of music in worship, and also the importance of the story period, during the lesson hour.

The closing address of the convention was delivered by Rev. Mr. Forsythe, who spoke on "Importance of Sunday School Work."

Of Interest to Farmers

FERTILIZER TESTS OF REAL VALUE

For ten years crop fertility experiments have been conducted at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, in a plot field where the soil was a sandy loam in a comparatively high state of fertility, writes P. O. Ripley, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

In a rotation of turnips, oats, clover, timothy, 500 pounds of basic slag applied to the turnip crop in addition to 16 tons per acre of manure was followed by a ten year average yield of 892.8 bushels, as compared with a yield of 822 bushels where only manure was applied. The crops following the turnips showed practically no influence from treatments with basic slag.

In this field complete commercial fertilizers applied to potatoes in a rotation of potatoes, oats, clover, in light, medium and heavy applications, 450 pounds, 900 pounds, and 1,800 pounds respectively have been followed by no greater yields from the medium and heavy applications than from the light fertilizer. Twelve tons per acre of manure has produced slightly higher yields than have commercial fertilizers.

Basic slag and nitrate of soda applied to clover in a rotation of corn, oats, clover, timothy, have not been followed by economical increases in yield.

In a second field manure and commercial fertilizers have been compared from the standpoint of their influence upon crop yield in a rotation of mangels, oats, clover, timothy, for a period of twenty years. Both manure and commercial fertilizers have produced profitable increase in crop yields. Manure has shown up to slightly better advantage wherever it has been used, whether alone or in combination with commercial fertilizer. Oats have shown the least response to either commercial fertilizer or manure of any of the crops under consideration, while mangels suffer from lack of fertility sooner than the other farm crops.

From the results of these experiments several main points present themselves. Where soil is relatively high in fertility commercial fertilizers may not produce profitable increases in crop yield. Where manure is abundant its application to the soil is the most economical means of maintaining and building up soil fertility. If manure is limited it may be supplemented with commercial fertilizers to excellent advantage. Where no manure is available soil fertility may be maintained by the use of commercial fertilizers alone.

Fewer Brands Registered

The Fertilizer Division of the Dominion Seed Branch reports that fewer brands of fertilizer are being registered this fall than for several years past.

This may be attributed to the general slump in trade, but not altogether. In recent years fertilizer authorities in the different Provinces have been cooperating with the manufacturers with a view to reducing the number of formulae in fertilizers offered the farmers.

It is agreed that a range of formulae comprising not more than six or eight different mixtures is about all that is needed for general crop requirements in most of the Provinces. Naturally as manufacturers are required to manufacture fewer formulae, but increased volume of each of the formulae retained, their cost of production will decrease and farmers will be able to buy fertilizers at lower prices. It is, therefore, to the great advantage of the farmers to have the number of fertilizer brands or formulae reduced to a minimum.

It is suggested that farmers, who contemplate buying fertilizers, should communicate with the Department of Agriculture for the Province in which they reside, and receive a list of recommended formulae for the various soil and crop conditions. Such action on the part of the farmers themselves should aid in arriving at the most efficient and most economical formulae and in eliminating superfluous brands.

MINERALS ESSENTIAL FOR GROWING PIGS

If properly fed a young pig will increase its weight one hundred times in six months, or from about two pounds at birth, to about two hundred pounds at six months old. To produce this very rapid growth all the necessary elements, including minerals, must be provided. If minerals are lacking in the ration, the pigs become unthrifty in condition, and growth is much slower. Spring pigs secure the necessary minerals largely from pastures and from eating the freshly rooted soil. Minerals from these sources are not available for fall litters, which are fed mainly in dry lots and pens, and an adequate mineral ration should be provided, writes H.E. Wilson, Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta.

The minerals found in the ordinary home-grown hog feeds (oats and barley) are not sufficient to meet the needs of the rapidly growing hog and when these elements are lacking growth is immediately retarded. The mineral deficiencies in a ration can be remedied, however, by feeding supplementary mineral mixtures.

A simple mineral mixture which has been used successfully for a number of years at the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta, consists of 76 pounds of slack coal, 20 pounds of salt, 3 pounds of air-slacked lime or ground limestone, and 1 pound of sulphur. The mixture is fed in boxes, or in separate compartments of the self-feeder to which the pigs have free access.

Feeding tests conducted at Lacombe indicate clearly that when pigs get no dairy by-products, tankage, fish meal, or green feed, a mineral supplement should be fed furnishing lime and salt.

An experiment has been conducted over a period of two years to compare the rate and economy of gains of fall pigs receiving a ration of oats and barley only, with fall pigs allowed free access to the mineral mixture, above referred to, in addition to this grain. Both lots were self-fed and the mineral mixture was available to the one lot from a separate compartment of the self-feeder. The use of the mineral mixture increased the gains, on the average, by 52 per cent., and reduced the costs of gains by 34 per cent. In these experiments the pigs fed grain alone made, on the average a daily gain of only 0.63 of a pound, while those fed the mineral mixture in addition, made a daily gain of 0.96 of a pound. The cost of putting on 100 pounds live weight was reduced from $4.59 to $3.01. Feeding minerals to fall litters is not expensive and frequently makes the difference between profit and loss.

BUTCHERING TIME

Butchering time is about here for the early winter kill and with it an opportunity to turn a well finished pig or two into seasonable, satisfying, savory table delicacies, the like of which many city folk have never known.

There are many good formulas for making the different pork products. If one has a formula that satisfies, its use should be continued. Some good formulas and directions for their use are found in Farmers' Bulletin No. 1186, U.S. Department of Agriculture. Some of the more important ones are as follows:

Dry Cure Pork

For each 100 lbs. of meat use 8 lbs. of salt, 2 1-2 lbs. of molasses or syrup made from sugar and applied hot, 2 ounces of saltpeter, 3 ounces of black pepper, and 2 ounces of red pepper.

Mix the ingredients well. Rub the mixture over the meat thoroughly and pack it in a barrel, box or on a table. The third day break the pack and re-pack to insure thorough contact with the cure mixture, then allow the meat to remain until the cure is complete. This will take 2 days in cure for each pound that the individual pieces of meat weigh; for example, a 10-lb. ham will take 20 days. After the meat has cured hang it up for smoking without washing.

Sweet Pickle or Brine Cure

For each 100 lbs. of meat use 9 lbs. of salt, 2 1-2 lbs. of sugar, or 4 lbs. of molasses or syrup made from sugar, 2 ounces of saltpeter, and 4 1-2 gallons of water. If the weather is warm, 10 lbs. of salt are preferable. The ingredients are mixed together the day before the meat is to be started in the cure. Place the hams on the bottom of the container, shoulders next, bacon sides and small cuts on top. Cover with boards weighted with stones or brick. Pour the pickle solution in and be sure it covers the meat thoroughly. In 7 days take out all the meat, remove the solution, replace the meat in the container, and weight it down and cover with the pickle solution. Repeat this every 7 days until cure is complete. Allow 4 days for curing for each pound of ham or shoulder and 3 days for each pound of bacon and smaller pieces. A 15-lb ham will take 60 days; a 10-lb piece of bacon 30 days. When each piece has received the proper cure remove it from the pickle, wash in lukewarm water, string it and hang in the smokehouse.

Pickled Pigs' Feet

Place the pigs' feet in a salt pickle for several days. Then boil them for a varying length of time, depending on the size, taking care to remove them from the kettle before the separation of meat from the bones. Split the feet lengthwise, place them in a jar or other receptacle, and cover with vinegar to which bay leaves, allspice, and whole black pepper have been added.

Pure Pork Sausage

The proportions are 65 lbs. of fresh lean meat, 35 lbs. of fat, 1 3-4 lbs. of salt, 2 ounces of fine sage, 1 ounce of ground nutmeg, 4 ounces of black pepper. Cut meat into small pieces, mix and add the seasoning, and then put through the grinder, using the small plate. Mix thoroughly after grinding to insure uniform distribution of season. No water should be added if sausage is to be stored in bulk. If it is to be stuffed into casings a little water may be necessary to soften the meat so it will slip easily into the casings.

Smoked or Country Sausage

The proportions or ingredients are 85 lbs. of lean pork, 15 lbs. of beef, 1 1-2 to 2 lbs. of salt, 4 ounces of black pepper, 1 ounce each of red pepper, sweet marjoram, and mace. Cut meat into small pieces, mix thoroughly and sprinkle on the seasoning, then run through the grinder, using the small plate. Put it away in a cool place for 24 to 36 hours, then add a little water and stuff into casings and smoke in a very cool smoke until a dark mahogany color is obtained.

Headcheese

The head is most frequently used for making headcheese. The head should be clean, the snout skinned, and nostrils cut off just in front of the eyes. Cut out the eyes and eardrums. The fattest parts should be used for lard. When the head is cleaned and prepared as above, soak it in water for some time to extract the blood and dirt. After this cover head with water and boil until the meat separates from the bones. Tongues may be cooked with the head. When thoroughly cooked take out meat, save the liquor for future use. Chop the meat up fine, Season with the following for every 50 lbs. of meat: 2 gallons of liquor saved from the cooking, 1 1-2 ounces of salt, 3 ounces of black pepper, 1 ounce of red pepper, 4 ounces of ground cloves. All should be mixed thoroughly so that proper seasoning is obtained. If the meat is stuffed into casings it should be boiled again in the same liquor in which the meat is boiled. The meat in the casings should be boiled until it floats, then placed in cold water for a short time. Store it away in a clean, cool place on a shelf or table. If casings are not available the meat should be kept in shallow pans.—Hoard's Dairyman.

EAT CELERY FOR HEALTH

It is doubtful if any of the common vegetables can compare with celery as an aid to general health. Most physicians agree that as a blood purifier and for ridding the body of toxic substances, this vegetable is in a class by itself.

Like most leafy vegetables, the purpose of celery in the diet is not to provide heat or energy, but rather to furnish the vitamins, minerals and other secondary food so essential to good health. As a source of minerals, celery ranks high among the vegetables, being particularly rich in lime and magnesium. For this reason it is a great blood regulator and tends to combat any tendency to excess acidity. Celery is also a valuable source of vitamins, being one of the best for vitamin B.—Dominion Fruit Branch.

Majority of Headaches Traced to Eye Strain

Seven out of ten headaches are caused by eye strain due to neglect of ordinary eye care, pointed out M. J. Julian of the Better Vision Institute, in a speech in Boston before a group of eyegist specialists. Other ills, such as insomnia and indigestion, are also traceable to this cause, he pointed out, and yet 40 per cent of the people of this country need glasses and are trying to do without them.

"The eyes are such faithful servants that we are inclined to forget the burdens we put upon them," said Mr. Julian. "Particularly in this age where men are pushing their investigations farther and farther into the realms of stars and atoms and where most manufacturing processes depend upon fine precision, the tax upon the eyes has become far greater than we realize. The nervous energy possessed by the body is limited, and the eyes, if they perform this additional labor unaided, steal some of the energy required for other functions. Lenses especially adapted to the work in hand are necessary to relieve the strain on the eyes and release the stolen energy through the intended channels. Proper eye care is more needed in this age than in any other."

Greek Legend Gave Us Augean Stables Story

In Greek legend Augeas was a king of Elis who possessed a herd of 3,000 sacred oxen whose stalls had not been cleaned for 30 years. The cleaning of these stalls in a single day was one of the 12 difficult and dangerous labors imposed upon Hercules by Eurystheus, king of Argolis. Hercules, who was promised a tenth part of the cattle in payment, succeeded in performing the task within the required time by turning the rivers Alpheus and Peneus through the stables. Augeas refused to turn over any part of the cattle to Hercules on the ground that he had carried out the commission in the service of Eurystheus, whereupon Hercules sent an army into Elis and destroyed the insolent king and his sons. Figuratively, cleaning the Augean stables means to clear away an accumulated mass of corruption or filth or to reform wrongs almost past the power of man to remedy.

Manila Up to Date

Venice of the Orient is one of the names given to Manila of the Philippine islands. The name comes to it because it is situated on both banks of the Pasig river and enjoys some canal life from the river. These waters provide a lot of bridges for the city suggestive of the Rialto of the Old world.

Thirty-five years ago the city had no drainage system and a heavy rain made hoats on the streets a necessity. Around the Intermuros, or walled city, which is most typical of its Spanish days, were walls and a moat dating back to 1590, two miles long and 25 feet high. Today the moat is given up to fine driveways and only the bridged river and canals remind the tourist of a city of islands.

The Postgraduate Wife

She asks her husband occasionally if he thinks there is any real danger in the political situation. The time most favored by experts for this question is when he has only five minutes in which to make his train.

She never unfolds his morning paper. Few, even from the post-graduate school, develop sufficient technique for this important detail within five years.

She takes charge of, reads and returns all books lent him by his friends and gives him a few sentences which enable him to talk about them if cornered.—Kansas City Star.

Vienna Old and Beautiful

Vienna, founded 2,000 years ago by the Romans, destroyed and rebuilt several times, is still a queen among modern cities, although it is no longer the residence of an imperial court. It has a famous opera, by many considered among the best in German-speaking lands. It certainly has the oldest tradition; dating back into the Seventeenth century. The public buildings, palaces, galleries, educational institutions, theaters and museums offer an inexhaustible fund of beauty and instruction.

Shiny-Headed Monster

At three o'clock in the morning we were awakened by a loud knocking at the door. On looking out of the window, we saw a queer looking beast about six feet long, having four legs, no neck and a shiny head three feet long. Before we could get a gun it disappeared in the darkness. We thought it an escaped animal from the circus. The next morning, cautiously walking, we found a big stray pig with its head tightly wedged in a ten-gallon milk can.—Farm Journal.

Permission or Command?

The first-grade teacher in Sheridan, Ind., was drilling her pupils in the use of "may" and "can" and was directing a game wherein the pupil designated asked some one a question using either of the words as he thought best.

One little girl asked a ruddy-faced boy opposite her:

"Jack, may I wash the dishes?" "Yes, you may," Jack retorted; "and make it snappy!"—Indianapolis News.

Eagle Long Associated

With Pomp and Majesty

The Persian monarchs adopted the eagle as a symbol of monarchy, the Assyrians carved it in stone along with their other emblems of power, as did the Egyptians also. Poets of antiquity termed it the king of birds as the lion was dubbed the king of beasts.

From the time when a Tuscan embassy visited Rome, on a message of kindness and encouragement to a young nation, hearing among other gifts a splendid royal scepter surmounted by a carved ivory eagle, such majestic figures, first of wood, then of metal, were the standards borne by the Roman legions. Napoleon Bonaparte, in boastful emulation of those conquerors of the world, replaced the oriflamme and other battle flags of France with gilded eagles, which, however, disappeared with the Napoleonic dynasty.

Russia, Prussia, Spain, Poland, Sicily, and Sardinia had already made the eagle their national bird, as did later the United States.

Nor can the respect this powerful and rapacious bird evoked from mankind generally be wondered at, when its size, its powers of flight and of attack, its dignity in repose and on the wing, its ferocity and its beautiful parental care of its young are taken into account.

"First Citizen" Worried

Over Supply of Butter

That butter was used generously in the George Washington household back in 1759 is disclosed in Washington's diary. Procuring enough butter was a problem for Washington despite the fact that several hundred cattle roamed his pastures. During the winter of 1760 he was short of this necessary article for cooking and table use. On January 7 of this year he writes:

"Accompanied Mrs. Basset to Alexandria and engaged a keg of butter of Mr. Kirkpatrick, being quite out of that article." And the next day he says: "Got a little butter from Mr. Dalton." On Sunday, January 20, he not only received more butter, but other supplies. Listen to this: "My wagon, after leaving two hogheads of tobacco at Alexandria, arrived here with three sides of sole leather and four of upper leather, two kegs of butter, one of which for Colonel Fairfax and 15 bushels of salt."—Hoard's Dairyman.

A Modern Child Says:

"I had a hard time keeping my face straight today when I was sent out in the car with father and he told me he had decided it was time for me to learn to drive. He picked out a nice quiet road and showed me how to start the engine, shift the gears, set the brakes and everything. You can't imagine how much he enjoyed showing me. It made me ashamed, really, and almost sorry that I had learned to drive three years ago in Skinny Brown's car. But you should have seen how pleased and proud dad was when he stalled the engine on the railroad tracks while explaining to me how to avoid it and I spoke up and told him how to get off. He's telling the neighbors now how quick I pick things up."—Kansas City Times.

Far-Eastern Civilizations

The civilization of China goes much farther back than that of Japan. As a matter of fact, Chinese civilization was introduced into Japan about the first century A. D. In modern times, however, Japan has outstripped China in many respects, Japan having adopted western standards of living to a much greater degree. While Japan has shown a capacity equal to that of any other known people and, while their manners and customs and certain institutions were modified in ancient times by Chinese culture, they have kept pace with European and American civilization.

Poland's Scenic Beauty

Possessing a wealth and great variety of scenic beauty, Poland appeals strongly to the lover of nature. Especially alluring are the romantic and rugged peaks and the valleys and lakes of the Tatra mountains, which Poland shares with Czechoslovakia and which, on both sides of the border, are now studded with tourist centers possessing every modern comfort in the midst of virgin forests. The country is a huntsman's paradise, with almost every variety of game, including wild boar and bear.

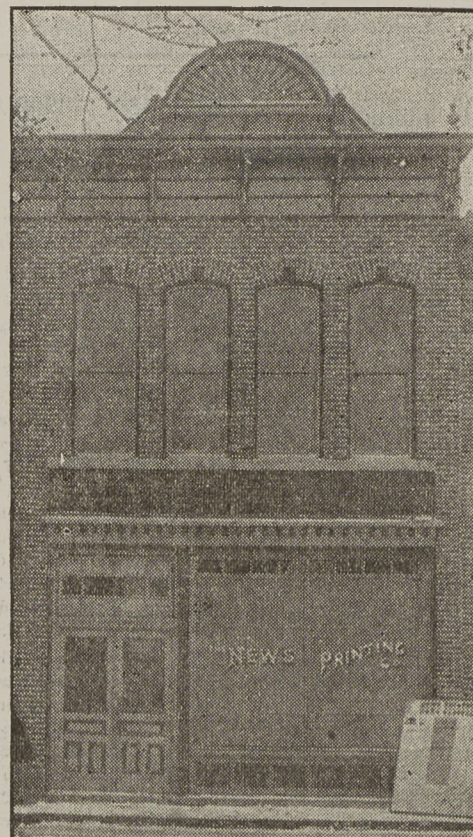

Early Aqueducts

As early as the year 312 B. C., Apis Claudius Caecus constructed an aqueduct which brought in a supply of water to Rome. The second aqueduct, known as the Anio Vetus, was constructed 40 years later. Toward the close of the first century A. D. there were nine aqueducts. Some of the structures still remain, both in Italy and in other parts of the former Roman empire, examples existing at Nimes, France, and at Segovia, in Spain.

Fasting the Best Way

Of Interest to Women

MAKING THE TEACHER FEEL AT HOME

So often when a new teacher comes into a town or community we hear the remark, "How do you like the new teacher?" Perhaps it might be well for people to also ask, "How does the new teacher like the town or community, and the people in it?" We, the parents of the pupils taught by the teacher or even if only a member of the community, can in many ways make the stay during the school year so pleasant and our little community so attractive to her that she will always think of her stay there as her best in her teaching career.

The town near which I live does more for its teachers than any town I know and it certainly creates a better feeling among all concerned—teachers, parents, pupils, and townspeople. Nearly every society or organization in town does something during the school year complimentary to the teacher. Early in the school year the women's club gives a party, banquet, or often just a tea, to which the teachers of the town are all invited and made acquainted with all present. Then the church societies and different Sunday School classes find out the church affiliations of the different teachers and invite and make them feel welcome in the church of their choice. The lodges do the same and entertain in a special way just for the teachers.

The entertaining is not elaborate nor expensive but just done in some way to make the teachers feel welcome and at home. Of course, individuals also invite the teachers, or at least the teacher of their child or children into their homes which is right. Every parent can at least visit school and invite the teacher into the home. This helps one's children more than you know for there is a better understanding all around when the teacher understands home conditions and vice versa.

Some wonder if it pays to do so much for the teachers. Yes, I think it does. It keeps the teachers more contented, free from homesickness, and from becoming antagonistic toward the town, and therefore their work from day to day is much better done; they are more liable to make a success; and if they do leave at the end of the year, they leave with a feeling of good will toward all.

Any one who has ever been away from home teaching school and has spent evening after evening sitting alone in a boarding house room, knows what I mean when I say that kind treatment toward the teacher pays even more than the salary which she receives. I know of an instance, in a town where I taught, where the entire staff of out-of-town teachers resigned at the close of the year because the townspeople were so "cold." This happened even when the teachers were given liberal raises and some of them even went to inferior positions but they could not stand the loneliness of the town. It wasn't so much that the people meant to be cold, but it was just indifference on their part, and that same old fault most of us have of being too busy with our own affairs.—Marian Manley-Brandt.

FAINT PERFUMES AID SALES

The theory that the smell of articles such as dress goods affects unconsciously the preferences of intending purchasers often has been suggested but it remained for Professor Donald A. Laird, of Colgate University, and thirteen of his students actually to test it. Selecting the town of Utica, New York, Professor Laird made up sets of four boxes of silk stockings, all exactly alike except that one box of each set was perfumed very slightly with a sachet odor, another box with a very faint fruity odor, and a third box with a flower odor resembling narcissus.

The stockings in the fourth box were left unperfumed and with the somewhat rancid and unpleasant but very faint odor of the natural silk, due to oils and other materials used in the weaving, dyeing and other processes. The three added odors also were extremely faint, so that no one would be likely to recognize them or even to perceive unconsciously that they were present. Professor Laird's students then took these four boxes of stockings to 250 housewives in Utica, asking each woman to select the pair of stockings which she thought were of the best quality. No mention was made of the matter of smell. About one-half of the housewives, Professor Laird reports, preferred the narcissus odor without knowing that they were smelling it; about a quarter preferred the fruity odor, less than a fifth preferred the sachet odor; and only eight per cent preferred the natural stockings, not perfumed at all. The conclusion seems justified that manufacturers would find it commercially profitable to consider the faint smells of their goods together with other elements of sales appeal.

FURNISH UPSTAIRS HALL IN INDIVIDUAL WAY

An upstairs hall should be much more than a mere passageway and should be furnished so that it gains a personality of its own.

In one home a colorful print of red, yellow and gray is used for window curtains and draperies for one doorway. This effect adds a decorative note and relieves the monotony of the many doors which frequently open from a hall.

An antique pine chest is an addition which is practical as well as decorative, as it holds blankets and other heavy bedding. A small table against the side wall is another old piece and was planned by the decorator to break up a long wall space which might have seemed have without some piece of furniture.

The table does not clutter up the narrow hall. A pair of candlesticks and a tray arranged on the table make it an attractive hall piece. If additional light is needed a lamp may be placed on it.

The geometric design in the hooked rug, in red, yellow and gray, adds to the interest of this hall.

A mirror hung on one of the walls will give an illusion of space and make the hall bright and more cheery. A picture or two should also be used.

CULINARY CAPERS

A correspondent wants suggestions regarding the serving of tomato juice. The most popular way is to serve it in small glasses, either passed in the drawing-room before luncheon or dinner, or set at each place at table as an opening course. A soupcon of Worcestershire sauce or a little lemon juice is often added, to vary the flavor. Small salt or cheese wafers or hot or cold canapes may suitably be served with the tomato juice.

The juice, as one buys it in tins or cans it at home, can also be converted very readily into soup, sauce or jelly. For a clear tomato bouillon it is preferable to the canned soups or for jelly. Such seasonings as one fancies may be added, and when fresh tomatoes are out of season little moulds of tomato jelly will be found a delightful addition to a salad plate.

Riced Potato Salad

Something quite novel, which I have not tried, but which has been described to me as particularly palatable, is riced potato salad. The main part of the dish is made simply of riced potatoes mixed with a particularly piquant salad dressing. If one wanted to add the flavor of celery, onions or anything else I should think one could very effectively add these to the water in which the potatoes are cooked.

A mound of the potato mixture is served on a crisp lettuce leaf with whatever accompaniments one fancies.

Salvaging a Pot of Soup:

Do you know that a pot of soup that shows a slight suspicion of going sour (either a milk soup or a meat soup) can often be saved by the addition of a pinch of soda while heating it up.—The Homemaker, in The Globe.

WHEN COOKING TONGUE

To cook salt tongue successfully you should soak it in cold water over night, drain and wipe it dry in the morning, place it in a large saucepan, cover with cold water and allow to reach the boiling point. Then let it simmer gently from two and a half to three hours.

STIFF SILKS OF LONG AGO IN STYLE AGAIN

The changeable silks and stiff moires which grandmother wore are back in style. One prominent Paris designer shows evening frocks of blue and red changeable silk designed with high-waisted bodices and semifull skirts which just touch the floor.

Another displays dinner frocks of black moire designed with large elbowlength, puffed sleeves.

QUICK ORANGE JAM

Two cups orange pulp and juice, 1 lemon, pulp and juice, 1 1-2 cups sugar,

Boil quickly about 10 minutes or until syrupy and clear. Very good served warm on hot biscuits. (Makes 2 glasses)

Primitive Man Subject to Many Painful Ills

The feet of primitive man must have been torture to him. Stone bruises, thorns, infections and chilblains combined to put him in the mood to throw rocks at his feet so that they would hurt in a different way.

Doubtless the primitive unsod foot was a strong lithic, tough organ, but also it must have born the brunt of a good deal of trauma. In warm climates, on sandy beaches, in the South seas, they were better off than elsewhere, but the immigrants into Europe with the long cold winters must often have envied the arboreal birds.

At any rate, as soon as sandals or foot coverings were invented they became immediately popular, in spite of the advantages claimed for the "natural" foot.

Primitive man's interest in his eyes and teeth and skin and feet, however, was divided by his attention to his internal pangs. One definite thing we know about him is that he had plenty of rheumatism.

Our knowledge is so certain on this score because the only remains of most primitive men we have are the bones; and the ravages of rheumatism are exhibited in bony structure.—Logan Clendening, M. D., in the Forum and Century.

Great "Roman Holiday" Staged on Alban Lake

In the year 51 A. D., the great tunnel which was to drain the Alban lake was completed, and the Emperor Claudius celebrated it with a characteristic Roman spectacle. He gave a mimic naval battle on the lake, repeating upon a much larger scale a similar spectacle Augustus had given. Claudius manned two opposing fleets with 19,000 men. Some of the galleys had three and four banks of oars. Around the shores of the lake troops were stationed to see that none of the naval gladiators escaped.

An immense multitude of people from Rome and the neighboring towns gathered to see the battle. The banks, the slopes and the hilltops were crowded with spectators, so that the scene resembled a vast theater. The emperor, dressed in a splendid military cloak, and his wife, Agrippina, also wearing a military cloak, presided. The men who did the fighting were criminals and slaves. History tells us that in this sanguinary conflict the combatants, possibly animated by expectations of freedom, fought bravely. It was they who coined the famous Latin salute: "Hail, Emperor! We who are about to die salute thee."

Where the Moon Shines Best

Promptly every morning at eight o'clock the west wind sweeps across the islands of Jamaica with such un-failing regularity that it is known as the "Doctor." In the evening this beneficent west wind dies down between the hours of six and seven and then, from the mountains a cool land breeze sets in which insures a comfortable night's sleep. The rainy season in Jamaica means that around three o'clock in the afternoon a brief shower, lasting a half hour or more, invigorates the atmosphere and makes everything fresh and green again. At night the stars gleam like lamps in a sky that resembles purple velvet. The moon is bigger and whiter than it is farther north and the moonlight falling on palm-encircled shores and coral reefs is one of the most beautiful sights in the world.

Speed of Thought

A "reaction time apparatus," which measures the split seconds between a stimulated thought and its emotional response, is being used in the psychology laboratory of the University of South California in efforts to determine the speed of thought. This is quite an ambitious undertaking. For our thoughts certainly travel much faster than electricity or light. It takes millions of years for light to travel from some nebulae to the earth, yet we little prodigies can send our thoughts almost instantaneously to those nebulae and let them dwell there, or leap back in the twinkling of an eye.

Business No Barrier

A lad employed in a northern Indiana factory has recently become quite popular with the fairer sex. Numerous phone calls were annoying the lad's employer, and on one occasion he answered a sweet young voice's request, saying:

"Bob is busy just now."
"You tell him it is Mary and he will want to talk anyway," was the reply.—Indianapolis News.

Mixed Up

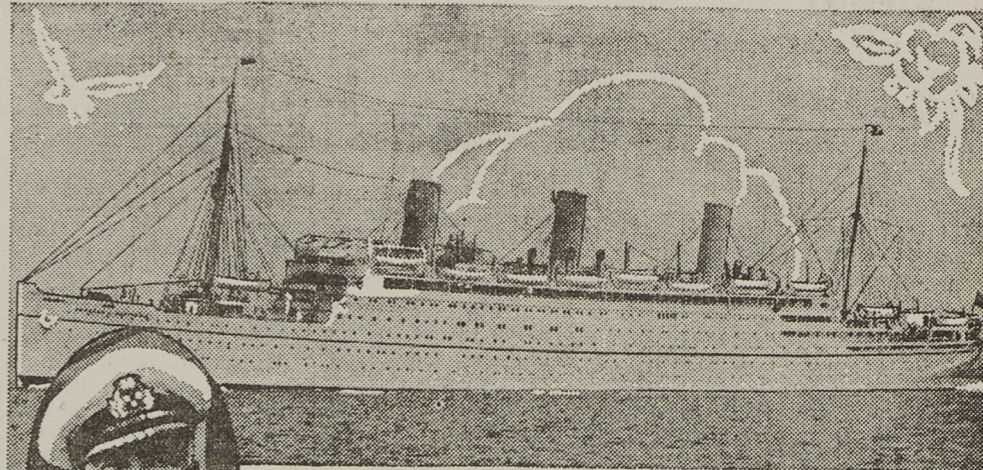

Eight-year-old Betty was having her first large party. She had been carefully coached as to the proper way to greet her guests and concerning her response to their farewells.

Heaving a sigh of relief, Betty closed the door after the last guest and sighed: "I never thought they'd go home so fast that I'd get my 'thank you's' and 'glad to see you's' so terrible mixed up."

Tourist Fares Slash Cruise Rates

— Captain E. Griffiths and his ship the "Empress of Australia." —

If transportation was sold like merchandise, a recent announcement by the Canadian Pacific Steamships would have read something like this: "The Holy Land, Egypt, and the glory that was Greece for less than $4.50 a day!"

But it isn't done that way so winter holiday makers learned of the latest thing in cruise fares in more modest fashion.

The latest thing in cruise fares is the institution of Tourist Class on the Mediterranean Cruise by the Empress of Australia; and for a minimum of $300 a 69-day cruise that calls at 25 ports is now available.

Palestine, the Nile, Cairo and the Pyramids, Rhodes—site of the famous Colossus—Barcelona, Casablanca, Gibraltar and Funchal, Madeira, where Mrs. Christopher Columbus was born, are high lights of the cruise which leaves New York January 31st.

Tourist accommodation in the magnificent 22,000-ton Empress of Australia is famous for its comfort as thousands of students, teachers, and professors who have crossed the Atlantic in the speedy vessel know. Divided by the 69 days of the cruise, which allows a stopover in England and return Tourist Class by any Canadian Pacific liner—even the Blue Rib-bon holding Empress of Britain—works out at a daily cost of a little less than $4.35.

It is believed that the new rate will introduce the joys of winter cruising in sunny southern latitudes to many who have not been able to enjoy such a holiday before.

Direct Relief Only

Ottawa has confirmed the intimation made some weeks ago that the Dominion Government will not contribute money for municipal works, but will give its funds toward direct relief. During the earlier stages of the depression the idea predominated that, if money had to be spent for the needy, it was desirable to get work in return for it.

Last winter's experience was disappointing, for it was found that the cost of materials, and of machinery erected for works in remote places made each day's work cost about ten dollars. This was intolerably expensive for Governments, and the early policy had to be reversed.

This fact is in some measure a condemnation of the Governments concerned, as well as a penalty for the condition in which the country finds itself. Canada had boasted that it had not resorted to the dole and would not do so. The new decision leaves Canada very close to the dole.

We are to contribute national funds for the food, shelter, fuel and clothing of those in need; the unemployed are virtually guaranteed against want or misery. It is a heavy contract, but national sentiment would not condone any other policy, though it does insist on careful and economical management and protection against imposition and fraud.

We are in a position that means heavy cost, but we must face it bravely and seek by every means possible policies that will bring the country back to the hilltops of prosperity.—Toronto Globe.

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

YOUR CHILD'S HEALTH

The work of the modern health department is more or less familiar to all of us. There is a tendency to place responsibilities with the department which it can never be expected to assume. The department can do certain things and do them well, but the health care of your child must be given chiefly by you, his parents, not by the health department.

The child's health depends, in the beginning, upon the care the mother has during her pregnancy. Proper care throughout pregnancy and at delivery not only safeguards the mother but protects the child, and secures for the child a good, fair start in life. The health department will supply the mother with printed instructions, but she herself must go to her doctor to secure the supervision she needs.

After the baby is born the best way for the mother to give health to her child is to breast feed her baby. When the time comes to wean, then the health department should have available a supply of pasteurized milk.

One of the greatest public health achievements is the pasteurization of milk. As a result of the pasteurization of milk supplies, there has been a great reduction in the summer diarrhoeas of young children, abdominal and bone tuberculosis and other diseases spread by milk. The care of the milk, keeping it clean after it is delivered, is a responsibility of the home.

You can have your child protected against two diseases, one of which years ago used to take the lives of many and scar the rest—smallpox; the other, which still continues as a major cause of deaths among children—diphtheria. Protection against these two diseases is available, but that fact will not protect your child; you must have him vaccinated against smallpox and immunized against diphtheria if he is to be safeguarded.

When the baby stage is passed, the child still needs care. During his preschool years he establishes his habits of life, which will determine, in large measure, his physical and mental health in later years. Physical defects, such as diseased tonsils and adenoids, commonly develop at this period of life. They should be corrected by proper treatment, and not allowed to continue, as they may cause serious harm.

Your child will be far more likely to grow up a healthy, happy, useful citizen if you make use of the knowledge which is available concerning child care, rather than if you trust to chance.

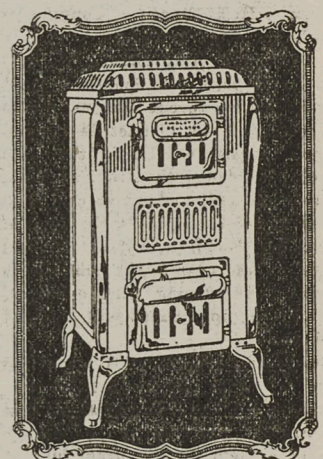

To give your child physical and mental health is the greatest success which you can achieve, and it will give you more satisfaction than anything else in life.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Rev. A. J. Macdonald, B.A., B.D., of Lachine, Que., who was the special preacher at the Anniversary Services, of the United Church, on Sunday, was greeted with large and appreciative congregations, both morning and evening, the pastor, Rev. J. H. Hamilton, B.A., taking his services in Lachine. A profusion of autumnal blooms was used very effectively in the church decorations.

At the eleven o'clock service, he took for his text, "I am the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob." The speaker pointed out and stressed the fact that while God was interested in the group or multitude, His chief concern was in the individual, in persons with different outlooks upon life with a variety of natural tendencies and talents.

The choir, under the leadership of Mrs. T. W. Munro, with Miss Gladys McEwen at the organ, sang the anthem, "The Lord loveth the Gates of Zion", while the vocal duet, "Prepare Me for the Testing Day", was effectively rendered by Messrs. Ed. Hunter and John A. MacRae.

In the evening, Rev. Mr. Macdonald spoke from the text, "Come unto Me all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest," using for illustration purposes the well known hymn "Art thou weary, heavy laden?" written in Latin in the eighth century of St. Stephen of Mar Sara. The offertory number by the choir was "Onward Christian soldiers", and the postlude "Now the Day is Over." In the latter, the alto solo was taken by Mrs. F. W. Munro and the soprano obligato by Mesdames Joseph Armstrong and Stanley Kippen. On Monday evening, the concluding programme marking the anniversary, was presented in the church, following audience, which taxed the seating capacity of the hall, spent a pleasant two hours. Rev. J. H. Hamilton occupied the chair and expressed his personal appreciation as well as the thanks of the congregation, for the splendid manner in which the people of the community had responded to their efforts.

Rev. Dr. P. A. McLeod of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, who was present conveyed the greetings of himself and congregation. The address of the evening was delivered by Rev. A. J. Macdonald, who had been a Chaplain with the Canadian troops in the front line trenches, and served for a time with the army of occupation. He made a stirring appeal for the outlasting of war and for a more thorough appreciation of national and international good will.

Other items on this entertaining programme were piano duet, Misses Jean Grant and Gertrude McKay; recitation, Miss Frances Bauford; piano and violin, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Ferguson; vocal solo, Miss Gretta Hooper; recitation, Master Donald Macintosh; hard time orchestra, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Arkinstall, Miss Anna Arkinstall, Murdoch Arkinstall and D. D. MacGregor; piano duet, Misses Annie Franklin and Isabel Frith; vocal duet, Ed Hunter and John A. MacRae; male quartet, Ed. Hunter, Howard MacEwen, D. D. MacGregor and P. A. Munro; a review of the old family album, Mesdames D. D. MacGregor and John Arkinstall.

In 1925, upon the consummation of the union of the churches, she became a member of Knox United Church, Moose Creek. Letter from a Father To His Son EXPERIENCEVILLE, ONT., OCT. 21, 1932. My Dear Son:— As you are just now engaged in the very important duty of establishing a home, I feel that it is my duty, as one who is vitally interested in your welfare, to give you some advice; and I may say that this counsel which is prompted by paternal affection, is the fruit, or outcome, of the failures as well as the successes which have marked my years.

It is a great thing, my boy, to have youth on your side, and to be conscious of life pulsating through your veins, when powers are on the increase and every challenge is welcomed. But unfortunately, it seems to be in the very nature of things that some pesky fly always gets incorporated in the ingredients of the ointment, which does not add to the sweetness of its flavor, and though you may not be aware of it, I want to warn you that you have, inherent in you, the germ of that age-old disease known as EATONITIS.

When you were a wee-baby, looking out in bewilderment upon the wonders of the world, into which, you had so recently been ushered, your mother and I noticed that you were not only willing but anxious, to exchange your big toe for a gaudily colored balloon, held before your eyes. And you thought you did. But your toe has served you all these years, and is still with you, telling you when the weather is cold, pointing the way you are going and the shortest route out from your nose, while the balloon you grasped for, has long since been exploded, as have many of the theories based on quantity and price, rather than on quality and value.

I purposed writing you at greater length, dealing with the operation and growth of this disease, but must postpone this until my next letter, as I have to go to Cowan's for some window glass, to close up some of the chinks before winter. And say Jack! that's where you can buy a pane, without having a pain. He has them as low as 5c each. Think of it! Now I'll post this. Mother joins me in sending love to both you and Shirley.— Lovingly DAD.

Course in Training For Magistrates

Attorney-General William H. Price announced a few days ago that he had reprimanded and censured Magistrate MacKay of Renfrew for the careless way the latter had recorded some of his convictions, and, in some cases, for his lack of promptness in making returns of fines. Coupled with the announcement came the Attorney-General's intimation that, to forestall just such situations in which MacKay placed himself, the department may introduce some arrangement whereby all Magistrates throughout the Province may be asked to take a course of training in the Statutes in making returns, and in other so-related matters.

Colonel Price's censuring of the Magistrate follows on the heels of the special report prepared by Commissioner I. A. Humphries, K.C., on the administration of justice in Renfrew, and coincides with the recommendations made by the Commissioner.

"This should be a lesson to MacKay and to all other Magistrates," declared the Attorney-General, in commenting on his reprimand, "that they must be prompt in making returns, and they must not act as a collection bureau for fines, either on behalf of the municipality or the Province.

"This investigation," Colonel Price continues, "brings up the question of giving Magistrates, especially new Magistrates, some course of training that will better equip them for carrying on their duties. About two years ago, when the Provincial Police were amalgamated into one body, a school of training was set up at which all new appointees would have to attend; in fact, almost all of those in the police service have attended lecture classes. This has greatly improved the efficiency of our police. It may be that no Magistrate should in future be appointed who has not had a limited course of training. Many men are good Magistrates on the Bench, giving decisions on the evidence and filling the position of a Judge acceptably. When, however, they have imposed on them the duty of making proper returns, keeping proper records and complying with the terms of different statutes, they seem to fail to grasp its importance.

"Many of our part-time Magistrates could not earn a living on what they receive in remuneration from the municipality or the Province. They must carry on their business. This is apparently what occurred in the case of Police Magistrate MacKay.

"I am asking my department to try and work out a scheme whereby Magistrates throughout the Province will be asked to take a course of training in the statutes and in making returns and any other co-related matter. A portion of this could be done in Toronto, but the Crown Attorney of the county might very well be asked to give lectures on the work that Magistrates have to cover. The Inspector of Legal Offices, when making his regular tour of inspection, might well deliver lectures on the duties of Magistrates."

Redistribution Bill Presented in House

The bill effecting redistribution of membership in the House of Commons, based on the census of 1931, was presented on Friday by Premier Bennett and given second reading.

While the representation is altered in four provinces the total 245 members, remains unchanged. Nova Scotia loses two members, being reduced from 14 to 12, while British Columbia gains two, the total being increased from 14 to 16.

New Brunswick's representation is fixed at 10 members, a loss of one member, while Alberta gains one with a total of 17.

The redistribution, which will stand for ten years is based on the population of Quebec. Under the British North America Act the representation of the other provinces in the House of Commons is fixed by the ratio of 65 to the population of Quebec.

For the next ten years the representation will be as follows: Quebec, 65; Ontario, 82; Nova Scotia, 12; New Brunswick, 10; Manitoba, 17; British Columbia, 16; Prince Edward Island, four; Saskatchewan, 21; Alberta, 17, and The Yukon territory, one.

Famous Eulogy Said to Have Been Spontaneous

The case in which Senator Vest delivered his eulogy on the dog occurred shortly after the Civil war. Charles Burden of Kingsville, Mo., owned a hunting dog called Old Drum, of which he was very fond. His neighbor, Leoudias Hornsby, had lost a number of sheep which had been killed by dogs during the summer and fall of 1869. He threatened to kill the first dog who was found on his place. One day he had been hunting with Dick Ferguson and after they returned home a dog was heard outside. Hornsby told Ferguson to shoot. The next morning Old Drum was found dead and Burden decided to make Hornsby suffer. He, therefore, sued him for $50 damages. The first jury disagreed. The second jury gave him $25 damages. He appealed the case. According to Vest's family, he was asked by Burden to assist his lawyers at the trial for a stipulated sum of $10. He took no part in the trial until the closing appeal to the jury, when, without either notice or preparation, he made the well-known appeal. Tears were in the eyes of many members of the jury and a verdict of $500 damages was allowed, but the court stated that this amount was in excess of the petition and could not be allowed.

Church and Palace One When World Was Young

Worship in early times, Prof. David Moore Robinson of Johns Hopkins university says, took place in the palaces where the king was also priest, and in the palace of King Minos as early as 1600 B. C. there were aniconic images, such as the Greek cross which is used now in the Greek church. "After the destruction of the Minoan civilization," he continued, "Greece was plunged into a dark age from 1100 to 700 B. C., and had to develop all over again from humble origins. The church was separated from the state and the temples came to be separate buildings from the palaces."

Professor Robinson said that in the early times in Crete and elsewhere in Greece caves were used as shrines and votive offerings were deposited in the caves. "Such use of caves was continued through the classical and medieval ages," he added, "and still exists at Lourdes and other places."

The earliest Greek temples which were separated from the palaces, he declared, were of stone foundations with walls of mud brick and columns of wood, such as that of Hera at Olympia. Others like that at Corinth had monolithic columns of limestone covered with stucco. But the great temples of the Fifth century B. C. were built of marble.

"Shorthand"

The origin of brief writing is clouded in mystery. No authentic record exists establishing its practical use much before the First century B. C. From that period until about 300 A. D. the art flourished throughout the Roman empire. The secretary and librarian of Cicero, Marcus Tullius Tiro, was the pioneer of Roman shorthand. The chief use of shorthand in Roman times was made by the leaders in the church and by government officials. Church dignitaries who made conspicuous use of shorthand were St. Augustine, Origen, St. Jerome. All the Roman emperors employed shorthand secretaries. Several emperors attempted to learn it. For centuries the art of shorthand fell into disuse. Modern shorthand dates from 1588, when Dr. Timothy Bright produced a system to which he gave the title Characterie.

Spirit of Asia in Italy

It might be said of more places than one that where Italians live today the spirit of Asia permeates everything, but of Palermo in Sicily it always seems to be specially true. Its lovely and strange cathedral itself conveys this to the mind, as if the East and not the West had reared it for a glory other than that of Rome.

Byzantine, Norman, German, French and Spaniard have come here to reign, but they seem to have left only bones, the spirit which lives after them is Saracen and Phoenician. Asia sits on the throne invisible and rules every understanding heart which comes within its influence.

Economy Hurt Golf Game

A story about Woodrow Wilson was told by Joe Horgan, golf caddy who used to carry the President's clubs at Deal Beach, N. J. "The President wasn't a good golfer," Horgan related in the American Magazine, "but he seemed to enjoy the game thoroughly. He laughed and joked a lot, and once, when he almost missed a shot completely, he blamed it on the fact that when he first took up golf, he had to play without a caddy for the sake of economy. He said that was when he learned to lift his head with each shot, a fatal habit for golfers."

Soil Carried to Ocean

The Mississippi river carries yearly to the Gulf of Mexico 418,000,000 tons of silt. On the basis of the chemical analysis of soils over the United States generally, the following estimate has been made of the contents of this silt: Phosphoric acid, 627,000 tons; nitrogen, 418,000 tons; potash, 6,479,000 tons. In addition the Mississippi river carries approximately 200,000,000 tons of dissolved matter which cannot be analyzed in this manner.

Vast Tracts Set Apart as Gorilla Sanctuaries

The gorilla, alone among animals, has a country.

A 100-square-mile area in the heart of Africa constitutes Gorilla land—essentially a gorilla nation under a Belgian protectorate. Within this country, from which outsiders are excluded rigidly unless they are on scientific expeditions which meet the approval of the Belgian government, the great apes, who generally are recognized as man's closest relatives on earth, are free to manage their own affairs and are given probably greater protection than is accorded any aboriginal tribe. They are immune from hunters and collectors.

This is one of the two places on earth where the gorilla still is found. The other area is a mountainous stretch of the British Cameroon region of West Africa. Here, although there is no special administrative provision for gorillas, the animals are protected by the most stringent laws and it is doubtful whether the British government would allow the killing or capture of one of them under any circumstances.

There are only two or three thousand gorillas, at the most, in the world. Gorilla land has a population of only about 1,000. In the past the great apes, who breed very slowly, have been slaughtered ruthlessly. Few have been brought into captivity. It would be impossible to capture an adult, and the capture of an infant usually has been possible only by the slaughter of the whole family. Father, mother and children stick together when danger threatens.

Statistics Provide New Pastime for Fat Folks

Are you fat or lean? In either case you will appreciate these valuable statistics revealed by a magazine writer regarding adipose tissue, says the Detroit News. New fat added to the frame naturally has to be nourished by the extension of blood vessels. And a pound of fat, says a writer, requires small vessels totaling 5-6 of a mile in length. When a man puts on 20 pounds he interlaces his system with 25 miles of new capillaries, veins and arteries.

This fact supplies a very amusing pastime for persons addicted to laying things end to end, and is supposed to explain why fat folks are so contented and jolly. Every evening, as their weight increases, they can sit by the fire and, after doing the cross-word puzzle, lay a fresh supply of capillaries end to end. Or, when losing weight, they can remove them end from end. It keeps the mind innocent and pleasantly occupied, and makes for happiness and good citizenship.

Beware of us fellows with the lean and hungry look. Such men are dangerous.

Italian City Worth Visiting

One of the most impressive sights in Italy, and one which few travelers seem to have seen or even heard of, can be found in Cumae, a pleasant ride from Naples. Cumae was the most ancient Greek colony in Italy. Here sat that great oracle, Cumae Sibyl, and the subterranean passages leading to her grotto were described by Vergil and Dante.

Only in the last few years have scientific excavations been made among the extensive ruins of this region. Still the automobiles of tourists speed along the main roads without pausing to see the wonders that have been disclosed. There is a Colosseum second in size and importance only to that of Rome.

City Typical of East

Northern Africa is the gateway to the Orient. Nowhere else has the East with its fascinating Moslem art and customs advanced so far west as in Tripoli, Tunis, Algeria and Morocco. A tourist can leave Paris at night by train for Marseilles and arrive 36 hours later at Algiers, amidst mosques and sparkling white round-domed houses. The visions of Arabian nights become reality for anyone visiting northern Africa. For not only have old Islamic towns remained intact there but the life and habits of the Mahometan population have not changed during the centuries, despite the French conquest.

Turf for Airport

The United States Department of Commerce recommends an evenly proportioned mixture of the following grasses as a tough, durable turf for an airport. Canada blue grass, fancy red top, meadow fescue, hard fescue, sheep fescue, red fescue and Pacy's perennial rye grass. For the best results the exact mixture should be determined by an experienced landscape gardener after a careful examination of the soil. For the cheapest runway surfaces of reasonably good quality, earth oiled with an asphaltic base oil is probably the solution.

The Chair in History

Chairs are of extreme antiquity and were originally for purposes of state and dignity rather than for ordinary use. They did not become common until the Sixteenth century. Many of the chairs of the ancient nations were of great richness. They are represented in some of the earliest monuments of Nineveh. They were known to exist in Greece in the Fifth or Sixth century B. C., and in Rome at a later period. One of the most famous of the ancient chairs is the reputed chair of St. Peter in St. Peter's, Rome.

Alleged Combine To Be Prosecuted Says Price

Formal instructions were issued last week by Attorney-General William H. Price to proceed with prosecutions against the alleged Radio Tube and Canadian Basket Pool combines.

Eric Armour, K.C., Toronto Crown Attorney, has been directed to act in the first instance; and Crown Attorney George Ballard, K. C., of Hamilton, in the second. Prosecutions will be taken under the Criminal Code.

The investigations which led to the Queen's Park move were made under the Federal Combines Act some months ago. Reports and other data passed along to Colonel Price's department by the Dominion Minister of Labor has been under close consideration ever since. Only two weeks ago Col. Price and his deputy, Edward Bayly, K.C., were in Ottawa, conferring with officials in regard to the alleged combines and securing for their own purposes additional detail that was not available at first.

Six concerns are mentioned in the Attorney-General's instructions as forming the alleged radio tube combine, and twelve companies, as composing the Canadian Basket Pool "combine."

Facing Facts Present Need

"The time is past for dickerings in our thinking. The thing to do is to face the facts boldly," declared Mrs. Anne Anderson Perry last week in the first of her weekly current events talks. She stressed the vital importance at the present moment of dealing with facts and not with sentimentality, and she pointed out the need for an understanding of all aspects of important questions.

"Try to read the other side," Mrs. Perry begged of her interested audience in touching on the matter of daily and weekly newspaper reading. She urged that Canadian papers—and these she felt should not be undervalued—he read consistently and with a great deal of discrimination. Mrs. Perry pointed out that in her talks, which will be given weekly to morning and evening groups during the coming season, her aim would be to guide the reading of the members and to give a fair and unbiased picture of what was going on in various parts of the world. "We do not have to be told that the world is facing a new era," she remarked. "All signs point that way, and it behooves us to know what is happening in our country and to understand the repercussions of events in other parts of the world."

In reviewing events in Great Britain and Canada, Mrs. Perry commented on the Empire Economic Conference, which she felt had been "mostly conflict." She regretted that the subject of Empire currency had been shelved and left over for the World Economic Conference. Mrs. Perry felt that it was too soon to say whether the conference had been a success or a failure.—Exchange.

What Is A Newspaper?

A newspaper is the highest slice of life that can be bought for a few cents.

A newspaper is more powerful than the ancient kings and stronger than the law of the land. Ancient kings did things by virtue of force and strength. The law does things by courts and juries. The newspaper does things by education. And once mankind grasps an idea, is convinced of its aptness, no king nor law can stand against this conviction.

The newspapers, therefore, must abandon their gay attitude of irresponsibility, their semi-sophomoric notions of sophistication and smart cracks.

Everyone on a paper from the lowest cub to the publisher must have a full realization of his responsibility to the age in which he lives.

The standards of the eye shade, the shirt sleeves and the loose talk and cynicism often found in the journalistic world are as collegate as the roll-necked sweater and the Oxford bags.

The attitude of many sheets toward their obligations reminds one of a small boy smoking cigars behind the barn to show what a man he is.

A newspaper in its function of forming convictions, standards and ideals has the world by the tail. Why give the world a down hill pull.

The strongest ship is like an egg shell when an iceberg disputes the right of way.

Will Ask Truckers To Publish Rates

Toronto—Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Ontario Minister of highways intimated his department was now working on an arrangement whereby operators of highway passenger vehicles and carriers of freight will be compelled to publish their rates.

"We do not intend to fix the rates for them," said Mr. Macaulay, "but we plan to require them to publish them the same as the railways do. We are investigating the facts at the present time."

The Minister's statement was made in comment on sections of the Duff Commission's report which deal with road jurisdiction and road transportation taxation.

CHAPTER XIII

FERRERS MEETS A FRIEND
Within ten minutes they had turned over the little tipster to the House Surgeon at Charing Cross Hospital, and were crossing Trafalgar Square in the direction of Whitehall.

"Do you happen to know anything of a man named Horner Thake?" Tommie enquired casually, and could have sworn that, as though brought up by some invisible barrier, the detective checked in his stride. Yet when he spoke it was with all his customary indifference.

"Do you mean the alleged manager of the Parnassus?" he demanded. At Tommie's nod: "What brought that bad mistake into your mind?"

The crime reporter felt his heart accelerate. Even to one he trusted as thoroughly as he trusted Tommie, the Chief Constable would not have spoken disparagingly of another without very adequate reason.

"I'll tell, or rather I'll show you, when we reach your office," Tommie replied. "By then, perhaps you'll have cooled down sufficiently to display a little interest," he added un-pleasantly.

As if without any interest in Tommie's reply to his question, Coke, after mopping his brow with a violently coloured handkerchief, was now engaged with the lining of his hat, that he held straight in front of him for the purpose.

"Aren't you wise yet to the fact we're being followed, Tommie?" he said indifferently. "I'd a notion we were as turned from King William Street into the Strand. Now I know it! By that feller with his face all covered with bandages who was hanging about the entrance to Charing Cross Hospital—same as if he was an out-patient or something." Always carry a little mirror in your hat, Tommie; it's like one of those glasses they stick in front of the driving seat of a car. You can see what's comin' behind you."

This was distinctly interesting. Apparently things were not to fade into the nothingness that in the past had absorbed so many 'stories' that had had all ear marks of a first-class scoop. "What do you intend to do—turn round and throw a brick at him, or something?" he demanded, intentionally fatuous.

"Pul him in," Coke replied, and turned into Canon Row Police Station. There, a few quickly-spoken words to the officer on duty resulted in the unostentatious exit of a detective-constable through the rear door.

Coke turned once more to the officer on duty.

"Any interest in criminals on your list of deprecators to-night, Sergeant Colbeck?" he enquired.

For a moment the station-sergeant hesitated.

"No one very desperate, sir," he said at last. "Only there's a young woman come in—a lady, too, if I know a lady when I see one—who, me being as you might say a family man, I'm kind of interested in."

His hack to the fire, Coke groped for his pipe.

"Then it's a sure thing she isn't a criminal," he said. "Except to himself, no criminal's ever interestin'. Paste that in your album, Sergeant, among your Treasury of Golden Sayings. It's worth rememberin'."

The station-sergeant, a rather corpulent and essentially kindly man, laughed reassuringly.

"You can take it from me there's nothin' of the criminal about this young lady, sir," he said, and Coke turned on him.

"Then what in Dane's Inferno does she think she's doing here?" he demanded.

crossed the threshold before, with a sharply bitten-off cry, he brought up with a jerk.

Seated on a bench that ran immediately beneath the window, the girl's face was of almost deathly pallor; her head thrown back in weariness against the sill, and in her eyes the smouldering remnant of what had been a consuming terror. This was the girl who, since the previous night, when for the first time he had spoken to her at the reception counter of the Hotel Parnassus not for five consecutive minutes, sleeping or waking, had been out of Tommie's thoughts.

He pulled himself together as Chief Constable Coke spoke. The voice of that gaunt man was gentle.

"Why, Miss Penschurst," he said, and the tact of that hard-hitten tracker of men was as well concealed as Tommie's surprise at the greeting. "This is fine! At last you've taken my advice and left the Parnassus."

Tommie saw her eyes fasten upon the detective like those of a drowning man on a life-belt. Then, with an inarticulate cry, she sprang to her feet.

"Oh, Mr. Coke," she began, but checked herself as the detective turned purposefully to the door.

"We shan't want the matron, Sergeant Colbeck," he called to that highly intrigued officer. "I'll make myself personally responsible for this lady."

As he turned back into the room his gaunt face had softened, and the mobile lips were smiling.

"Now," he said definitely, this is where, over the hite of supper you look as if you needed pretty badly, you'll forget all about me here! a policeman, and learn to look on me as your kind uncle Herbert or somebody."

While there was nothing Tommie would have liked so much as to make a third at that supper-party, in his present disguise, and without unfairness to her, the idea was impracticable. Whatever other chances he was quite willing to take it was definite he must not improve his acquaintance with her under false pretences.

To his surprise, however, it was Coke who solved the difficulty. For some reason Tommie was unable to account for, he appeared anxious the crime reporter should not be left out.

Following upon a quick glance at Tommie, his lazy eyes twinkling, he turned to the girl.

"Miss Penschurst," he said, "I want to present Mr. Ferrers, of the 'Daily Broadcaster.' The corner of his mobile mouth twitched. "Fortunately, he's not quite as bad as he looks; at the moment he's on some stunt or other for his paper. That's why he's made himself up in gent's city suiting, a wig, and those comic little side-whiskers."

Tommie saw the girl jerk a little more uprightly on the bench where, in the last few moments, she had re-seated herself. Bewilderment and a dawning recognition behind the haunting terror of her eyes, she subjected him to a long keen scrutiny.

"Ferrers?" she repeated slowly, frowning a little. Then, to Tommie's consternation, like a flame an increased fear flashed into her eyes; she stretched a small hand for support to the whitewashed wall at her back.

Quickly, a catch in her voice:

"I know," she exclaimed. "It was you who came into the Parnassus last night, alone, and after speaking to me at the reception desk, went with—Mr. Thake—to his private office." Her voice sank until, as nearly as possible, it was inaudible. "You came about—about—" had been dispatched to make reconnaissance of the bandaged man, who, from the corner of King William Street, had trailed them, stepped up and saluted.

"Sorry, sir," he said briskly to Coke, "but I couldn't see anyone who looked in the least like the man you described. As a matter of fact, sir, except for a chap on the other side of the street, and who couldn't possibly have been the one you sent me after, there was no one within sight at all."

There was a distinctly unpleasant gleam in Coke's usually lazy eyes as they fastened upon the young detective.

"Why couldn't the chap on other side of the road've been the one you were looking for?" he demanded quietly.

The youngster gave a short but respectful laugh.

"Why, sir, he wasn't even a white man," he said confidently, and when he saw the expression on the Chief Constable's face, turned suddenly pale.

"Jumping Jupiter!" Coke shouted. "What was he, then?"

"Some kind of a negro, sir," said the constable. "By what could he be seen of him," and looking into the eyes that confronted him, breahter an inward prayer for aid.

Coke's glance continued to bore into him.

"Didn't I explain that the man I sent you to bring in had his face covered in bandages?" he demanded, and his voice was dangerously patient.

In a swift withdrawal of blood, the young detective-constable went paler yet. With a rush had come realization that masked as the wanted man was described, for any indication to the contrary the skin beneath those hand ages might have been black or white or yellow.

He shuffled his feet for a moment. There didn't seem to be anything to say.

"I'm sorry, sir," he stammered contritely at last. "I'm afraid I didn't think of that."

Coke continued to look at him.

"Think," he repeated. "You've nothing to think with. Only let me tell you this, young feller. If it's your ambition to make any kind of progress in the science of det—" Sharply his voice broke off. "Hello, what've we here? A gas explosion, or only civil war?"

Following upon the drawing-up of a car in the street outside, had come a most appalling crash; instantly upon the heels of that a sudden acceleration, and the sound of a second car departing at speed in the direction of Parliament Street.

"Somethin' doin', I shouldn't wonder," Coke said, and followed by the others, passed through the door and into the charge-room. In the street outside, partly on the gutter and partly on the pavement, was an overturned taxi; the driver, flung from his seat, spread eagle and insensible a dozen feet away. Around the corner of Westminster Bridge Road a high-powered car was being furiously driven.

It was not, however, upon that fugitive that, in a stare of blank astonishment, Tommie Ferrers' eyes were fixed. From the debris of broken glass about the door of the wreck had come signs of movement; through the shattered pane a hand protruded, and that hand bleeding. A voice, that to Tommie struck a note of familiarity, yelled:

"For the love of Pete, help me out of here!"

"By the Great Horn Spoon," Tommie shouted, streaking across the pavement, "if it isn't my old college-friend Longhurst.

Odd Human Passion Is Mania for "Collecting"

I know a gentleman who has devoted the best years of his life to collecting clay pipes and the buttons from soldiers' uniforms. He has, in effect, married clay pipes and military buttons, and is living with both in bigamous content. In this marital union he probably finds happiness above the average.

It would be impossible to produce comparative statistics in proof, but anyone who has touched the fringes of this subject will agree that collecting is on the increase; it is one of the major enthusiasms of our time.

A list of things which are the objects of the collector's passion would sound like the table of contents of a mail order catalogue—or an inventory of the city dump: shaving mugs, mustache cups, gilded rolling pins, hat boxes, cigarette snufflers, miniature furniture, glass slippers, maps, old insurance policies, conch shells, wishbones, wooden Indians, wax flowers, time tables, playing cards, hymn books, headed bags, fans, canes, baskets, heeled shoes, capes, spectacles cases, ink pots, buttons, garters, crutches, talking machine records, petticoats, old love letters. It is revealed that at least one macabre amorist has even made a collection of tombstones.—Mary Day Winn in the North American Review.

Expert on the Subject Explodes Snake Myths

The way animals adapt themselves to environmental changes has always been one of the wonders of zoology. When shrews went to sea, they did not develop fins, but changed forelegs to flippers and became whales. In like manner, the reptiles that took to the trees changed scales into feathers and became birds. A great subject—adaptation to changed environments.

Doctor Mosauer, "snake expert," has taken away some of our favorite illusions. There are no true hoop snakes, he says. The "black snake" doesn't take its tail in its mouth and roll like a hoop across the prairies as the pioneer believed. Nor can you tell the age of a rattlesnake by its rattles. It gets a new rattle every time it sheds its skin, and it may shed oftener than once a year. Human beings, he says, shed their skin continuously, snakes all at once. Snake eyelids are a part of their skin, the lids being fused together but quite transparent at first. As the skin thickens, a snake sees less and less clearly—through its eyelids. When ready to shed, the skin breaks around the lips where skin and mucous membrane meet, then the skin slips backward, eyelids and all, as if pulled by invisible strings.—Los Angeles Times.

Green and Black Teas

The same kind of tea leaves can be used for the manufacture of either green or black tea, the difference of the two teas lying merely in the process of curing. Some varieties of tea leaves, however, are better adapted than others for making certain kinds of tea. In producing green tea the leaves are sterilized by steam. This prevents oxidizing or fermentation of the leaf which retains its green color and when boiling water is poured over it the result is green or greenish-yellow liquid. In manufacturing black tea the leaf is allowed to ferment, which changes its color from green to very dark brown. In the case of oolong or semi-fermented tea the fermentation is allowed to reach a certain desired point.

Wooden Leg Uninsurable

The Supreme court of California has decided that a workman cannot collect a workmen's compensation liability benefit for injury to a wooden leg. In the case of John Driscoll, a teamster, whose wooden leg was broken when his horses shied and threw him. The case was bitterly fought, three judges dissenting from the majority of the bench. It was urged that loss of an artificial member was a real disability. The majority held that a decision favorable to the workman would open the door to claims for damage to crutches, eyeglasses and false teeth.

Capturing Oil Cushers

"Wild" oil wells are capped in a number of different ways, depending upon conditions at the casing head when the wells blow out. In general, the operation consists in attaching a gate valve to the casing head and closing the valve after the connection has been made. Connections which provide a number of flow lines are then made to flow the oil from the wells. The complete assembly of well head connections is known as the "Christmas tree," because of the various branch connections off of it to the main header above the large flow control valve.

Marsh Hawks Groundlings

The marsh hawk is our only species of hawk that habitually nests on the ground. The dried grass nests of these birds built among the weeds near a pond or marsh may contain from two to nine eggs of a bluish white color. When the eggs are hatched both male and female share in the care of their offspring and the family remains together for most of the summer. Their food consists chiefly of mice, but other small mammals, birds, snakes, frogs and even poultry are sometimes found on their menu.

HEADACHE AFTER HEADACHE

NOW SHE'S FREE FROM THEM

A woman writes:—"I would like everyone who suffers from headaches to try Kruschen Salts. Before taking Kruschen I was hardly ever free from a headache. But since I have been taking it regularly I have hardly had a headache, for which I am very thankful, for headaches can make one feel quite ill. I have been taking that small dose of Kruschen every morning in a glass of warm water, before my breakfast, and I feel so well."—(Mrs.) A.E.D.

Headaches can generally be traced to a disordered stomach and to the un-suspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons—prevent them forming again—and you'll never have to worry any more. And that is just how Kruschen Salts bring swift and lasting relief from headaches. Kruschen Salts aid Nature to cleanse your body completely of all clogging waste matter. Start on "the little daily dose" of Kruschen to-morrow. Then you will very soon have done with headaches.

Extended Felicitations On Eve Of Departure

On Sunday, 9th inst., in St. Joseph's Church, Lancaster, Rev. Corbet McRae, their revered pastor for upwards of eight years, was remembered by his congregation, the function taking the form of a preparation of an address and a purse of gold expressive of the love, respect and esteem entertained for him—the Rev. Father having been appointed pastor of Lochiel and Dalkeith.

As the Rev. James Wylie, curate to Father McRae was also leaving, being transferred to St. Columban's parish, Cornwall he was included in the felicitations and regrets of the citizens generally.

Mr. Gordon Fraser read the address in English, while Mr. Omer Legault did likewise in French. Mr. James Dufresne presented Father McRae with the purse.

In his reply Father McRae emphasized the fact that he more than appreciated the kindly sentiments expressed in the address, also the gift which accompanied it and made special reference to the courteous treatment he at all times received from friends outside his own congregation. He assured one and all he would always retain kindly remembrances of his connection with St. Joseph's parish and the people of Lancaster generally.

Following is a copy of the address: To the Reverend Father Corbet McRae, Reverend and Dear Father McRae—Following the announcement of Ecclesiastical authority that you must sever your connection as Pastor with this parish of St. Joseph and on the eve of your departure to assume your pastoral duties elsewhere, kindly permit us, your parishioners, to express our sentiments today, and to testify to the esteem and regard in which you have always been held since your advent to this parish.

When, eight years ago, you arrived in our midst, we soon recognized the sincerity, earnestness and zeal with which you regarded the duties of your office as Pastor and, from our hearts, we thanked God for the successor that had been appointed to continue the sacred work of worthy predecessors.

During these years, many duties have developed upon you, many incidents have occurred to test your priestly qualities, but we have ever been impressed with growing conviction of your humility, your modesty of demeanor, your patience and charity towards all.

In the performance of your duties within this sacred edifice you have been untiring, and your personal piety has constituted a living example for us to follow and emulate insofar as it is in our power to do. Your administrative ability is shown in the happy financial condition in which we find the parish today, and in the almost perfect condition you leave properties of church, presbytery, convent and school; we are deeply touched by and shall long remember, the zeal and untiring labor with which you devoted your self to the beautifying of our cemetery. You have ever been the faithful friend, consolation and strength of the sick and dying, while your unbounded charity towards the poor and the afflicted has left an impression upon us that is more easily recognized than expressed in words. The place you have occupied in the hearts of our children is most evidently expressed in the consternation and regret with which they all regard your approaching departure.

Coupled with your departure, Rev. Father McRae, we have also learned with sorrow of the removal from our midst of your co-laborer, Rev. Father Wylie, the parishioners of our parish wish to testify to him also, the esteem and respect in which they hold him and to express their thanks for his friendly kindness and generous labors in our midst.

In attempting to express in these few words, our measure of your priestly qualities and happy pastorate in St. Joseph's Parish, we beg of you, Rev. Father McRae, to accept this offering of your parishioners as a humble expression of our lasting gratitude and our sincere love and respect.

Our regret at your departure will be tempered by our faith in your abiding friendship and by the hope that you will still remember us in your prayers and Masses. We, in our part, pray to God to strengthen and sustain you in your new labors so that your life-work may continue to be that of the beloved Pastor and faithful friend, an inspiration to all as the exemplar of Christian virtue.

On behalf of the congregation of the parish of St. Joseph, Lancaster Ontario, this 9th day of October, A.D., 1932. Signed—Parishioners.

MRS. A. CHARBONNEAU

A very sad death occurred in St. Anne's road in the township of West Hawkesbury when Mrs. Alderie Charbonneau (nee Landriault), passed away at the age of sixty years after only two days illness being surrounded by all the members of her family. Mrs. Charbonneau had always enjoyed good health until last Wednesday when she was suddenly taken with paralysis and had to take to her room where she gradually grew weaker until Friday evening, Oct. 7, when she passed away. Her funeral, one of the largest yet seen in the district took place on Monday morning, 10th inst., services being held in the Roman Catholic Church of Hawkesbury, after which interment took place in the family plot in the parish cemetery.—Hawkesbury, Echo.

Deceased was the mother of our esteemed townsman, Dr. E. Charbonneau who has the warm sympathy of Alexandrians generally in his irreparable loss.
