One Hundredth Anniversary of Formation St. Finnan's Parish

"O sprung from the Kings who in Islay kept slate, Proud chiefs of Clanranald, Glengarry and Sleat, Combine like three streams from one mountain of snow, And restless in union rush down on the foe."

After '45 it is the era of evictions, sheep-walks, enlistments in regiments for foreign wars—from hopeless penal laws, from the galling tyranny of red-coat patrols to enforce prohibition of language, dress and religion, there was only one escape—the exodus of the Glengarry clans from their native land.

When the American Revolution broke out in 1775 there were a number of the clan settled in Tryon county, Province of New York, near the banks of the Mohawk river. In view of the approaching struggle, Lord North, a few months before, had passed the celebrated "Quebec Act", establishing the Catholic religion in Canada and providing for a Legislative Council. This timely measure more than probably saved this portion of North America for the British Crown, but south of the St. Lawrence, it was curiously enough regarded by several of the more Puritan colonies "as one of the last wrongs done to them by the British Government." "We think" said the Continental Congress of 1774 declared—"the Legislature of Great Britain is not authorized to establish a religion fraught with sanguinary and impious tenets", a violently worded protest, framed by John Jay, many years afterwards American Minister in London.

Though the Highland emigrants had small cause to love King George or his government, for in their hearts they desired to avenge Culloden—yet their patriotism gained the mastery over all other considerations, and they armed themselves to the number of 150 ready to aid in the suppression of any outbreak in favor of the growing cause of liberty. At this time General Johnson was no more, but his son, Sir John, a Colonel in the army, placed himself at the head of the hastily formed levies which soon swelled to over three hundred strong. All hope of resistance, however, was quickly dashed to the ground by the sudden appearance of General Schuyler at the head of a vastly superior force. The little band of Highlanders were surrounded, forced to surrender their arms and yield up Mr. Allan Macdonell of Collachie and some other gentlemen as hostages for their future peaceable behaviour.

Then began the exodus from the Mohawk Valley to the northern banks of the St. Lawrence—where they reached in nineteen days after "having encountered all the sufferings that it seem possible for man to endure."

The first Catholic Church St. Raphaels was established in 1786 or thereabouts by the Rev. Alexander Scotus Macdonell.

Later on, in 1803, came the Rev. Alexander Macdonell with a number of emigrants from Glengarry, Scotland. The story of their great churchman, statesman and patriot, is so well known that it is not necessary to dwell upon it. Suffice it to say that he was for thirty-six years the leading figure in making history for Upper Canada. When the settlers found themselves numerous enough they established the parish of St. Finnan's in Alexandria—with their first pastor Rev. John Macdonald. Here for one hundred years this parish has flourished and continuous work has gone on for the spiritual and temporal well-being of all who wished to accept of its administration.

But what is a hundred years' celebration in itself, unless it is based upon the very spirit on which this place and this county were formed. Its people without distinction of race or creed or other sentiments, religious and social, during the past hundred years has remained a unit and yet a distinctive entity, Catholic and Presbyterian, Scotch, Irish, French, English, German. This is what made Glengarry—the spirit of Glengarry—known to America as it has made known Glengarry in Scotland for the past thousand years.

"Upon 'this spirit of Glengarry'—a something intangible, indefinable—yet always tacit—and always felt by those who have ever come in contact with its people, I would, for a few moments dwell. To-night, while we gather here in song and dance, there are thousands scattered throughout the Dominion and the U.S.A., who are with us in thought, longing to see and hear what you see and hear, the music, song and dance that take us back to Jona, Bannockburn, Montrose, Dundee, Prince Charlie, the battles of the Empire."

What has Glengarry in Canada done? A glance only at its statesmen—Colonel John Macdonell and Hugh Macdonell, representatives of this county in the first Parliament of Upper Canada in 1792. Later on as a representative—The Right Reverend Alexander Macdonell. John Sandfield Macdonald—First Premier of Ontario, D. A. Macdonald, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; leaders in the army, Spanish John. Colonel John Macdonell, aide-de-camp to General Brock, Colonel, Red George Macdonell, Colonel Chisholm and down to our own days—Colonels in the last war—Lieut. General Sir. Archibald C. Macdonell; Major-General D. A. Macdonell, Quarter Master General, Colonel D. J. Macdonald, Strathcona Horse, Colonel A. G. F. Macdonald. Leaders in business world, starting with fur traders in the West—Fraser, Miles Macdonell, McGillis; Railroad builders—McArthur Macdonalds, McMartins, McDougalds, Purcells, etc.; Athletes—Col. R. R. McLennan, McDonalds, Raysides. These are the men who spent their days in the service of God, their church and their country. We are reaping the benefits of the seed sown some 140 or 150 years ago by these noble men. They planted on this very spot the seed of British institutions for the county of Glengarry, and its sons have gone forth from their native heaths and covered themselves with glory from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Gulf of Mexico to this Dominion's most northerly boundary.

These men are not dead. Their spirit lives, "On the boundless plain of eternity, Their serried tents are spread, And memory guards in sacred rounds the hivaous of the dead."

Let that spirit live—and we shall hand down to those who follow—a heritage that will continue to bring unity, peace and a love for the home life that will be the pride of Glengarry.

One Hundred Years of Religious Works in St. Finnan's

After Bishop Macdonell moved to Kingston the Catholic population of Alexandria and vicinity, owing to their increased numbers, feeling that the time was opportune for a division of the county into two separate and distinct parishes—consequently petitioned the Bishop, setting forth their views and intentions on the subject. His Lordship, being practical in all things, saw the necessity and justice of the demand, with the result, in short, that the division was made and the Alexandria parish formed comprising the two rear townships with the 9th Concession of Lancaster, excepting however, that portion of the 1st of Kenyon lying west of lot number 7. Thus the mother church lost half her former possessions, but being a family concern, all were satisfied.

The site chosen for the new church was that of the present cathedral and several acres were secured for a cemetery in connection therewith, this must have been in the year 1829, as the records show that the first interment took place on the 29th September of that year, that of Angus Chisholm, comparatively a young man, and a brother of the late Colonel Angus Chisholm. The second interment was the grandmother of Mr. H. R. Macdonald and the third the great-grandmother of Mr. John A. McDougald, of Cornwall, while today the number whose remains found a resting place in that hallowed spot since that time run into the thousands. The erection of the church was immediately commenced. Money was scarce but the Catholic spirit was strong and building materials of all kinds plentiful, lumber having no commercial value beyond the immediate requirements of the people, and what it would fetch after being reduced to ashes. The men were robust and strong and imbued with that indomitable spirit of determination peculiar to their race, at once set to work—one supplying stone, another sand and lime, others furnishing timber, lumber, etc. while the mechanical part of the work was in the hands of the tradesman. All this was done without consideration or fee, until the sacred edifice was completed, and the first Mass celebrated on Christmas night 1832, the celebrant being the Rev. Mr. John, as he was popularly known, the first parish priest of Alexandria.

While the work of building the church was nearing completion, Bishop Macdonell came down from Kingston to St. Raphaels, and "unceremoniously" drove out to Alexandria to see what progress was being made with the erection of the new church. He found a large number of people at work under the superintendence of their pastor. The Bishop expressed much gratification at finding matters so satisfactory, and so expressed himself much to the delight of all present. In reply Mr. John remarked, "Mr. Allister, this is going to be a cathedral". No doubt this remark was founded on the fact that the church was large, and somewhat pretentious for that period.

Considering the primitive condition of things at that time, the church presented a very respectable and imposing appearance. It was a frame structure on solidly built foundations, the rear part, built semi-circular, forming the sanctuary; the front part was a simple with a tower and spire proportionately built, the latter pointing heavenward a distance of one hundred feet, and the cross successfully placed in position thereon, by the late Gregor McKinnon. The dimensions of the interior were 48 by 100 feet with a gallery supported by rounded pillars resting on square pedestals along the front and extending on both sides as far as the communion railing. The windows were Gothic, while at the rear of the sanctuary a fairly sized vestry was constructed. It was here that Mr. John lived for the first two or three years, when the small log house, a little to the east of the Bishop's residence, which a short time ago, was built, became his permanent residence.

The bell that found a resting place in the tower of the church was comparatively small, but had good sounding qualities, could be distinctly heard for miles around, and was the gift of the late Roderick McGillis of the 14th of Lochiel who purchased it in Quebec. This bell in due course made way for a larger one, and is now doing service for St. Margaret's convent.

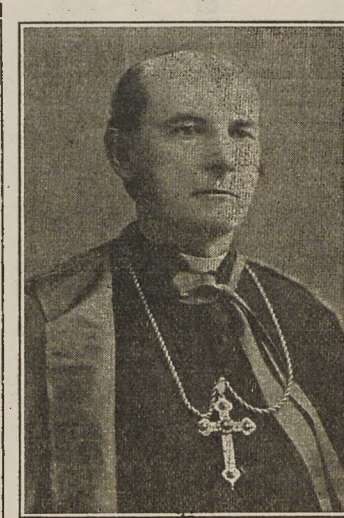

Mr. John was a native of the Glen Charlottenburg, studied for holy orders in the Montreal Seminary, and after being ordained returned to his native county and became closely allied with the Bishop and the college established at St. Raphaels, the ruins of which are to be seen today, and when the new parish was formed, he was selected not only on account of his ability, but of the extreme piety which he possessed, to take possession of the new charge. Needless to add, the high estimation in which he was held by his Bishop was fully verified during the years of his pastorate by the people who formed his congregation. During the thirteen years that Father John ministered to the spiritual wants of his people, material advancements were made in the temporal affairs of the parish, and among his last was the construction of a convent, the foundations of which were laid and the wall erected to the height of seven or eight feet. This was on the site of the present Boys' School, but with his declining health, was not destined to be completed. The Rev. Father, yielding to the malady from which he was suffering, passed to his eternal reward and left the people who he loved so much on the 9th of May, 1845, and the remains, with due ceremony were deposited under the sanctuary of the church which he labored so hard to erect. By a clause in his will, Father John left 100 acres of land, now known as Johnstown, for the benefit of the Catholic schools of Alexandria.

For a short time after Father John's death, a Rev. Father Clark fulfilled the sacred duties, when he, in turn, was succeeded by Rev. Denis Begley, whose term of office though comparatively short, was productive of much good. He, it was, that conceived the idea and started the building of the Presbytery, which gave way to the present magnificent palace, and in its construction utilized the stones previously destined for the convent. Having been named to fill another important mission by his Bishop, Father Begley was reluctantly forced to leave Alexandria in 1851, making way for the Rev. Alexander Macdonell, who came to his new pastorate from Lochiel. He was an uncle of ex-Reeve Angus McDonald, and also a relative of Vicar-General Corbett of Cornwall. He proved to be an excellent priest, fluent in several languages, and a most eloquent and forcible preacher. Physically a very delicate man, the arduous duties incumbent upon him told upon his constitution and death came to his relief on the 4th May, 1853.

During the several months' illness of Father Macdonell, the Rev. John Mead attended to the spiritual wants of the parish, and in the autumn of the same year, Rev. John McLachlan was appointed resident priest.

Father McLachlan was a Scotchman of the highest type and brought with him advanced ideas, and lost no time in putting them into practice. Realizing the size of the parish and its then accumulated wealth, his first act was to renovate his church by painting and decorating it in a somewhat artistic manner. His next move was the establishment in 1854 of a separate school under the auspices of the Christian Brothers, of which there were five, the Principal being Rev. Brother M. Joseph, the others, brothers Stephen, Condon, Welch and Leonard. The classes were held in the vestry connected with the church, and among the students who received their primary education at their hands, we might mention were His Grace, Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston, his brother, J. N. Gauthier, 4th Kenyon, J. A. McDougald, of Cornwall, Duncan A. McDonald, P.M., Duncan T. Chisholm, Alexander Chisholm, D. D. McPhee, Dan K. McDonald and others.

Of the above named Mr. J. N. Gauthier at this date, June 29th, 1933, is

Next in order was the erection of the convent school, which took place the following year and was placed under the charge of the Sisters of Holy Cross. To make certain of the non-failure of the undertaking Father McLachlan told his parishioners in advance to prepare for the event, and whatever amount would be contributed by the parish, he would gladly double from his own private purse. Needless to say that the appeal struck a responsive chord in the hearts of the people, and in a few days the work of construction was commenced. On the day appointed for the laying of the corner stone, with all due ceremony, by His Lordship Bishop Phalen, the church premises surrounded by a high cedar fence, had but one entrance, and Father McLachlan at an early hour took possession of the gateway, and all who entered did so, after having paid their entrance fee. In this connection an incident worth recalling, was when the Bishop emerged from the house robed in purple and rochette, was proceeding to the church, he was abruptly stopped by the priest, and politely informed that no person was admitted till after he had paid his entrance fee. The Bishop stood for a moment, looked at the priest, then smilingly complied by dropping a ten dollar bill in the extended basket—and proceeded on. The contributions of the day proved eminently satisfactory, and true to his word Father McLachlan doubled it, thus providing sufficient funds for the establishment of the first convent in Alexandria. This energetic and noble priest had other projects in view, but in October of the following year he died somewhat suddenly.

The next parish priest was the Rev. Jas. J. Chisholm, a son of the late Colonel Chisholm, who was educated in Rome and had the degree of Doctor of Divinity conferred upon him there. Like his predecessors, Dr. Chisholm, as he was commonly called, was endeared to his people and did much to advance the interests of the parish. He built the Boys' brick school, and made numerous improvements to the convent, and to his forethought and good taste the people of today, owe the maple trees that now so beautifully ornament the church property. In 1866 Father Chisholm was transferred to the parish of Perth, where he died suddenly on the 1st May, 1878. Being a born native of St. Finnan's parish and its respected and beloved pastor for upwards of ten years, a deputation representing the parish in the persons of the late A. D. MacPhee, Angus Campbell, Duncan A. McDonald and J. A. McDougald, accompanied by Rev. Alexander Macdonell, attended the funeral obsequies.

Following the departure of Dr. Chisholm, the Rev. J. S. O'Connor, then of Cornwall was the next incumbent and during the thirteen years of his residence there did much to advance the spiritual as well as the temporal interests of the people. He was a strong advocate of temperance, and did much in that particular field of labor, doing away with many abuses that previously existed. He was instrumental in still further enlarging, by the addition of two wings, the Convent School. In the spring of 1879 Father O'Connor was transferred to the parish of Perth, and shortly afterwards the title of dignity of Deau was conferred upon him.

Rev. Alexander Macdonell, later the Bishop of Alexandria, for many years parish priest of Lochiel, was appointed the successor of Father O'Connor, entering upon his duties on the 23rd of June, 1879. This date marked an epoch in the history of the parish, unprecedented at any period previously. Father Macdonell scanned the situation and acted promptly. His first act was to surround himself with a powerful executive, its personnel representing the different sections and concessions of the parish. In formulating this departure the far-seeing pastor had in view a work of considerable magnitude, which required the united efforts of the entire parish—namely the erection of a church of larger capacity and more modern architecture, consequently steps were taken to create a fund for that purpose and on the 22nd of September, 1883, the contract was awarded to Messrs John R. Chisholm and Son. Within a week the first ground was broken. On the 14th July the corner stone was laid, and on the 15th March following solemn dedication of the new church, one of the finest to be seen anywhere in Eastern Ontario, took place. In September, 1886, Father Macdonell was honored by his Bishop by being elevated to the dignity of Vicar-General. During the early part of 1890 His Grace, the Archbishop of Kingston, for obvious reasons, decided upon a further division of the Arch-Diocese by creating a new See to be known as the Diocese of Cornwall. Several names were mentioned in connection with the new appointment, among whom were Vicar-General Macdonell, Alexandria, and Dean Gauthier, of Brockville. The people of Glengarry demurred on the plea that Glengarry had a better claim for the Episcopal Seat than Cornwall, and the Archbishop most generously yielded, with the result that the change was made and in due course Vicar-General Macdonell received the appointment as first Bishop of Alexandria, his consecration taking place on the 28th of October, 1890, at which several Bishops and fully seventy-five clergy were present, all of whom were feted by the parishioners in true Glengarry hospitality.

His Excellency Most Rev. Felix Courtier, Bishop of Alexandria

The newly consecrated Bishop, while assuming greater responsibilities in his field of labor, yet continued in the modest course he had previously outlined for himself, and true to a trait much pronounced in his character—thinking and planning for the welfare of others rather than the comforts of his own person, lost no time in arranging the necessary preliminaries to the building of a new Convent, one of sufficient capacity to meet the requirements of the times and increasing population of the place.

In 1891, therefore, the erection of the present magnificent three-storey brick building was commenced and within a year completed and equipped with all modern appliances and conveniences, at a cost of some $18,000.00 thus providing a suitable home for the children and the good sisters of the order of Holy Cross, who had cast in their lot with the parish of St. Finnan's thirty-five years previously, and during that long period patiently and resignedly submitted to numerous and varied privations.

After the completion of the church, His Lordship's ambition was fully gratified—feeling that no further work involving much outlay was urgently needed, but in this the members of the committee respectfully disagreed with him—pointing out the necessity for better and more commodious quarters for himself, to which His Lordship replied that with some slight repairs the old house would be ample for his needs. The committee persisted, however, and in the end the Bishop reluctantly yielded. The site for the new building could not be changed for obvious reasons, consequently the old stone mansion, after having withstood wind and weather for fifty-five years, had to be pulled down to make room for a more modern structure. The building, when completely finished and from its size and artistic beauty, compares with any of the kind in the province.

The completion of the palace, with the increased accommodation it afforded enabled His Lordship to gather around him several of the young priests of the diocese, who acted as his assistants and were given the benefit of his ripe experience and rich example.

For upwards of two years and a half, while able to carry on his duties, Bishop Alexander Macdonell had not enjoyed the best of health. Saturday, 29th April, 1905, he as was his wont, said Mass at 6.15 that morning in St. Margaret's Convent, which proved to be the last he was destined to celebrate as that evening he was suddenly taken dangerously ill. Subsequently he was removed to the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Montreal, accompanied by the late Hon. Donald MacMillan M.D. his physician, where he passed away on the 29th May, 1905.

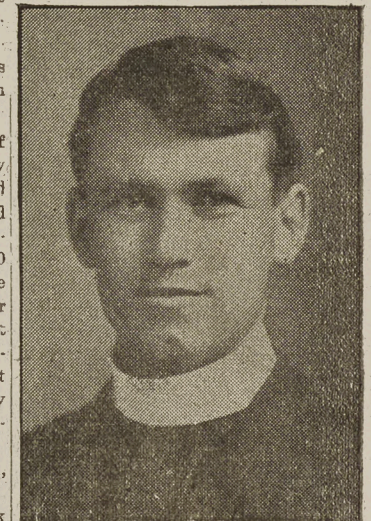

Very Rev. Geo. Corbet, V. G. Cornwall, was appointed administrator, with St. Finnan's parish in charge of Revs. J. E. McRae, J. M. Foley and J. Majeau, until the naming of Rev. William Andrew Macdonell, D.D., parish priest of St. Andrews, as the second Bishop of Alexandria. His official entry to Alexandria was certainly a memorable and historic scene on the 23rd June, 1906 and on the day following, in St. Finnan's Cathedral, with all the ecclesiastical pomp and splendor of ceremonial which marks such occasions, in the Catholic Church, he was consecrated and installed as second Bishop by His Grace Archbishop Gauthier, of Kingston, in the sanctuary being Archbishop Duhamel, Ottawa, Archbishop Bouches, Montreal, Archbishop O'Connor, Toronto, Bishop McEvay, London and Bishop Scollard of Sault Ste. Marie.

Bishop Macdonell was a son of Glengarry having been born near Grants' Corners, in the fourth concession of the Indian Lands Reservation, of the Township of Charlottenburgh. His father was the late Donald A. Macdonell, and his mother, Elizabeth Corbet. He was educated in the Public Schools of his native county, subsequently attending St. Joseph's College, Ottawa. His theological course was completed at the Grand Seminary, Montreal—ordained in September, 1881, by the late Archbishop Cleary, in the historic Church of St. Raphaels. After serving at Gananoque for several years, in 1886, he was appointed as the parish priest of Glen Nevis, his immediate predecessor in that parish being His Grace Archbishop Gauthier. In 1890 he was appointed Pastor of St. Andrews where he labored up to the time of his elevation to the Bishopric, and his fourteen years as head of the See of Alexandria were productive of such work as Church Extension and Education. He was a strong advocate of temperance and wide recognition and deep consideration invariably followed any pronouncement in that regard that fell from his lips.

Among new parishes opened was that of the Church of the Sacred Heart, here, created through the division of St. Finnan's parish.

As head of St. Finnan's parish, the Rev. Bishop set the example in his own Cathedral as to redecoration of the interior of sacred edifices by employing the best of artists who in a series of paintings strove and succeeded in bringing out, in each instance, a devotional effect. They were the Messrs. Panzironi Brothers of New York City.

This illustrious and revered prelate

PACK EGGS BROAD END UP

Empire Investigations into the Watery White Condition.

Considerable time has been devoted to an effort to solve the problem of "watery whites" in eggs—a problem which has given rise to much difficulty in the trade and considerable loss to producers, says the report of the Empire Marketing Board. Over a period of two years a number of factors, including the liability of various breeds to produce "watery whites", the system of management, for example, free ranges versus semi-intensive, low versus high feeding, etc., have been examined. None of these factors appear to be responsible to any appreciable extent for the condition known as "watery white."

In the course of the investigation, eggs twenty-four hours old and packed broad end (air cell) down had to be sent eighteen miles by road, and they showed on testing a remarkably high proportion of "watery whites". On following up this clue, consignments of eggs, one half packed broad end down, other half broad end up, where despatched on journeys by motor and train. The results confirmed previous indications, and a report is to be issued. A further interesting fact has emerged from the investigations, namely, that if the vibration and jolting received in transit has not been excessive the "watery white" condition will disappear in a few hours if, after receipt at the packing house, the eggs are stored broad end up.

Parasitological Research in Canada

Last year's report of the Empire Marketing Board referred to a decision of the board to share with the National Research Council of Canada the cost of maintaining an Institute of Helminthology at Macdonald College, McGill University, Montreal, for the investigation of parasitic diseases of domestic animals.

The Laboratory buildings have been completed and equipped during the year with funds provided by the Quebec Government. Dr. T. W. M. Cameron, formerly of Edinburgh University, has been appointed Director of the Institute and work started on the 1st April, 1932. The establishment of the Institute has been welcomed by agricultural and lay opinion in Canada. The administration of the work is under the control of a specially appointed Associate Committee on Parasitology of the National Research Council, of which Dr. H. M. Tory, President of the Council, is chairman.

WHITE PINE BLISTER RUST

Blister rust is a disease, generally fatal to white pine, which is caused by one of the rust fungi. Certain of the rusts are unique in that they require two different host plants upon which to complete their life cycles. The fungus which causes blister rust is one of these as it must have white pines on the one hand and currants or gooseberries on the other for its full development.

Introduced into Canada about 25 years ago on white pine nursery stock imported from Europe, blister rust has gradually spread until now it is present in all districts in which this tree occurs. Blister rust kills trees of all sizes, though large trees withstand its effects much longer than young trees.

The rust enters a pine tree by way of the needles and grows downwards into the bark of the twig. For about three years after infection there is no conspicuous symptom of disease, but after that time the affected part of the limb swells and the edges of the diseased area assume a characteristic dull yellowish green to orange colour. During May and June, conspicuous orange-yellow blisters break through the bark. These contain a powder composed of spores which serve the purpose of disseminating the rust. These spores are carried by the wind to the leaves of currant or gooseberries. Upon the under sides of these leaves the rust appears in the form of minute orange-yellow pustules. From these pustules arise spores which can only infect other currants and gooseberries. From midsummer onward to the end of the growing season a second type of spore is produced which carries the fungus back to the pines. The rust is annual in currants and gooseberries, but in the pine it is perennial, the diseased areas or cankers gradually increasing in size until the tree is girdled and killed.

Fortunately blister rust can be controlled, since, as has been pointed out, two hosts are necessary for the perpetuation of the fungus, removal of one of these effectively stops further development. In most cases currants and gooseberries are of less value than white pine, and it is these which are then removed. All species of wild and cultivated currants and gooseberries are susceptible to rust, but of them all the cultivated black currant is the most dangerous as the rust develops most abundantly upon it. Under forest conditions it has been found that pines can be protected from this disease by the removal of all currants and gooseberries within a distance of 900 feet, excepting the case of the cultivated black currant which should be removed for a distance of one mile from the pines.

An illustrated circular dealing with this serious disease may be had free upon application to the Dominion Botanist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.—H. T. GUSOW, Dominion Botanist.

The most striking looking spruce hedge is the blue form of the Colorado spruce, but there are many people who do not care for such conspicuous decoration of their gardens.

Amateur gardeners who may be intending to plant a hedge this fall for the purpose of preventing the drifting of snow should keep in mind that the hedge should not be less than 35 feet away from the road it is desired to protect. If the hedge be planted closer, the snow may bank up so much as to extend to the road, when it would be better if the hedge had not been there at all.

TIMELY CEREAL IDEAS

(By Betty Barclay)

Spinach is nearly always a problem, for in spite of all that is known concerning its healthful qualities, in the majority of homes there are those who will not eat it. To prepare a spinach dish that is practically guaranteed to overcome this obstacle, cook spinach in the usual manner. When spinach is nearly done melt butter in a pan. Pour in corn flakes and toss until well covered with butter. Place spinach in serving dish, spread the hot, buttered corn flakes over the spinach, and serve.

Particularly during the summer months, supper foods for the younger children should be light, appetizing and easily digestible. They must supply the needed energy, but they should not be kinds which takes a long time to digest. If they are, they are liable to keep the child from falling asleep quickly after he is tucked between the sheets. Corn flakes and other prepared cereals, with milk or cream and fresh fruit, provide an excellent means of meeting all these requirements. From the point of view of the busy mother, they are easy to serve and reduce the time spent over the kitchen stove.

Chopped nut meats are not always available when preparing Waldorf Salad. In place of them sprinkle bran flakes over the salad just before serving. The bran flakes supply a delicious crispness to the texture of the salad, while their nut-like flavor goes well with the apples. Prepared cereals provide a pleasing variation from bread crumbs in breadings, chops, fish, or vegetables such as eggplant and tomatoes. They give a golden topping to the casserole and add to its appetite appeal.

Lemon Junket Ice Cream (Automatic Refrigerator)

One cup milk (1-2 pt.), 1 cup heavy cream (1-2 pt.), 1-2 cup sugar (or 1-4 cup corn syrup and 1-4 cup sugar, 1-4 teaspoon lemon flavoring, 1 tablet for junket, 1 tablespoon cold water.

Dissolve tablet for junket in tablespoon cold water. Mix milk, sugar, and lemon flavoring. Warm to lukewarm (110° F.)—not hot, stirring constantly. Remove from stove. Be sure the sugar is dissolved. Add the dissolved tablet for junket. Stir a few seconds, and pour at once into the refrigerator tray. Let stand in room undisturbed until firm and cool—about ten minutes. Then beat in cream which has been whipped, and place in freezing compartment at as cold a temperature as possible. When partly frozen (it will be thick around the edges), scrape from the sides and bottom of the pan and then beat the contents up in refrigerator tray quickly with a fork or large spoon and place back in refrigerator to finish freezing.

Vanilla Junket With Fruit Fluff

One package powder for vanilla junket, 1 pint milk, 1-4 cup sugar, 1-2 cup whipping cream. 1 large or two small navel oranges.

Prepare vanilla junket according to directions on package. Chill in refrigerator. Whip the cream adding 1-4 cup sugar just before the cream is stiff. When ready to serve, top the junket with the whipped cream, and across the cream place sections of orange. If the orange is large, use four 1-2 sections; if small use four whole sections for each dish of dessert.

TEMPTING SUMMER PIES

Don't banish pie from the dessert list even if it is ninety in the shade. There are so many summer pies to tempt the most jaded hot weather appetite. Here are two of them.

Marvel Lemon Pie

One package lemon-flavored gelatin, grated rind and juice of 2 lemons, 2 egg yolks, 3-4 cup sugar, 1-2 cups boiling water, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 baked 9-inch pie shell.

Combine gelatin, sugar, salt, and lemon rind with 3 tablespoons water. Add egg yolks and stir well. Add remaining water, stirring until gelatin is dissolved. Cool. Add lemon juice. Chill. When slightly thickened, turn into cold pie shell. Chill until firm. Cover with Three-Minute Meringue or top with whipped cream.

Three-Minute Meringue

Two egg whites, unbeaten, 2 tablespoons water, 1-2 cup sugar, dash of salt, few drops vanilla or almond extract.

Put egg whites, sugar, salt, and water in upper part of double boiler. Beat with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, and beat 1 minute; then remove from fire, and continue beating 2 minutes longer, or until mixture will stand in peaks. Add flavoring. Beat well. Spread over top of pie.

Peach Pie Glaze

Eight (4 cups) fresh peaches, sliced, 1 package orange-flavored gelatin, dash of salt, 3-4 cup sugar, 1-2 cups boiling water, 1 baked 9-inch pie shell.

CARROT SOUP

This is a suitable soup for summer meals, when young carrots may be brought. This is enough for six. You will want a pound of carrots cut in very thin shavings. Put these into a stew-pan with about a tablespoon of butter and a teaspoon (scant) of sugar and let them fry gently with the cover on and without browning for 20 minutes.

Then add a pint and a half of stock or water, and four potatoes cut in quarters. Put on the cover again and cook gently for three-quarters of an hour. Pass the soup through a sieve and put it back into the stewpan with three-quarters of a pint of stock or water bring to the boil, stirring well and let it simmer for another quarter of an hour.

Take it off the fire, stir in a piece of butter the size of a small walnut, and serve with fried croutons of bread.

One Hundred Years of Religious Works in St. Finnan's

Right Rev. Felix Couturier, D.D., O.B.E., M.C., third Bishop of the Diocese of Alexandria, arrived in Canada, on Sunday evening, August 21st, 1921, spending the following day quietly in Cornwall with the then Administrator, Very Rev. Geo. Corhet. He came to Alexandria, Tuesday, afternoon, accompanied by several clergymen and a number of prominent gentlemen of Cornwall, the party being joined at several points by delegations in motors representing the various parishes thus emphasizing the general spirit of gratification at the appointment of a new Bishop. By the hour fixed for his arrival, 5.30 p.m., hundreds of the parishioners and others had assembled at the southern outskirts of Alexandria and as the distinguished party came in view a procession was formed, headed by the cadet band of the parish of the Sacred Heart, and the Alexandria Pipe Band and the march from that point to the Cathedral was a triumphant one, the streets being lined with many from the town and country, the chimes of the Church of the Sacred Heart and St. Finnan's Cathedral and the bells of the schools all pealed out a welcome, all of which must have impressed the Bishop designate.

Present at the ceremony of Bishop Couturier's enthronement were His Grace, Archbishop Spratt, Metropolitan, Kingston; His Grace Archbishop Gauthier of Ottawa, and His Lordship Bishop Fallon of London. The Te Deum having been sung by the choir, Rev. Dr. Wm. Guinevan, Secretary to His Lordship, from the pulpit read the Papal decree in Latin and English, proclaiming him Bishop of the Diocese of Alexandria.

Rev. D. A. Campbell read the clergy's address; Mr. E. O'Callaghan, Cornwall, an address from the English-speaking people of the diocese and the French address was presented by Mr. J. A. C. Huet, to all of which the Bishop made suitable reply. Bishop Couturier solemnized his first Pontifical High Mass in St. Finnan's Cathedral, at ten o'clock, Wednesday morning, when practically every seat was occupied. Bishop Fallon of London delivered the English sermon and at the conclusion of the Mass Bishop Emard of Valleyfield, spoke in French.

Subsequently Bishop Couturier entertained his guests at dinner.

Since assuming the reins of office, His Excellency, has introduced modern business methods of administration throughout the Diocese and unified the system of book keeping in the various parishes. He has encouraged by prizes and otherwise a more serious and intensive study of Catholic doctrine, has lent his distinguished patronage to many uplifting movements and has been a source of strength and encouragement to his clergy and the laity as well.

Fraser McQuat, Sherbrooke, Que., on Wednesday, 28th June, in the person of Isabel Cameron, widow of the late Capt. Donald MacDiarmid, M.D., I.P.S. of this place.

Though suffering from indifferent health for some time, her sudden passing came as a shock to her many friends in Eastern Ontario.

Liberal Rally Complete Success

HEPBURN ACCLAIMED

Wednesday, July 5th was a red letter day in the annals of the Glengarry Liberal Association. It was the occasion of Glengarry's official welcome to the new Liberal leader in Ontario Mr. Mitchell F. Hepburn who will expect within the next few months become Premier of Ontario.

Mr. Hepburn and the visiting speakers were met at the Ottawa House shortly after 6 p.m. and partook of a dainty supper at this well-known hostelry with a score of the members of the Glengarry executive. Immediately after the conclusion of the supper the speakers and the public were entertained by the Alexandria Citizens' Band which afterwards led the parade to the Armouries in which a large number of cars took part. The Main street had been tastefully decorated with flags and our citizens generally joined with enthusiasm in welcoming the Liberal leader to Glengarry.

In spite of the intense heat and of the numerous counter-attractions which were being held in various parts of the County that evening a crowd which filled the armouries and was estimated at approximately one thousand people which gathered from all parts of Glengarry and from the adjoining portions of Prescott added to Glengarry for Provincial purposes. A goodly representation was also noticed from Moose Creek and other parts of Stormont County thus showing the interest which the people in this Eastern district were taking in the programme and the platform of the Liberal party, which has, as a major plank the reduction of the taxes which have so greatly increased for the farmers the cost of production.

After the Band had rendered a suitable selection in the Armouries the meeting was called to order by the President of the Glengarry Liberal Association Mr. John D. McRae who extended a cordial welcome to those present and assured one and all that under the Leadership of Mr. Hepburn the Liberals in this Eastern District would rally to a man in defence of the rights of the common people and do their utmost to return the Liberal party to power under the general election in Ontario which is expected this autumn.

The next speaker was Mr. Herbert Plant of Ottawa, President of the Eastern Ontario Liberal Association. He outlined for the benefit of his hearers the work being done by the Liberals of Eastern Ontario, in organizing for the fight, explained the success which had greeted the efforts he made and the enthusiasm of the people in doing away with Toryism in Ontario and asked his hearers to spend every effort commencing immediately that night to assist him in realizing his ambition to return thirteen Liberals to Toronto out of the thirteen constituencies which comprise Eastern Ontario.

Mr. D. A. Macdonald K.C. who was acting as joint chairman in order to introduce the French speakers in their own language, then called upon Mr. Aurelien Belanger ex-M.L.A. Russell County to address the electors in French. Mr. Belanger responded in a masterly address which carried conviction in every statement and made a profound impression on those present.

The address of the evening, the magnet which had attracted so many from distant points of Glengarry on this occasion, was undoubtedly that of the Liberal leader Mr. Mitchell F. Hepburn. The Liberal Chief covered in detail the work of the various departments in Toronto, showed in a convincing manner how wastefully extravagant the Conservative Government had been demonstrated, how a policy of retrenchment which it introduced without lessening the efficiency of the administration and promised the electors that if the Liberals were returned to power not only would the Government expenditures be materially reduced but the revenue derived from gasoline tax and similar sources would be turned back to those who paid them by the complete taking over by the Government of the cost of Provincial Highways and other burdens now weighing so heavily on the rural sections of the Province.

The Liberal Leader also ripped to pieces the Conservative policy as to Hydro, pointed out how millions had been wasted on worthless power plants, radial railways and equipment, etc., and promised a thorough investigation. The Liberals upon going into power would open the books of the Province and would show the public where their money was going. As a parting shot, he promised that, if Henry prolonged the life of Parliament beyond the usual four year limit, any appointments four years would immediately be annulled by him after the end of the nullified upon the Liberals taking over the range of office.

Hon. Peter Heenan who has always been popular in Glengarry dwelt upon the trail of the people by Ferguson and Bennett. He dwelt upon numerous promises made by these gentlemen in order to go back into power, showed how inconsistent their conduct and policies had been and in a work maintained his well earned reputation as a forceful and witty speaker.

Mr. E. Bertrand, M.P. Prescott, by a fiery and convincing address showed the farmers what they could expect from a Government headed by Mitchell Hepburn, himself a farmer. He pointed out that over two-thirds of the monies collected by the County's Council went to the Provincial Government which used our County's Council as a collection agency for a large share of the taxes which it levied, and pointed out that the older portions of Ontario were paying for many services from which the newer portions, known as Northern Ontario were exempt.

The meeting was brought to a close by a short address from the present member James A. Sangster who launched a lusty attack upon the Conservative Government's hydro policies which resulted in the people of today paying the debts of governments to come. He pointed out that the rural sections were not deriving any service from the hydro electric system and that the Hydro slogan of "Hydro at cost" was nothing but a farce. The chairman announced to those present that there would be a meeting of the executive in Alexandria on Wednesday, July 19th early in the evening to fix the date for a Convention and place a candidate in the field and the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

We have been obliged to hold over the reports of the speeches made until next week and expect to give our readers full details of the masterly addresses delivered by the various speakers on this occasion.

An Important Event Coming

The Liberal Conservative Association of Glengarry, will hold a big Public Political Rally, on July 26th, Thursday at 8.15 p.m.

Watch this paper for full particulars.

Alexandrians Drop Two Close Decisions

The Alexandria Lacrosse team very nearly ended unbeaten record set up by the Cornwall Island Indians on Wednesday night when these two teams met under the new floodlights at the Athletic Grounds in Cornwall. Though the redmen eventually won out by a score of 8-6 the Alexs were leading by 5-2 at half-time and had they been in as good condition as their opponents, would undoubtedly have taken the game.

The Alexandrians had several changes in their line-up, young Murray McDonald filling Danis' position in the nets and playing a nice game all the way while among the forwards were Joe Marcoux who made his first appearance in a player's role this season and Y. Renaud one of Ottawa's better known lacrosse stars who showed the fans that he is a potential scorer at all times and celebrated his entry into district lacrosse with two goals.

Thomas, the Indian sharpshooter, got the initial tally soon after the start and Haynes neutralized that when he took a pass at centre and got through the defence to beat Hopps. Wilkins put Alexs in the lead when he went right in alone and Thomas tied it up again just before the bell on a pass from George. The second period saw the visitors run wild through the Indian team scoring three goals while blanking their opponents and generally showing their superiority at all times. Renaud got the first on a pass from Haynes and tallied again McCormick to Haynes to Renaud to make it 4-2. W. Macdonell made it 5-2 taking a pass from his brother Basil to run in on Hopps and the Indians were completely up in the air.

That ten minutes rest came at a bad time for our boys as the Indians calmed down and lead by Angus George, went out to play their usual strong game. It was Alexandria's turn to be hanked as Angus George scored 2 goals and gave 3 assists at put his team ahead 7 to 5 while our boys tried in vain to beat Hopps. B. Macdonell put us in the running again when he scored in the last period after intercepting an Indian pass but Thomas gave Angus George a pass inside our defence with two minutes to go and the game was on ice Indians 8, Alexs 6.

Last Friday night the locals lost an 11-6 decision to Canadians in Cornwall on very slippery grounds which spoiled many fine attempts. From first to last it was a great tussle, with plenty of hard-checking from both teams and it was quite evident they were in dead earnest in all they did. The score by periods was 3-2 after first, 5-3 at half-time, 6-4 at the 45 minute and 11-6 at the final bell. McCormick got Alexandria's first goal on a pass from W. Macdonell; Weir, Pilon, Wilkins and B. Macdonell getting the others in that order.

Plague Bacillus Found

by Japanese Scientist

The paths that lead to obscurity and fame are ever present in the field of science. Baron Shibasaburo Kitasato spent all his long life on the most painstaking researches on tuberculosis without making one new and really important contribution to our knowledge of the disease. But he discovered the bacillus of plague in a few days.

Forty years earlier, Dr. Claude Lillington relates in Hygeia Magazine, the world had settled down to the comfortable conviction that plague had little more than historical interest and that modern sanitation had banished it from our midst. In 1894 an epidemic of plague broke out in Hongkong which startled the entire world. Kitasato, who had been sent from Japan to Germany to study under the eminent scientist Robert Koch, hurried back to his own country. Two days after Kitasato had arrived in Hongkong, he had found numerous bacilli in the infected glands and in the heart of a patient who had died of plague. In a few days Kitasato again cabled Koch to tell him that he had succeeded in cultivating the bacillus artificially.

Humorist Uses His Pen

in Defense of Interest

If you think a humorist can't take the hit between his teeth, you are invited to read Robert Benchley's "Horse-Sense Editorial" in the Golden Book Magazine. He says:

The other day I met an old schoolmate. He was crying. "Well, old-timer," I said "what's that you've got in your hand?"

"My other hand," he replied shaking it.

Now, the reason my old schoolmate hadn't made good was that he kept one hand inside the other. He was drawing on his principal. He had never heard of such a thing as interest.

A lot of people think interest is a bad thing. They call people who take interest on their money "usurers." And yet Ezra was a "usurer." Job was a "usurer." St. Paul was a "usurer." Samuel M. Vaulcain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive works, is a "usurer." Think that over on your cash register and see if I am not right.

Sherman's Bridge Builder

The first skyscraper ever built, the Home Insurance building in Chicago, was razed to make way for the new 42-story Field building. Erected in 1885 to a height of 10 stories, and later increased to 12, this structure was the creation of William Le Baron Jenney, versatile engineer who built bridges for General Sherman's famous march to the sea. He is also reputed to have introduced pumpkin pie to Paris. Jenney got the idea of the skyscraper from the bamboo huts of the Philippines, for which four standing trees supply the framework. —Boston News Bureau.

Ways of the Hippopotamus

In spite of his terrifying appearance, the hippopotamus is not quarrelsome, and just wants to be left alone. He subsists on a vegetable diet. He loves to wallow in the water of some lazy stream, frequently sinking beneath the surface until only his nostrils and his eyes are visible. Upon the approach of an enemy the hippopotamus will take a deep breath and dive, remaining down for several minutes before coming up again to reconnoiter. He requires air, but his lung capacity is so great that he can stay under water for a considerable length of time.

Edison's Telephoto

Thomas A. Edison, back in 1894, expressed surprise that "the transmission of pictures by wire is not more used." "It is very easy of accomplishment," he was quoted as saying in an interview published in the Dallas News, "and newspapers could get accurate pictures of distant events in this manner. I have transmitted pictures this way and I would guarantee to send one 10 inches square a distance of 500 miles every 10 minutes. And every picture would be as good as the average newspaper 'cut' at that."—Detroit News.

Wholesome Sweet

Honey is one of the best of the high energy-producing foods. Composed almost entirely of simple sugars it can be assimilated with ease. Honey is especially recommended for athletes. The rapid absorption of the simple sugar of honey replaces the sugars in the blood muscles that have been burned by strenuous exercise. Because it is easily assimilated, honey can be utilized by the body without placing much of a burden on an enfeebled digestive tract and is also recognized as a valuable food for babies and children.

Colonial Buildings

The windows of the earliest houses built by the American Colonists were determined like the rest of the structure by necessity. They were at first hardly more than peepholes, for the colonists were more concerned about Indian attacks than they were about aid and light. Oiled paper and cloth were used, since glass was rare and expensive. The earliest of the windows were of the small casement type, changing to the double-hung sash. The earliest doors were rude constructions replaced by a simple paneled form.

Governor-General Visits Boys' Farm

The annual closing exercises of the Boys' Farm and Training School at Shawbridge, Que., were made memorable for the 150 boys of the institution recently when they were honored by the presence of the Earl of Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, who addressed the school and gave out the prizes. Accompanied by E. W. Beatty, K.C., chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who is also president of the Boys' School, and a number of directors and wellwishers of the institution, His Excellency was the object of a great ovation by the boys on the arrival of the special train at the Farm. This is shown in top photograph of the lay-out. Lower left, the Governor-General is shown shaking hands with Major Ralph Willecock, D.S.O., superintendent of the School, and at the right His Excellency is acknowledging the plaudits of the boys from the steps of the special train. It was the first time in the 25 years' existence of the School that a Governor-General of Canada had taken part in the closing exercises of the institution. His Excellency, addressing the School, stressed character as being of vital importance to success in life.

A STORY OF SWEDÉ CREEK
(By Earl Erickson)

For days, for weeks the Mississippi waters had been rising, crowding back over the bottomlands, overflowing the wooded marshes, and forming a lake in the heavy timber.

A yellow sunset cast long shadows quivering across the amber depths of the watery waste. The course of Swede Creek, like a current was outlined by rows of young willows out in the lake, that waved lazily toward the grove growing downward in the yellow water. Black and yellow, black and yellow waters filled all the clearing and all the timber, splashing in little dreary waves and ripples against oaks and cottonwoods.

Rosengren and the hired man appeared on a high bank, carrying a boat, an awkward old affair, which they managed to get down to the edge of the water.

When the water comes up into the timber, the farmers find good fishing o' nights in their own fields, so to say, and an hour after sunset, the flash of lanterns about the old boat revealed Rosengren, the hired man, and Pernilla preparing for the sport.

From a tin cylinder filled with kerosene, several wicks gave forth a glaring yellow light, tempered as to intensity by dense clouds of smoke and soot. This apparatus was sometimes carried, and sometimes fastened by a long pole to the side of the boat.

Pernilla took the oars and with strong, steady strokes rowed the old flat-bottomed boat into the clearing, as the men, with spear in hand, watched for the fish among the grass and leaves.

As they took the wagon road, spearing pickerel and catfish right in the wheel-ruts, or rowed across a little triangular patch of winter wheat whose sparse blades bode small harvest.

"Not very heavy grain here," said Rosengren, "but—" and he stabbed a fine rock-bass as a compensation from Nature.

As the boat stole along the edges of the heavy timber, the torch threw ghastly lights into the watery vistas among the trees, and owls hooted in the sacred recesses of the tree-tops as the fishes splashed through the shallow water.

Far to the east, over the distant Wisconsin Hills, shimmered a trembling radiance. Silver lights illumed fine fleecy fretwork of white clouds that grew brighter and brighter with opalescent edges, until above the dull forest rose the waning moon of May. Down over the watery waste of the bottomlands streamed the glory of the sky, spiriting forth troops and platoons of willow shadows, oak shadows, reed shadows, and grass shadows to dance in spectral silence over the dark, restless waters.

Running up in shallow places, the men often got out and waded off with torch and spears, leaving Pernilla alone in the dark.

Several times they pulled up on some grassy islet, tipped the boat to pour out the water, and silently resumed their slow way.

In the centre of the clearing was a large half-finished hay-shed. The rise of the river had stopped the builders, and there it rested like a Noah's ark on the face of the deep.

They were edging along its pole foundations, but it proved too hard to row through wet grass, so the two men walked up the shallows to pursue their prey.

Pernilla, from the shadow of the hayshed, watched them stride cautiously off, peering intently under every leaf and ledge. She was glad to be out in the night air. Her fevered was in a whirl of passion and sorrow, and as she had rowed back and forth over the silver-brocaded waters of the woods, she had been thinking of her wedding, of her lover so unjustly accused, of his calmness when arrested, of the same old question, "Who took the money?" She was tired of thinking, of wondering, of crying.

Then she felt in the dark that a form was near her and, speechless with terror, heard her name.

"Pernilla, Pernilla. Sh—sh—it's me—John Erick."

"You? You? I thought you were—" she faltered.

"Yes, yes, in jail. But I ran away to see you. I must find out if you think—"

"Oh, hush! The men are coming back. Don't let them find you, please go," she whispered, excitedly.

"But you must tell me—"

"Go, go! I'll come back tonight again—will you stay?"

"Yes—for heaven's sake don't let them find my boat around on the other side."

The men were back. Pernilla was all tremble.

"I'm cold, father, let's go home."

"Pretty soon, but fish is plenty tonight. See what a pickerel!" And he threw down upon the slimy mass of small fish a grand old monster that reached half the length of the boat.

Fifteen—sixteen pounds, anyway," he gleefully added.

Pernilla heart with dismay their plan of going around the hay-shed.

"I'm stiff as an oar sitting here, father, and cold, too, with my seat down in them nasty fish," she cried.

"Let me change work if you're going to fish more." With this she snatched the torch from the hired man, and there was nothing for him to do but take the oars.

They pulled around the northwest corner, and Pernilla's keen eyes detected John Erick's boat off in the shadows. Leaning heavily against the side of the boat, she gave it a lurch, screamed and dropped the torch in the water.

John Erick, from his perch up in the rafters of the shed, chuckled heartily at the girl's skilful manoeuvre and at the ejaculations of the disappointed men, as they fished around in the water for the old tin cylinder.

Pernilla sat down with a little nervous laugh, saying: "Let's go home, or the boat might tip again, and you'd lose your fine pickerel. I think 'twas him sent the light down."

Home they went, leaving all the fish except the big pickerel in the boat till morning. When Rosengren fastened this great prize to the spear, slinging it over his shoulders, the fish reached below the top of his boots, and was heavy enough to make the way seem long.

Pernilla thought the house never would get quiet, for with cooking coffee for the men, talking about the big pickerel, and with getting to bed, all was not still till after midnight.

Then, tucking a little gilt-edged Testament into the bosom of her dress, she went. As the ladder-like stair down the girls' room in the loft came down in the bed-room, she had to let herself out by way of the shanty roof. She wished the moon were not so bright, but silent as the moonlight itself, she slid down among the morning glories and young wild-cucumber vines. Swiftly she ran down the lane toward the bottoms, filled with unutterable thoughts. How clear it came to her that not for a moment had doubted John Erick's innocence. But now, now, what was this hideous stifling doubt? He had run away, run away—everyone would think him guilty. He could never be cleared, seeing he had run off.

Breathless, she sank down in a corner of the rail-fence. The whole length of the lane was white with amelan-chir bushes—the beautifully Juneberry dainty, loose lozemes, catching the—ah! in bloom. Right over her hung its May dew on their quivering tassels, that vibrated white and fragrant with every river breeze. The faint, exquisite odor seemed to soothe her fevered heart, and the whippoorwills sang incessantly up the bluffs.

Pernilla pulled the Testament from her dress. Every young person in this good Lutheran settlement had one just like it, given as this was by the Minister at the time of confirmation. Its brass clasps glittered in the midnight moon, as she murmured:

"He'll surely tell me right by this, surely," and putting it back, sped on her way. Past fences and gates, stumbling over stones, everywhere brushing off the evanescent white stars of the amelan-chir, she at last pushed out the heavy old boat. As the oars dipped into the cold night waters, she shivered to think she was alone in the dark marshes.

What if John Erick were not there? But he was waiting for the boat.

"You're a fine girl to come down here."

"Is there a dry place inside?" she asked.

They climbed to a pile of lumber by the large opening for the future door, and she gave him a little pail.

"Here's some coffee for you; I'm afraid it's cold."

"Why, what a girl you be! But I ain't goin' to drink it till I give you that, and that, and that," he said, rapturously kissing her, "or turnin' out that torch the way you did. I seen you."

"Oh, pshaw," laughed she, "twas nothin' but to do."

She sat silent while he took his coffee, then impetuously threw her arms about him and cried as though her heart would break! At last she sobbed out:

"Oh, John Erick, do you know it was four weeks from to-day we was to be married?"

He took off the little shawl she had on her head and smooth her waving hair, at first fearfully, then with tender confidence.

Poor girl—you poor girl!"

She could not ask questions; she couldn't say she was glad he ran away, she did not know what to say. What if he were guilty? Then she had better drown herself than be here with him.

"But why did you come to the hayshed?" she asked. "You couldn't know I'd be down here."

"I was comin' up toward the house after dark," he replied, "but when I seen the men and the boat I knowed I'd have to stay here. And here I set watchin' the light travel 'round among the trees and down in the water, an' all at once I heard you laugh, Pernilla. You can't reckon what that laugh meant to me. It was before the moon came up, and over there in the dark, to the edge of the clearing, I heard my sweetheart laugh. After that, I tell you, I watched every move of the boat."

"But it is dreadful that you, you—" she could not speak on that subject.

"Yes, yes, it is too bad, but it must come out all right," he said, hopefully.

"You didn't think I took the money, Pernilla?"

"Oh, no, you couldn't, you couldn't," she quickly rejoined. But her tones had that in them which seemed bent on reassuring herself, and John Erick felt every drop of blood tingle with anguish.

"Pernilla, Pernilla, I swear I didn't. I say you must believe me."

"I do. I do. I was longin' to hear you say it." Whereupon, pulling out the Testament, she added, timidly:

"Would you be willin' to put your hand on this and say it? I believe you anyhow, but I'd feel so sure."

John Erick unhesitatingly took the book, but for a few moments was silent.

"Come over to the door, Pernilla, where I can look in your eyes and say it—yes, with my hand on the book."

As he fastened and unfastened the little brass clasps, she said:

"It's just like yours, ain't it? See my name."

They leaned out together into the moonlight to read the inscription, when Pernilla started back in little dismay for the name was Rozina's.

"I took it by mistake for mine. Poor Rozina's, she's real sick."

John Erick started. Vividly came before him that bright winter morning down in these marshes, when she was the picture of health. But a few rods off was the spot where she waited for him and word for word her wild talk came back.

"Pernilla, do one thing for me. Let me see your long black hair—won't you? I've heard 'em say it's the finest head o' hair they ever seen. Please. I'd like to think of it."

"Why, John Erick, would you?"

"Please do."

"Yes, yes, if you want it."

Quickly she let down two heavy braids, beginning to undo them.

"It's handsome, it is—let me undo one," said John Erick.

Shaking out the rich, wavy mass, it fell to her knees. He reverently lifted part into the moonlight, letting it fall through his fingers, thinking all the while of Rozina's words. At last he said, slowly.

"Pernilla, you're the best girl in the settlement, but you're the prettiest one too. I'm most 'fraid of you with that handsome hair."

"Why," laughed Pernilla, "it's the same hair I've always had." Then, after a brief silence, and very soberly, "Don't forget, John."

"You hold the book, Pernilla."

Severely solemn as a priestess, she stood in the white square of moonlight that shone on the new lumber, shone on her hair, on her brow, on the little Bible. John Erick knelt before her, laid his right hand over the book, while with his other he held one of hers, and sincerely swore that he was innocent.

Then Pernilla bent over him and slowly kissed him as her silky tresses swept about his shoulders, sinking to her knees beside him; and he folded her sweet face against him, kissing the throat as soft and white as a plum blossom, and her lips as red as a cardinal flower.

But the moon sloped toward the west and bluffs, and soon the girl said:

"I must go; but tell me, John Erick, what you are going to do?"

"Me? Why, I'm goin' back to the fort as fast as I can," he answered.

"The fort? To jail?" she ejaculated.

"Of course, where else should I go?"

"Folks don't generally run away to—to just get put back again," she rejoined.

"See here, do you think I was goin' to sneak out o' the country like a thief? No, sir! Not havin' done nothin' bad, I ain't goin' to sneak off."

"Oh, I'm so glad," commenced Pernilla, but stopped, afraid of betraying herself.

John Erick laughed a little. "Oh, now, that's the worst of all. My sweetheart glad I'm going to jail!"

"Now, John Erick—"

"Pshaw! I just see now what you've been 'fraid of. Keep up heart, Pernilla, I feel so strong and well and knowin' I'm innocent makes the world bright anyhow. Can't we live this down? Can't we be happy anyhow?"

It was impossible to resist his warm personality with its hopeful confidence. So she smiled even as she replied, rather dolefully.

"But we was to be married."

"So we was, so we be yet—ain't we? Will you marry me anyhow, Pernilla? It may all be clear through with in less than four weeks. What if I'm free by the weddin'-day?"

"Then I'll marry you," responded Pernilla, eagerly.

"God bless you! But if—if they manage to send me off like a thief?"

"Well, you ain't one, and if they send you off like one—well, my white dress'll keep till you come back. I must go—just now."

She pinned up her hair in a twisted coil, and he guided her down the ladder.

"Good-by—by-by—by-by," he softly called as the old boat pushed off.

Back she hurried along the lane, brushing off fragrant drifts of June-berry blossoms, and catching her dress on mischievous blackberry vines ever on the alert.

As she reached home, Cassiopea hung low over the bluffs. Tintings of pink and blue beyond the Mississippi boded the far lustro of dawn.

Borgia Beauty Hints

When Lucretia Borgia took time off between intrigues to get sunburned, she went at it scientifically, we learn in the Golden Book. Her method was "white of egg and sugar-candy rubbed on the face." She washed her teeth in a concoction of rosebuds, citron-pips, pine-cones, clay and wine. She painted her face with mercury sublimate and white lead; which was all right until some one chewed saffron and breathed on her, when she turned bright yellow, while garlic turned her black. And if you yearned to dye a renaissance lady green, you had merely to decoct a chameleon in her bath.

These facts were in an article by Baron Corvo, which proved that the Borgias were a lot brighter about beauty recipes than about venoms, and that the Borgia poisonings are largely myth.

Burns Watches a Rescue

The Golden Book Magazine has an amusing way of digging up stories of what great wits have said to make life brighter for their descendants. Here is one about Robert Burns, who arrived one day upon the quay at Greenock just in time to see a wealthy merchant being rescued from drowning in the harbor.

After the merchant had recovered, he thanked the sailor who had saved him and solemnly presented him with a shilling. The crowd which had collected protested loudly at this too-too Scotch parsimony. But Burns stopped them, saying:

"Leave him alone. The gentleman is, of course, the best judge of the value of his life."

Pendulum Clocks

Though half a dozen names have been put forward as the inventor of the pendulum clock, it is generally agreed, says the Detroit News, that Christiaan Huygens, born in Holland about 1629, was responsible for its earliest development by the makers of his time. He made his first pendulum clock in 1657. In 1665 Louis XIV called him to Paris to found a Royal Academy of Sciences. It is supposed that his intimate friend, Ahasuerus Fromanteel, clockmaker of Dutch extraction who lived most of the time in England, was the person who introduced the pendulum clock to England, after 1658. They were soon widely adopted, because of the increased accuracy of their movements.

Bird Migrations

In an article called "New Light on Bird Migration" Wither Stone of the Academy of Natural Sciences says: "The semi-annual migration of birds has attracted the attention of mankind from the earliest days. In the Old Testament we read the words of the prophet, Jeremiah: 'The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times, and the turtle (i. e., turtle dove) and the crane, and the swallow observe the time of their coming.' Both Homer and Aristotle refer to the subject, the latter discussing it at length and advancing the theory of hibernation to account for the sudden appearance and disappearance of certain birds."

The presence of the tsetse fly in South Africa excludes oxen and horses from wild areas.

The wholesome demand for reality and sincerity in religious belief and practice is driving many men and women to face principles and study fundamentals.

The average per capita consumption of wheat ground for human food in Canada for the ten years 1922-1932 was 4.3 bushels.

Life of Ocean Denizens

Not Without Excitement

Not every creature that lives in the ocean is a fish. Many always think of a whale as a fish, but a whale is a mammal, warm-blooded and an air-breather. He is no more a fish than the family dog is a fish. Most whales are shaped like fish and swim the seas, but this does not make them fish any more than the mouse that has wings is a bird—the bat is a mammal.

We think of the cold, slimy swimmers in river, pond, lake, and ocean as living a dull life. It is hard to imagine social relations or many of the pleasures of the warm-blooded animals on land being shared by the inhabitants of the cold, wet, and dark seas. And yet there is now scientific evidence that in the world of fish things are not so very different as had been supposed.

In the fish world there are gluttons, fighters and loafers. In sharks' stomachs have been found lobsters, turtle bones, chicken's feathers, wheat, corn, and coffee grounds, string beans, corn-cobs, the horn of a sheep, bones of a cow, and even a wooden bucket and tin cans. The shark is a voracious eater, and he never has indigestion, because he can push his stomach out through his mouth and empty out anything which might trouble him to digest.

Good Story, but Hard to ### Find the Moral in It

They tell it of James Gordon Bennett. He hated drinkers, and the boys who worked with him were all aware of it. One of the pressmen returned from a bender with a beautiful black eye.

As luck would have it, James Gordon popped into the pressroom that day. The fellow spotted him before Bennett saw him, and rather than explain the "shiner" and run the risk of being fired, chose to rub printer's ink all over his face. On his tour of inspection around the pressroom Bennett came upon the besmudged pressman busily burying his nose in his work.

"Who's the fellow?" he asked the foreman. Upon being told, Bennett asked, "What do you pay him?" The foreman quoted the figure.

"Double it!" snipped Bennett. "He's the only one in the place who seems to be doing any work."—New York Morning Telegraph.

Rain-Maker's Methods

Because rain is so essential to the proper growth of their crops, the natives of Africa are greatly dependent upon it, and many are the rain-making ceremonies they hold, with whole communities participating in some of them.

Native roots are powdered and mixed together and then put in a bowl of water. After this an eland tail is dipped in the mixture and waved around vigorously. It is shaken to the four quarters of the earth and then shaken over the bowl. Then the tail is installed in the medicine-man's home.

Following this the growing tip of mochango, a species of randia, another plant, is bound to the head of the "doctor" with twine of the mullalia vine. He then goes to sleep, with his legs tucked up if little rain is desired, or with his legs spread out if much rain is wanted.

Expression Is Kipling's

The alluring word "It" which made a writer's fortune and a movie star's reputation was down in black and white long before most people had ever heard of Elinor Glyn. It was Rudyard Kipling and not Elinor Glyn who created "It," according to the Golden Book Magazine. Back in 1904 in a story called "Mrs. Bathurst," Kipling had Precroft say:

"How she stood an' what she was sayin' an' what she looked like. That's the secret. Tisn't beauty, so to speak, nor good talk necessarily. It's just it. Some women'll stay in a man's memory if they once walked down a street, but most of 'em you can live with a month on end, and next commission you'd be put to it to certify whether they talked in their sleep or not, as one might say."

Houses Simple and Lasting

The early Connecticut houses, like the dwellings in New England, were stout, honest buildings because the conditions required them to be so. They were intimate and domestic because they were the economic and social centers of Colonial life. They were simple and plain. They expressed the principle of truth above all else, for they were concerned only with the fundamentals of life, of existence, without fixings, without extras. It was perhaps the closest alliance of function with design. They lasted to present times because the materials themselves were as stout and true as the conception.

Any Wood Made to Order

By an invention in which cheap plywood is first printed and then enameled with what is known as cellulose dope, any wood can be made to order and enormous numbers of beautiful panels, table-tops, trays, looking like perfect examples of mahogany are being made to order. Using much the same process to produce magnificently illustrated by photograph, a photograph of the grain of the wood is similarly printed on the plywood. The new furniture never wants polishing because the cellulose varnish dries with a gloss.

Hon. G. Ferguson Visits Edinburgh

Ottawa,—History was enacted at Edinburgh Castle when W. J. Thomson, Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain, met on Canadian soil, a statement of the Department of Trade and Commerce Ottawa says. This was the first time since 1708 the esplanade in front of the castle was officially recognized as part of Canada.

When James VI, first created baronets of Nova Scotia, the statement continues, it was necessary they should be created upon the soil of that portion of Canada. A piece of ground before the Castle of Edinburgh was therefore decreed to be part of Nova Scotia. Some even say a basket of Nova Scotia earth, brought from Canada, put the finishing touches to the legalizing of the ground as Canadian territory.

Baronets of Nova Scotia were created between the years 1625 and 1708, and the charter proclaiming the esplanade as a portion of Canada has never been annulled, the report says. The meeting of the High Commissioner of Canada and the Lord Provost has, therefore, an historical significance because this is the first time this reputed Canadian territory has been used officially since the last Nova Scotian baronet was created in 1708.

Creation of the Nova Scotian baronets was intended to get the individuals thus honored to take a practical interest in Nova Scotia, invest their capital in it and send out men and cattle and goods.

The ceremony 308 years later was held previous to the opening of a Canadian exhibition shop in Edinburgh which was designed to show what the Empire's leading Dominion could offer in the way of produce, canned food, minerals, lumber and manufactured articles, to the people of Scotland. Thousands of samples of Canadian food were purchased by the visitors.

While at the castle, the report concludes, Mr. Ferguson placed a wreath of scarlet peonies on the Scottish war memorial.

A. M. Chisholm's Tribute

"Everyone knows the strong affection I have for Glengarry and my native town of Alexandria. As one grows older one realizes that the ties that bind one most to the days and to the scenes of his youth are those that have been formed by the home and by the Church during his early years. I count myself fortunate in both cases. Each taught me the dignity of man and reverence for God and one's country. I carried into life traditions of manhood, courage and faith based on the example of lovable and God-fearing men in every walk of life in this community.

I am happy to have been spared to see this day when I can join with Glengarians in paying tribute to the past glorious history of St. Finnan's Parish; and to have the privilege to humbly join in prayer with dignitaries, priests and people to the end that our people may continue faithful to their providential mission in the service of God and country."

Alexandria, June 29th, 1933.

Quarterly Meeting Presbytery of Glengarry

The Presbytery of Glengarry held its regular quarterly meeting in Martintown, every Minister with one exception being present and all the representative elders except three.

MacCallum, L. H. Fowler, Ministers and Mr. P. E. Campbell, ruling elder, for which they received the hearty thanks of the Presbytery.

The Sabbath School Convention will be held this year at Martintown on October 6th. Rev. Dr. Kunnawin of Toronto, will be present and deliver addresses in afternoon and evening.

Much routine business was transacted. The Court adjourned to meet in St. John's Church, Cornwall, on Friday, July 7th, at 2 p.m., Standard Time.

'Reception of Holy Habit

"A very impressive ceremony took place on Saturday morning, July 1st, Feast of the Most Precious Blood, at the Monastery of the Precious Blood, Alexandria, Ont., when Miss Janie Mae Macdonald, daughter of Mr. John Alex. Macdonald of St. Raphaels, Ont., was clothed in the Holy Habit of the Institute, and received the name of Sister Mary St. Mark. His Excellency, the Most Reverend Felix Couturier, O.P., D.D., said Holy Mass, presided at the ceremony and delivered an eloquent sermon appropriate to the occasion, choosing for his text, the words of the Prophet, "What shall I render to the Lord for all He hath rendered to me?" In developing this text, His Excellency, brought out very beautifully how the Religious Life—a life of prayer, self-immolation and sacrifice—helps us to make a return of gratitude to our Creator for the numberless benefits He has bestowed on us, especially for that greatest of all His Blessings, our Redemption through the infinite merits of the Precious Blood of His Divine Son.

His Excellency was assisted in the Ceremony by Rev. Father J. J. Macdonell (Chaplain), and Rev. Father Donald Kerr. In the Sanctuary were Rev. Father D. A. Campbell of St. Raphaels, Ont., Rev. Father Andrew Macdonell, O.S.B., and Rev. Father E. J. Macdonald.

The Chapel was crowded with relatives and friends, among whom was Mr. Archibald Mark Chisholm, of Duluth, Minn. Mr. Chisholm had been instrumental in bringing the Community to Alexandria and had come to witness the reception to the Community of the first young lady from the Diocese. Mr. Chisholm was accompanied by his son Archibald, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. J. A. Macdonald and Miss Peffer.
