

Internal Injuries Fatal To Mrs. Jules Beaulne, Alexandria

Leo Lacombe Loses Left Eye When Car Strikes Tree

Mrs. Jules Beaulne, Dominion St., is dead and Leo Lacombe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Lacombe, Alexandria, sustained injuries which necessitated the removal of his left eye, as the result of an accident which occurred about five o'clock Monday afternoon on the Rigaud road about three miles east of Glen Robertson. The tragic mishap resulted when the driver lost control of his car and it crashed into a tree.

Mr. Lacombe, his mother-in-law Mrs. Beaulne, and Miss Simonne Beaulne, his sister-in-law, were returning to Alexandria after spending the week end in Montreal when the accident occurred. A Montreal car, which was following, picked up the injured occupants of the Lacombe car and brought them to Alexandria where they received medical attention.

Mrs. Beaulne, aged 50 years, was suffering from shock, cuts on the head and face and a broken rib and it was not until the following morning that it was found she had suffered internal injuries. She was immediately transferred to Hotel Dieu Hospital, Cornwall, where Dr. J. A. Tallon operated, assisted by Dr. B. Primeau of Alexandria. The operation disclosed that she had suffered a ruptured spleen and internal hemorrhage and though blood transfusions were resorted to in an effort to prolong life she passed away about 2.45 p.m. Wednesday.

Mr. Lacombe was badly cut about the face and he was rushed to hospital the same evening where Dr. A. L. Crewson found it necessary to remove the left eye. The injured man's condition is reported satisfactory by hospital authorities.

The third occupant of the car, Miss Simonne Beaulne, 13-year-old daughter of the late Mrs. Beaulne, escaped injury. The automobile was almost completely wrecked.

This distressing accident caused profound sorrow in Alexandria where the late Mrs. Beaulne enjoyed the respect and esteem of all with whom she came in contact. The funeral to the Church of the Sacred Heart takes place this morning at nine o'clock.

Mrs. Beaulne is survived by her husband; two sons, Girard Beaulne of Alexandria, and Isidore of Montreal; four daughters, Simonne and Therese Beaulne of Alexandria; Mrs. Loel Lacombe of Alexandria, and Mrs. Hubert Paquette of Montreal.

Alexandrians May Withdraw From Lacrosse Picture

Their line-up riddled by the transfer of two veterans to the Cornwall Senior team and the loss of Willie Macdonell on account of injuries, the Alexandria lacrosse boys were unable to field a team to journey to Dalhousie on Sunday evening and seem destined to fade from the local lacrosse picture. The Cornwall team now boasts the services of both Paul Pilon and Jim Weir and the Alexs from now on would have very little experienced material to mix with the younger and lighter elements of the squad.

The biggest gate of the season was at the Park on Saturday last when the Parkers, with the assistance of S. Wright and E. Lalonde of Cornwall, decisively defeated an Indian squad which boasted only about five senior Indians. The score of 14-5 was a good indication of the play as the Parkers were given very little real opposition.

Seven goals by Paul Pilon who was making his last appearance here, were enough to beat the Indians alone, and to these were added 3 by Lalonde and two each by Weir and A. W. McDonald. Jacobs was the fastest of the visitors as well as the most potent, he scoring three white Sunday and Oakes also counted.

Correction

In our account last week of a meeting of the Glengarry Cheese Patrons' Association we erroneously stated that five cents per hundred pounds of milk was to be the deduction authorized. This should have read "five cents per hundred pounds of cheese."

Annual Lochiel Picnic Again Highly Successful

Full Stage and Sport Programme Enjoyed by Over 2,000.

Wednesday, August 5th, the day on which the good people of Lochiel were "at home" to their thousands of friends at their annual old time picnic, will be a day long to be remembered. As was expected the event was even bigger and better than ever. It would not doubt have been more so, had it not been for the sad and unexpected death of Rev. J. J. Macdonell—a very dear friend of Lochiel people and of all throughout the county.

The day was beautiful and more than two thousand took advantage of the kindly weather to come out from far and wide and enjoy something different. They came early and they stayed late. In the meantime, they enjoyed two good picnic meals, many old and new friends and were entertained by a very interesting platform and field programme.

That everyone enjoyed themselves was apparent and the majority of them will be looking forward to another one next year. The people of Lochiel may sometimes hesitate to continue to make this an annual event, but they should for summer will not be summer to very, very many without a Lochiel picnic.

Space will not permit us to go into detail to describe the various events of the programme. We can only hope to touch the highlights while naming the different items and actors. They all, however, played their parts splendidly. These follow:—

Pipe Band Music under the direction of our very great friend, Pipe Major Stewart.

Tap dancing—Miss Abbot, Ottawa. Songs—"Sing to me those old Scotch Songs" and "The March of the Cameron Men"—Miss Grace and Master Howard Morris.

French Songs—Paul Sabourin, Dalkeith.

Rain Badly Needed As Forest Fires Spread Across Canada

Fire rangers from Ontario to the west coast raised anxious eyes in the hope rain would bring to an end a forest fire problem which has become serious in three provinces. Several hundred fires are being fought between Ontario and British Columbia, according to the Canadian Press.

Few fires were reported out of control, but continued dry weather has made the situation serious in all of Canada's timber areas.

In an almost inaccessible district of the Banff National Park fire was reported gaining a slight headway. Men were sent to the scene over 80 miles of tortuous trails. The situation was reported serious in the foothills southwest of Calgary.

The village of Ashern, between Lakes Winnipeg and Manitoba, was threatened by bush and grass fires, and all available men were battling the flames. Early Wednesday the fire was five miles from town.

More than 350 men were battling 30 blazes scattered throughout Manitoba, and 75 fires were raging in widely scattered areas of Saskatchewan, some of them out of control.

General Strike Stops Wheels At Courtaulds

Cornwall Plant Idle as 1400 workers Stage Walkout.

Rumors of an impending strike of silk mill employees in Cornwall, which have been rife for the past few weeks, culminated on Tuesday night in a general walkout of some 1400 male and female employees since which time not a wheel has turned in the big rayon mill of Courtaulds (Canada) Ltd. The strike is proving costly as viscose rayon in a raw state is going to waste and each day's wastage will mean the loss of one day's production next week if the mill is re-opened.

Called because of non-recognition by mill officials of the newly organized Cornwall Rayon Workers' Union, the strike shows no sign of being settled and pickets are patrolling the factory entrances to prevent non-strikers from entering while the office staff, electricians, engineers, department heads and officials alone remain in the big plant. Provincial police have been concentrated in Cornwall since the strike began but outside of parades through city streets by the strikers and the picketing of the plant proper, there is no trouble and no disorders have as yet occurred.

Following preliminary organization of the Rayon Workers' Union some weeks ago there has been more than a hint of trouble and a strike of the girls some days ago foreshadowed the general walk out. On August 3rd a meeting of the workers was held when Arthur Laverty was elected president; Miss Manie Lavigne, vice president; Fred Wert, financial secretary and Miss Aime McMillan, recording secretary. Strike officials are demanding increases in wages in some departments, a 40 hour week minimum, an increased number of employees in some departments and better working conditions.

So far neither group has made a move to settle the trouble.

During the approaching school year, public and separate school students will spend 197 days in study while Collegiate and High School pupils will spend some days less as they close about two weeks earlier in June.

Will Collect Cheese Fees From Patrons

To Be Deducted From Pay Cheques Each Week.

Belleville, Ont.—According to Stanley L. Joss, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association, a new system of collecting tolls from factories was inaugurated over the week end. Heretofore the association has been collecting a fee of five cents per 100 pounds of cheese from the buyers but the recent findings from the Supreme Court regarding the legislation necessitated the new system.

Starting Monday, it has been decided to collect the fee from the factories by deducting the fee from the pay cheques each week.

Mr. Joss stated that the association had held meetings over the entire province and in almost every instance, the new scheme met with unqualified approval.

To date the association has the endorsement of Peterboro, Northumberland, Hastings, Leeds, Dundas, Glengarry, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington.

The plan will be ready to be put in operation at once. The question of fee-collecting for the Cheese Patrons' Association has been a topic of discussion to farmers of this district for the past few weeks, and considerable interest has been aroused in the matter, according to Mr. Joss. The scheme in Hastings County has the whole-hearted support of those interested in the cheese industry.

Presentation Made To Retiring Teacher

Miss M. M. McDermid Honored. by Echo Vale School Section

The many friends and ex-pupils of Miss M. Margaret McDermid, a much esteemed teacher of S.S. No. 17 Char., who for several years taught with marked success in that school, upon learning of her retirement, gathered at her home, Glen Roy, Friday evening, Aug. 7th to pay tribute to this estimable young lady and also show their appreciation of her efforts as a teacher.

The early part of the evening was spent with cards and dancing, music being furnished by "The Little German Band", supplemented by Mr. A. McDonald, St. Raphaels and Mr. J. McPhail, St. Andrews.

A pleasing feature of the lunch hour was when Mr. J. A. Sova as chairman in his usual genial manner, called upon Mr. Bruce Sova to read the appended address and the presentation to the guest of honor of a beautiful dinner set was made by Mr. J. S. McDonald, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Miss McDermid very fittingly acknowledged the address with its good wishes and accompanying gift, which would prove a lasting remembrance of her associations in "Echo Vale School" and thanked one and all for their co-operation with her during her years of teaching.

The chairman then called upon several of the guests present who delivered short eulogies on Miss McDermid's behalf.

Heavy Shipments of Produce Made By Maxville Farmers

In less than six months since its inauguration, the Maxville egg grading station has shipped some $17,000 worth of eggs, was the record revealed at a recent meeting of the directors of the station held there. Lyman MacKillican was in the chair, with secretary Albert Rowe and the following directors present: Alex. Campbell, Stanley Kippen and A. D. MacDougal. It was also shown more than ten million pounds of milk went to Montreal markets, of which nine million pounds went through a local plant Local Drovers, shipped live stock to the value of $145,000 to the Montreal market in 1935, and in addition a large number of choice cattle were taken from this district to the United States.

Softball

GLEN SANDFIELD 27—LOCHIEL 12 Softball enthusiasts gathered en masse at Glen Sandfield on Monday evening to witness a friendly contest for amateur honours in the first of a series of home and home games with the Lochiel team. A lively game resulted and there were more tense moments for the winners than the score would indicate but however despite brilliance displayed by the plucky nine from Lochiel, the alert Glen Sandfield players emerged with a count of 27 runs for and only 12 against. Glen Sandfield received quite a boost through the ambitious playing of Juns Forde, Steve Beckley and Archibald MacDonald who each scored four homers during the tussle.

Barring possible inaccuracies in the Lochiel lineup those who participated were:

Umpire—Neil MacLachlan. Coaches—Steve Ford, Andrew Seguin.

Scorekeeper—Robert Beckley. The return engagement will be played at Lochiel next Monday evening, August 17.

"The youth movement in politics today is like a breath of fresh air in a stuffy, smelly room,"—Alfred M. Landon.

Work is Progressing On Highway Construction

Paving Expected to Get Underway by First of Week

Most of the preliminary work in connection with the paving of the eight mile stretch to Lancaster has been completed and the actual pouring is expected to get underway early next week, with a start being made at the Lancaster end. The paver arrived at Green Valley on Monday and has been moved to Lancaster to await the laying of the forms.

Considerable preparatory work has already been done, the Highway having been scarified as far as Glen Gordon and a pipe line laid the same distance. A large 3,000 ton rock pile in the C.P.R. yards at Glen Gordon will form the foundation of the new road. The water for the pipe line is to be drawn from the large town well at Lancaster.

Most of the work has been centred on the two hills at the Brown House and the most noticeable change is at that point. The Brown House hill has been cut down 7 feet leaving a considerable bank on either side. The King's Road, which crosses Highway 34 at this point, also has been lowered and now is sloped both east and west for a distance of approximately 200 feet. An old Glengarry landmark, the Brown House, is scheduled to go but as yet no definite decision has been made and there is a chance that this old stage stop of another day may be left standing.

Further inroads into the unemployed ranks have resulted from the change over to a two six-hour-shifts day. In addition to the men employed at the shovel and who have been working on two shifts for the past ten days, from 20 to 25 men are employed on each shift at the quarry where the relays were inaugurated on Wednesday.

Wedding

McDERMID—DEWAR The marriage of Christina, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Dewar, of St. Telesphore, Que., to Kenneth Norman, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McDermid, of Martintown, Ont., took place at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday afternoon, August 5, at half-past two o'clock, The Rev. C. J. Beckley officiating. The marriage ceremony, was performed on the lawn before an arch decorated with vines and prettily arranged with various summer flowers which made an attractive setting.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, approached the arch during which time the wedding march from Lohengrin was being played by Miss Ruth Seguin. The bride was attired in a gown of white organza made on princess lines with full elbow length sleeves, and a short train and wore a white mohair picture hat. Her arm bouquet consisted of Tallisman roses and baby's breath. Her sister, Miss Isabel M. Dewar, attended her as bridesmaid and wore a gown of pale blue net over a deeper toned blue with orchid pink accessories, and carried an arm bouquet of Ophelia roses and summer flowers. Mr. James H. McCuaig acted as best man for the bridegroom. At the conclusion of the ceremony Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played by Miss Seguin. During the signing of the register Miss Gladys Smith, of St. Lambert, Que., sang "Because."

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

THE EYES OF YOUR HOME

They're your window shades of course. How effectively they tell your neighbors just what type of person you are! Keep the eyes of your home sparkling, fresh and immaculate—buy first quality cloth window shades of firm, fine fabric (woven on a loom) and "processed" with oil paint. Then your window shades immediately become a decorative asset.

Good cloth window shades last five years and longer—they stand up under rainstorms and steam from kitchens and bathrooms without crinkling. They diffuse light which is so important, particularly for bedrooms and nursery windows as a harsh light is hard on the eyes of the sleeper. They are made on good sturdy rollers and thus hang straight and true.

You can order shades in such lovely colors as cornflower blue, mignonette green, strained honey, delicate tones of gray and circassian brown. Imagine what exquisite color combinations you can achieve with your curtains and draperies. Then too you can buy duotone shades—one outside tone for a "uniform front" to the street—the inside tone to match the color scheme of your room.

Look at your shades now! Are they clean? Are they smart in appearance and worthy of your taste. If they aren't buy cloth shades today—you can get them at any store. Ask for the type The Window Shade Institute is sponsoring.

TAILORED THEMES ARE SHOWN BY DESIGNERS

New York.—One of the important phases in the fashions in silk and rayon fabrics for fall is the trend toward materials which have a definite "tailoring" quality. That is, enough firmness in weave and drape to hold the well-pressed edges, collars and seaming characteristic of tailored clothes.

Those who analyze the development of fashions will realize that the appearance of tailored materials for fall is entirely logical following upon a spring and summer in which the number and kinds of tailored fashions have been increasing steadily. The costumes worn by smartly dressed women during the Grande Semaine in Paris—which often influence styles of the subsequent early fall months here—also confirm the importance of tailored themes, highlighting suit costumes, or suit-like jacket or tunic dresses developed in silks or rayons.

Among the new materials which have been launched for the fall season one should note the great diversity of satin-backed fabrics which "hang" heavily and gracefully on the figure.

Designers are in agreement that laces have to be different and that novelty types will give fresh interest to laces. Mention is made of new-looking shadow laces, with types that have a gossamer quality especially recommended. The metal touches are also cited as important for autumn, and the metal-shot chantilly laces are listed in this group. Because of autumn vacation activities, it is expected that laces will be wanted by travellers, their ease in packing being a strong recommendation in their favor.

As for woollens, never have they been fleecier or more effective. The being the case, one may count on needing at least one good-looking wool frock or ensemble. But it is even better to have a half dozen since there will be wool sports and wool town dresses, not to mention suits, coats and ensembles.

NEW LIFE FOR OLD BLANKETS

Old blankets take on a new lease of life if they are turned, like sheets sides to middle, joined with a flat sewn seam, and used under the top blanket. When too worn for this they can be folded once or twice, according to size, then quilted with running stitch, and they will make excellent coverlets for the foot of the bed. Covered with frilled flowery cretonne, the result will be an attractive and useful article.

Useful cot covers can be cut from the best parts of a good blanket. Bound with colored ribbon and trimmed with an applique bunny rabbit in the same shade, they look charming.

Old blankets are invaluable in cases of illness. Pieces folded, heated in the oven, and then applied as hot as can be borne, give relief from pain.

UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE

Cook together for 5 minutes, 1 1/2 cups fresh blueberries, 1/2 cup sugar and 6 tablespoons water. Cool. Meanwhile cream together 1/2 cup sugar and 1/4 cup butter. Fold in 1 egg stiffly beaten. Add 3/4 cup sifted cake flour that has been resifted with 1 teaspoon baking powder and 1/4 teaspoon salt, and 1/4 cup milk alternately. Add 1/4 teaspoon vanilla flavoring. Pour the batter over the blueberries in a greased and floured 8-inch cake pan. Bake in a moderate oven 25-30 minutes. Turn upside down and serve warm with ice cream or whipped cream.

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

Sift together 2 cups flour, 4 tablespoons sugar, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder and 1/2 teaspoon soda. Beat 1 egg until light and fluffy and add to 1 cup milk and 4 tablespoons melted butter. Add 1 cup washed and drained blueberries to the flour mixture. Combine with the liquid. Stir just enough to combine. The mixture should have a rough appearance. Fill greased muffin tins 2-3 full, handling the batter as little as possible. Bake in a hot oven about 20 minutes. This will make 10 large muffins.

SPARERIBS AND POT ROAST

Don't stick to fried ham and pork chops when serving "piggy dishes." Try these for a change and see how delightful they are:

Baked Spareribs With Apples: Wipe fresh spareribs carefully with a cloth which has been wrung out of hot water. Arrange the meat in a dripping pan and place in a hot oven which should have the temperature lowered gradually. Baste with dripping occasionally. When the meat is well browned place apples, which have been cored, in the pan with the meat. Fill the cavity of each apple with brown sugar and let bake until soft. In serving, arrange the apples as a border around the spareribs.

Southern Pot Roast: One small pork shoulder, 1 medium onion sliced, 2 cups canned tomatoes, salt and pepper, 2 tablespoons flour.

Fry out the trimmings in pan suitable for the roast. Remove cracklings and fat, leaving but one tablespoon. Add flour. Brown slowly. Add onion. Brown slightly, then add tomatoes. Season the meat and add. Cook in fireless cooker four hours.

GARNISH SUPPER PLATTER

Cold boiled ham, French fried potatoes, green peas and a slice of tomato make an excellent platter for supper. Place the tomato on a crisp leaf of lettuce and surrounded it with a trio of pickles—an onion, a piece of cauliflower and a small whole cucumber—and you will make the platter far more attractive. Furthermore, you will have added to its piquancy and to its food value.

FRUIT JUICE IMPORTANT

By Betty Barclay

Physicians agree that fruit juice is an important part of our diet. Children should be taught to drink it daily. Hawaiian pineapple juice, packed when the fruit is ripe, is an excellent source of valuable vitamins and is uniform the year 'round. It makes a delicious and healthful breakfast appetizer—relished by children as well as adults.

Another can of the juice from the pantry shelf will provide the basis for a delightful dinner drink, or a tangy beverage for the bridge luncheon.

Bridge Cocktail

Two cups Hawaiian pineapple juice 3/8 cup orange juice, 4 teaspoons lemon juice, 1 cup ginger ale, 3 tablespoons powdered sugar, 6 maraschino cherries.

Mix all ingredients except cherries. Add more sugar if desired. Serve ice cold, with one maraschino cherry in glass (The cocktail will be more snappy if ginger ale is added just before serving.) 6 servings.

LOVELY LITTLE LADY

By Barbara B. Brooks

No little girl can begin to entertain too early. Being a charming hostess may be born in some of us, but most people have to practice a bit before they entertain gracefully. Mothers should start the social training of their girls by letting them invite their friends in often for tea or light refreshments on the lawn during the long summer afternoons.

It is important that these affairs be kept informal. Children may so easily become constrained if there are too many elders around or if everything is too party-ish. They should learn to look on parties as a time when they can be naturally gay with congenial people, rather than a stiff, ceremonial occasion.

If her daughter is under ten, probably mother should plan and serve the refreshments. This insures their success. But if the young lady is in her teens it will be fun for her to do her own planning, with a little help on the serving. Nothing elaborate should ever be attempted, for that will take the pleasure out of it for the young hostess. She mustn't be made to feel that this is anything more difficult than the many times she and Judy have eaten fresh rhubarb from the garden, or borrowed apples from mother's kitchen to take on their private picnics in a vacant lot. The entire spirit of a young girl's entertaining should be one of impromptu hospitality. If this carries over into her grown-up entertaining, she will be a lucky girl and that rare person, a good hostess.

A suitable menu for these afternoon get-togethers is given here. It is simple and very dainty and reflects the coolness of a terraced garden. Serve it buffet or plate style.

Radish roses, ripe olives, sandwiches of cream cheese on All Bran apricot bread, cucumber sandwiches, chilled assorted melon balls with mint sprigs, iced tea punch or Orange juice.

ALL BRAN APRICOT BREAD

One cup chopped dried apricots, 1 1/3 cups sour milk or buttermilk, 3 tbsps. shortening, 1/3 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 1/2 cups all bran, 2 cups flour, 2 tps. baking powder, 1/2 tsp. soda, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. nutmeg, 1/2 cup chopped nut meats.

Soak chopped apricots in milk about 15 minutes. Cream shortening and sugar thoroughly; add egg, beat until creamy. Add all bran, apricots and milk. Let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift flour with baking powder, soda, salt and nutmeg; combine with nut meats; add to first mixture, stirring only until flour disappears. Bake in greased loaf pan with waxed paper in the bottom in moderate oven (355°F.) about 1 hour and 10 minutes. Yield: 1 loaf 4 1/2 x 9 1/2 inches.

TEA PUNCH

One cup sugar, 6 whole cloves, 1/4 tsp. cinnamon, 3 cups water, 1 cup orange pekoe tea, 1 No. 2 can pineapple juice, 1 1/2 cups orange juice, 3/4 cup lemon juice 3 cups water or ginger ale.

Simmer sugar, spices and 3 cups water together for 3 minutes. Strain and add the tea. Chill and add fruit juices and water or ginger ale. Garnish with a thin slice of orange and a fresh or maraschino cherry. Serves 12.

THE TREATMENT OF BACKACHE

Some of the possible causes of backache were considered in the last article, although in such a short space only the more common causes could be mentioned. How can it be treated?

Needless to say—and yet it does need to be said repeatedly—no treatment can be prescribed until the cause of the backache be known. That means a thorough physical examination, not only of the back but of the entire body. In certain forms of backache x-rays may be necessary. The habits and posture of the patient may need to be studied.

Having established a correct diagnosis, what of the treatment? Obviously, this will depend entirely upon the condition found, and is a decision which should be left to a competent physician. Certain general suggestions, however, may prove helpful.

If due to fatigue only, rest alone is usually sufficient. However, heat applied to the back is very soothing, as is massage.

If there be a back spasm from torn muscle fibres or from a ligamentary tear, it is amazing what relief may come from massage, gentle at first, to get the "confidence" of the muscles, then gradually working deeper, but never with violence. Heat is very helpful; electrical treatments are often helpful if intelligently utilized, but for home use the ordinary electric coil with the copper reflector is very serviceable. So is the good old-fashioned method of "ironing" the patient, through several sheets of brown paper, but keep the iron moving.

Inflammatory conditions, in addition to the above require a search for the possible cause of the infection. Suspect the usual foci, teeth, tonsils, nose and sinuses, bowel, gall-bladder, prostate and the neck of the womb when children have been born.

In certain inflammatory types various drug preparations have been found to be almost a specific relief; in other cases special sedatives are advisable. In either instance the choice should be determined by the physician in charge.

Should the patient rest or exercise? This depends entirely upon the cause. Rest in bed is essential in some cases, in others there should be exercise, and sometimes firm manipulation, even under anaesthesia, to break down old adhesions. Again, depending upon the cause, other patients may require a spinal cast, a special brace or may need surgery in some other part of the body.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Pedestrians suffered from the dust of cars especially on Sundays. Now they can walk along breathing freely knowing that where there is no dust there won't be any blowing.

GLEN SANDFIELD

Miss Mayme Seguin of Glen Robertson enjoyed a Tuesday evening visit with the Forde family. Mr. Medard Paiement, we note approvingly, has moved his family and household furnishings into the recently-erected modern residence which also known as Little Madonna, possessing charm and personality all of her own. Although she is the smallest of the five she can give back all she gets and allows for no bullying from her heavier sisters. Emelie is the "Tomboy" of the nursery. She is rated a real little daredevil and even a flirt. One of the highlights of her career so far is the tearing to bits of a set of necklets, the gift of a prominent Toronto jeweller. Not only did she destroy her own but the others as well before one of the nurses appeared on the scene in the role of a policeman. Cecile is the favourite of the parish priest. She has a very devout and serious look that has made the nurses comment that she may become a nun or a nurse. She is often found alone quietly playing with her doll or toys while the other four are in the midst of a veritable whirlwind of rough-house antics. Annette led her sisters by four hours in the race of cutting her first tooth. She is awake every morning at 6.30 before anyone else and the nurse often finds her leaning over trying to shake Yvonne's crib so as to waken her also. Yvonne has been the largest and heaviest ever since the birth of the Quintuplets. She is called Yvonne after their nurse. No partiality is shown by the nurses to any one of the babies. Each one is fed first at different times and they are not always dressed the same. Should any one be crying when put to bed a check up is made to see that no pin is misplaced or night clothing too tight. If all is well, then the child is left to cry but soon falls asleep when she learns such a method will not have her picked up and walked with. Nurse Yvonne Leroux has been one of those in charge ever since the dawn of May 28th, 1934. Nurse Jacqueline Noel has been chosen as the second assistant on account of her proficiency in the French language. Mrs. Oliva Dionne the babies' mother visits the nursery at least once a day for periods up to several hours. She is able to name each child correctly either in their midst or from a photograph. The children have reached such world fame that letters of inquiry as to their bringing up have been received from all parts of the United States and such others as Hawaii, France, Italy and Central Europe countries. One of the amusing incidents is to see the great number who carry away some of the contents of a large box, situated near the entrance gate, that has printed on its side (Stones taken from the Dr. Dafeo nursery grounds.) Other license plates of automobiles noticed besides those of Ont. and Que. were N. J., Wisconsin, N. Y., Iowa, Ohio, Indiana, Mich., Mass., Pennsy. and Oklahoma. You may return home by either of two other routes besides the North Bay-Ottawa highway. Turning left at Callander you follow the route down through Orillia and Barrie to Toronto and then No. 2 highway to Cornwall and Alexandria or when you arrive in Orillia you may follow the route to Lindsay, Peterborough, Perth, Carleton Place, Ottawa and to Alexandria. Regardless of the route you go or return by, you will find the trip even more pleasant than you expected.

Motoring To See The Quintuplets

BY A. H. McDONELL From North Bay to Callander, some 9 miles in distance, summer cottages and cabins border the roadway almost continuously. Three more miles of a winding gravel road and on the top of a small hill you have reached the home of the quintuplets. Standing on the top of this small hill, the old weather beaten house, where the babies were born is on your right. Directly across the road is a house under construction that when completed will be living quarters for the children's attendants. The Dr. Dafeo Nursery is situated almost the centre of an area about 80x80 rods, which is also on your left surrounded by a steel fence 8 ft. in height. In levelling the ground, that slopes gently from this small hill a few Spruce and Evergreen trees were left unharmed adding greatly to the general appearance. Close by a novelty and refreshment booth is owned by Mesdames Legros and Lebel, midwives who were in attendance at the birth of the quintuplets. A new booth was just recently opened by Oliva Dionne having for sale refreshments and novelties. It is situated directly opposite the nursery and in the midst of the parking area. The interior is laid out much the same as a 5 and 10 chain store except in prices. Every business man is entitled to a reasonable margin of profit but when 55c is marked as the selling price of a pound of a popular brand of candy that can be bought almost anywhere for 25c then that seems to this writer unreasonable. The sooner this circus method of extracting the last five cent piece from the visitor, is stamped out of wherever it may exist, the more pleasant conditions will be for the tourist. The babies may be seen twice daily from 9.30 to 10.30 a.m. and from 2.30 to 3 p.m., standard time. The crowds begin to line up at the entrance gate at least an hour before they are opened. A few minutes before the babies are brought out, the three provincial police who are always at the nursery and two others on traffic duty take up positions at different points of the long hall way that borders the children's playground. At last a white capped nurse opens the front door of the nursery and first one then another and another till the last of those fine charming little tots step down on the front lawn. The other nurse closes the door and they start for their play yard. As if eager to be first to reach some favorite plaything one gleefully trots down the footpath but trips and falls on her "tummie." She gets up unaided, brushes the sand of her knees and sweater then hurries to catch the other four who by this time are well out in front. The gates are now opened and what a jam to be in. You enter this long hall at one end and slowly walk its length to the other which is half around the play yard. You look through glass windows that are covered with screening so that your presence does not excite nor interfere with the children who seem to play around quite unaware of the fact that hundreds are looking on. While I was among those hundreds one of the Quints was seated in a little wagon while another was making a great effort to give her sister a ride. One of the nurses seeing her in this difficulty gently pushed the wagon from behind and she seemed to derive as much pleasure, by helping, as the two children. Two others had shovels and apparently were in search of the sand pile while the fifth stood by hugging a doll. They were dressed in pink sweaters, white skirts, white socks and black shoes. According to reliable information Dr. Dafeo does not favour one of the babies any more than the others "just which ever one he happens to pick up." However it is a well known fact that he has a soft spot in his heart for "Little Marie." Marie has been the tiniest ever since birth and on more than one occasion came within an ace of death. She had to have special treatment by radium experts for a tumor on her leg. She has come through all this with colours flying so if the genial Country Doctor has a soft spot in his heart for this particular baby you could hardly wonder that he should. She is Miss Katherine MacKinnon has come over from Glen Nevis to be the guest of relatives and renew friendships here. Rev. C. J. and Mrs. Beckley motored eastward to Maine and the Atlantic seaboard within the last fortnight. Quite an excitement was general one day recently when one of our village Jerseys became somewhat uncontrollable but fortunately the situation was remedied before serious damage resulted. Messrs. Leonard and Martin Lacombe, on holiday from the Metropolis, are dividing their vacation between this village and Glen Robertson. Mr. Ronald MacLachlan was the guest of Mr. C.O. Forde Tuesday evening. Mr. Jas. W. Jamieson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack O'Neill and Miss Jacqueline O'Neill were week end visitors at their summer home here, returning on Monday to Montreal.

Besner, Miss E. Besner, H. Methohe, Mr. and Mrs. H. Levac, E. Lanthier, Mr. and Mrs. Eng. Charlebois, Eugene Besner, Victor Besner, Miss A. Lanthier, Mr. and Mrs. W. Leger, Romeo Charlebois, B. Annual Lochiel Picnic Again Highly Successful

Greenfield, Inez McDermaid, and Wallace Munro, Apple Hill, Joan Gormley, and Wency McDonald, Alexandria. Shean Trubhais—Misses Joan Gormley, Inez McDermaid, Edna McDonald, Wency McDonald, Geo. Wade and Orchestra, featuring old time and modern music, cowboy songs, special violin and tap dancing acts, etc.

Samson Bros. of Cornwall entertained with music and songs, accompanied by a wonderfully trained police dog who howled tunes to the accompaniment of the piano and singers.

THE FIELD SPORTS
The Lochiel Picnic saw the revival of that always exciting sport tug-of-war in a contest between Lochiel and Lancaster Townships. Lochiel won in two straight pulls by a very narrow margin. Lochiel was highly pleased to win against such dangerous rivals who proved themselves perfect gentlemen in defeat. They are to meet again at the Williamstown Fair and a battle royal can be expected for they are two well matched teams of able and determined men coached by proficient and aggressive men.—Mr. D. J. Cuthbert acted as referee.

Two very interesting softball games took place during the afternoon, the first between two girl teams, representing Alexandria and Lochiel, resulted in a win for the former by the score of 20-6 the second game saw young men of the Alexandria Young People's Club defeat a team representing Apple Hill by a 20 to 8 count.

Donald A. McPhee, Lochiel, won the $40.00 heifer and the other drawings will be announced later.

The Pastor and Church Committee wish to thank all those who in any way helped to make the picnic such a social and financial success and they also wish to thank all the visitors from outside points who are always so good in attending the Lochiel Picnic. They hope that all enjoyed themselves and that they will come again. Special thanks are in order for all those who took part in the platform and field programme. Many of them came distances without thought of financial reward to help along a good work and their kindness and efforts are indeed much appreciated.—(Con.)

West Ireland Has Wealth That Has Brought Fame

All West Ireland is rich in literary associations. Just off the coast, across the mouth of Galway bay, lie the Aran Islands, where John M. Synge went to live after he had decided to write plays of Irish peasant life. They are among the last homes of Gaelic in Ireland, and long before travelers came to see the fascinating native life on them, scholars had come there from all Europe to study that language, according to a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

Synge told of the life of the Aran fishermen in his "Riders to the Sea," and many times acknowledged his debt to Irish peasants such as these.

One of the most conspicuous features of the islands is the great slabs of limestone on them, which in some places tower up a thousand feet. Because the surface of the stone is so slippery, the islanders all wear a soft rawhide moccasin, held together with thongs, and in place of rowboats they get about in "currachs," light canoes of wickerwork. These are covered with canvas, and ride over the waves of the Atlantic like chips on its back. Frail as currachs appear, the islanders often transport domestic animals from one island to another in them.

North of the islands is Sligo, where William Butler Yeats was born. Sligo is built on a wide bay with many inlets, and across from it is Knocknaree, where "the host is riding."

On Benbulbin, the chief mountain of the section, died Diarmuid, with whom Grania fled from Tara, jilting her other suitor, the giant Finn MacCool. Later when MacCool came asking hospitably, Grana persuaded Diarmuid to give it. He and Finn went hunting together, and on Benbulbin he met his death through Finn's spells. MacCool then went off with Grania, who became his queen.

Bats Nurse Their Young Like Most Other Animals

Bats aren't blind, as the stories go, but they are so fond of darkness that they never venture out into daylight unless they're forced to by some intruder, and then just long enough to find another quiet, dark place. Then at dusk they stretch their wings and begin to take an interest in life. And even when it's pitch dark they know how to dodge things when they're flying. Their eyes are small, but they probably have such keen ears and noses that they're quite well off without bigger eyes. Scientists haven't determined which of their senses is sharpest, says a writer in the Washington Star.

Although bats fly like insects and birds, they do not lay eggs and hatch them as insects and birds do. Instead, they nurse their young like monkeys or cows or squirrels, and so they belong to the mammal family.

The body of a bat looks much like that of a mouse, and its wings are very different from those of a bird. A bat's wing is made of skin stretched over long toes. And insect-eating bats have a long tail that helps to support the wings.

But the big fruit bats, which live in the tropics and whose wing spread is often two feet, are without tails, so the skin of their wings is stretched from the front to the hind foot. The long, slender toes of the front foot spread out like a fan and support most of this immense wing. Only the thumb is left free, so that it can clutch at branches.

It is with their hind feet that bats hang, heads down, for their long daytime naps.

Belong to Whitefish Family

Ichthyologists tell us that ciscos belong to the whitefish family. They greatly resemble the "lake herring," that makes up a considerable part of the commercial haul from the Great Lakes. Since the fish found in Lake Geneva and some of the northern Indiana lakes differs somewhat from the lake herring, the name "cisco" is especially fitting. Believed to be of Indian origin, it is distinctive and not likely to be confused with any other. The cisco, usually caught in water over 50 feet in depth, on beaded lures, passes the early winter and summer in the deepest parts of lakes. It moves into shallower water during the spring, while searching for food, and also during the fall spawning season.

Meaning of Comedy

In general a comedy is light and amusing, rather than serious, keeps the audience in a cheerful frame of mind, and has a happy ending. It may not be a really funny play, and may even have a fairly serious theme, but its amusing characters and lines distinguish it from tragedy. It may represent the follies of humanity or be a satiric portrayal of contemporary manners. Its refinement of tone and delicacy of treatment distinguish it from the broad farce or burlesque. The early Greek word, from which "comedy" is derived, referred to the village revels, parades and festivals in honor of Bacchus, Dionysus, etc. These led to the development of dramas designed to arouse mirth.

Had Faith in His Son

When the Union army was biting the mud at Vicksburg and the North was fearful that the absence of news from that battle front would be broken by "bad news," Jesse Grant, father of the famous General Grant, declared: "Ulisses will work until he gets a grip, and when he gets a grip he never lets go, and he will take Vicksburg."

Miscellaneous Shower

Mrs. J. H. McCuaig of St. Justine, Que. was hostess at a delightfully arranged miscellaneous shower on Friday evening, July 31st in honor of Miss Christina Dewar prior to her marriage to Mr. Kenneth McDermaid. The living room and dining room were very attractively decorated for the occasion, with a pretty color scheme and a large variety of summer flowers.

The guest of honor was escorted by her sister Miss Isabel Dewar to a prettily decorated chair, where overhead hung an umbrella.

Miss Patricia Baker then read the address which was cleverly arranged in poetical form. A wagon was then brought in by Miss McNaughton and Master George McKay, which was overloaded with an abundance of lovely gifts. The guest of honor was assisted in opening them by Miss Bessie Morrison, Mrs. Hanley and Miss Isabel Dewar. The bride-elect then thanked all present for the large assortment of gifts, in a few sincere well chosen words.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a social manner.

Popular Retriever Dates Back to English History

The history of the retriever dates back to 1850, when a black-coated dog was brought to England and crossed with an English setter. This was supposed to have been the beginning of all retrievers, observes an authority in the Los Angeles Times. We find them now developed to a stage where they are divided into four classes: Golden, Flat-coated, Curly-coated and the Labrador. The last was originally a much heavier dog than the present type, longer in body, faulty legs and not much to look at.

The eyes in the majority of breeds are required to be dark in shade. This may be because of a feeling that the dark eye denotes a higher grade of intellect, while the light-eyed dog, unable to express the same amount of feeling with his eyes, is often claimed treacherous. For this reason the fanciers of the breed hastened to overcome this criticism by crossing the Labrador with the dark-eyed Flat-coated retriever. In setting a trait, almost invariably other qualities are changed or added to a breed. It is not surprising therefore to discover some without the typical characteristics such as the otter tail. However, the majority of them show no evidence of the original outcross.

Ancient Egyptians Were Skillful as Mechanics

About five thousand years ago an Egyptian wrote a letter that has been preserved to this day, notes a writer in the Montreal Herald. In it he mentions among other things the numerous mechanical devices that were in common use among the people. The ancient Egyptians were already acquainted with the lathe and the potter's wheel—inventions that must have originated in the remotest times—they were skillful workers in the less refractory metals, could draw them into wire, beat them into sheets, emboss and engrave them, and were able to inlay and enamel them. They could glaze and enamel earthenware and make beads of glass.

They either devised the loom or inherited it from an earlier culture, and knew how to weave cotton to such a fineness that we can only distinguish it from silk by the microscope. They were expert farmers and irrigating engineers, and the world's mightiest architects in stone. No one knows exactly how the pyramids were built, or the precise methods for getting the great obelisks and colossal into place.

St. David of Wales

St. David, Patron saint of Wales, who lived between 446 and 549, was an uncle of King Arthur of the Round Table. He was baptized at Porthclaus, where a spring was said to have bubbled expressly for that purpose; to this day it is revered as a holy well. Legend tells that when he preached the ground rose from beneath his feet and formed a natural pulpit. It was St. David who stamped out heresy in Wales, and when he died his body was buried in Glastonbury; but his tomb was destroyed later by Cromwell's men. It was he who persuaded Welshmen to wear leeks in their caps during a great battle under the leadership of King Cadwallader in 544, so they might distinguish their own men from their Saxon foes. The victory was theirs, and since then the leek has been the Welsh national emblem.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

The Ottawa Spotlight

BY WILFRID EGLESTON

Ottawa, August 11.—To offset some of the gloom caused by the widespread failure of the grain crop in western Canada, and the serious fodder shortage which will compel extraordinary measures to relieve the ranchers and stockmen, there are of late several more hopeful developments becoming evident at the capital.

Rising wheat prices, accompanied by a general improvement in other farm and garden prices, reflecting mainly the drought of North America but in part overseas influences, are gradually restoring a better balance between agricultural and manufacturing prices. This disparity has long been held by economists to be one of the main factors retarding recovery in Canada. The farmer was unable to trade his products on a fair basis with other producers, and he was compelled to pay old debts incurred when prices were high at a time when his own prices were low.

Increase Buying Power

Rising agricultural prices will not, of course, help the farmer whose harvest was wiped out by drought or other cause. Nor will they assist, directly, the worker in other occupations. But inasmuch as they increase the buying power of the Canadian farmer they will soon be reflected in greater activity in factories and stores.

Even with an appallingly low yield of wheat in the main western areas it is quite conceivable that the total purchasing power of wheat farmers this year will be the best for several years. It may be recalled that the harvest of 1932 was the third largest in the history of the country, but the average value at the farm was only 35 cents a bushel, and the estimate of the value of that wheat crop by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics was only $154,700,000.

Even if this year's western wheat crop is only 215 or 225 millions, plus an eastern crop of 15 millions, it is obvious that at prices now current the total value would be somewhat greater than it was in 1932. Indeed, the prospects are now that it will be the most valuable crop since 1930.

Stocks on Hand More Valuable

There is another aspect of the sharp advance in wheat prices which should not be missed. The wheat board has been selling wheat at those prices of a dollar or over, also, it still had, at the end of the crop year (July 31) over a hundred million bushels of wheat to sell. Part of this wheat was, perhaps, carryover from previous years and may by now be standing in the books at a dollar or over. On this there may not be much profit, but at any rate there does not appear to be much likelihood of further loss.

But the most part of the 100 millions still on hand must be what was brought from the western farmer on a basis of 87½ cents a bushel during the last year. It was understood at the time that this was an interim payment, and that if the board made any surplus, it should be distributed pro rata among the farmers who delivered to the board. Of course there are storage and financing charges on this wheat to deduct, but it would not take much further advance in wheat prices to yield a tidy sum to be distributed among the farmers who sold wheat last year—many of whom had no crop this year and will be grateful for a small extra payment on last year's wheat.

Gain In Revenues

Another more optimistic feature in the news is the substantial gain in federal revenues and the slight decrease in expenditures. The improvement in four months is in the neighborhood of 25 million dollars. The employment figures are also a little better, after some months when, allowing for seasonal changes, they made practically no headway. The figures showing persons on relief, aside from the drought-stricken areas of the west, where there will be some increases, are expected to show marked reduction during this summer, as compared with a year ago. Business in general is more buoyant, and would have been much more so had it not been for the harvest collapse in western Canada, and the drought in Ontario, which did serious damage. On the long view the light wheat harvest may prove to have been a good thing, but it is small consolation for the destitute farmers.

Consultations continue regarding the feed situation in the west, and the ranchers begin to grow restive. There are numerous and somewhat involved negotiations to complete before Ottawa will be ready to disclose its policy in full. Meantime some of the ranchers don't know whether to sacrifice their stock now for what they can get, or hang on confident that the government will come to the rescue in adequate fashion.

Bar Free Entry Certain Articles Bought In U. S.

Bath Tubs, Refrigerators, Blowers Affected—Question of Car Radios Cause of Trouble.

Custom collectors at ports of entry from the United States had quite a hectic time shortly after the regulation permitting bona-fide Canadian tourists to bring back up to $100 worth of goods duty free went into effect.

Some enterprising residents of the Dominion were arriving back with bath tubs attached to the carriers of their cars, others had refrigerators in the back part of cars. As a matter of fact there seemed to be no limit to what Canadians wished to buy across the line.

New Orders Given

All that was quickly changed and instructions have been given to the collectors at all ports that tourists can bring in not more than $100 of goods of the sort that can be classed as baggage. Bath tubs, oil burners, refrigerators, blowers etc., are barred because these articles are not baggage. The definition of baggage is anything that the railways will accept as such and the train traveller knows that the porter on the Pullman will not allow him to put a bath tub up on the rack.

The question of car radios caused the most trouble, it was learned. Since a majority of Canadian cars were not equipped with radios and the situation was much the reverse on the other side of the line, livewire radio dealers in Detroit, Buffalo and other large cities close to the border thought they would capitalize on the new Canadian customs regulation. The streets of Windsor were flooded with handbills of Detroit merchants advertising car radios for as low as $6.50. Prices offered in other places were similarly low.

For a few days automobile tourists from Canada were able to get across and after being there 48 hours return with radios installed in their cars, paying no duty.

Rule Applies to Tires

When the situation became known here instructions went out that tourists were to be charged the duty on installed radios but could bring in "loose" radios free so long as the total valuation of the goods in a car did not exceed $100. The same rule applies to new tires, put on cars, new batteries installed in cars and other equipment.

It was explained to The Journal that there is nothing to prevent tourists bringing back a small table radio under the new regulation but a large radio that could be placed in a car only with difficulty is excluded, except where duty is to be paid. Other goods such as golf bags and clubs, fishing tackle and so forth can be brought in as these things come within the definition of baggage—Ottawa Journal.

Girl On The Farm Has Time For Parties

Old-fashioned Life is Best, "Grandmother" Writes to Editor

Toronto.—"The farmer who owns his own farm is comparatively a free and happily-placed man. His life is enormously preferable to that of the great mass of city folk, confined in box-like rooms. As for long hours of labor, the agriculturist, has nothing on the average newspaper editor."

This is the reaction of the editor of the Mail and Empire to a discussion of "The Girl on the Farm."

One of his correspondents says: "The old-fashioned way is certainly the safest and the best. Believe me, dear editor, when I say I know what I am writing about for—I have been 'The Girl on the Farm,' I have been 'The Mother on the Farm,' and I am now 'The Grandmother on the Farm.'"

"I do not confuse the positions held by the hired girl and the girl who is living in her own home on the farm. The former has her duties to perform from week-end to week-end with her afternoon or evenings off as pre-arranged. . . her reward . . . her monthly wages; while the girl on the farm, although she may do approximately the same work, is not called on to follow the same cut-and-dried routine. She can arrange for her relaxations as they come; can plan her work to have time to attend the Women's Institute meeting, the Missionary Society tea or the church tea-party, and I can assure you she is suitably dressed for these occasions and has in her purse the necessary spending money. "Now every girl and young woman is looking forward to the time when she will have a home of her own, and I think one of the most enjoyable periods of her life is spent in planning and getting ready so many pretty and necessary things for the future love nest.

"She and mother in whispered conferences arrange for the selling of some early chickens that glossy table linen may find its way into the hope chest, or send the surplus eggs to market to meet the price of that lovely glassware that will make the farm girl's eyes sparkle. Next the bedding is got together—quilts, sheets, pillow cases, goosefeather pillows and last, but not least, a feather mattress; then follow towels, fancy work, silverware, until all that is necessary for future use is provided.

"The farm girl's wedding clothes will be just as suitable, if not as expensive, as those of the city girl, and when dad hands over the cheque to pay for the furniture of the new home nothing is lacking, not even the shower already given by the neighborhood girls."

It is the custom in the country districts for the bride's father to give the furnishings for the home if his daughter is to live on a farm as wife and housekeeper.

Continent To Suffer From Seed Shortage

EDMONTON, Aug. 7.—All North America will suffer this season from a seed shortage as acute as any in the history of the continent since the West was developed, W. T. G. Wiener, of Ottawa, secretary of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, said here today.

Mr. Wiener has just completed a survey of the situation in the north half of the province and has been conferring with Dr. James R. Fryer, of the University Department of Agriculture.

Never before has a drought area been so wide as this year," said the national secretary. "It ranges from Prince Albert to Kentucky, and practically from New Brunswick to California."

Look Them Over First

THE MERCHANT and manufacturer who advertise, actually are placing their merchandise before you for inspection. They invite your most critical attention, and an uncompromising comparison. And their advertisements, so to speak, say to their products. "We have introduced you to the public—now stand on your own merits."

If the manufacturer and merchant did not have confidence in their wares, they would hesitate to call attention to them. For advertising rigidly tests the maker, the seller and the merchandise. Business so tested, and found not wanting, is prosperous.

In the long run, you can depend on the man who advertises, as well as on his product. That is one reason why people have found that it pays to read advertisements.

It is through advertising that the excellent things of the world are brought to the attention of those who are seeking for the best and most economical way to spend their money.

Read the advertisements. They are NEWS

THRIFTY?

THRIFTINESS is a state of mind that is nearly as valuable an asset as a bank account of its own.

And it's easy to tell thrifty people from the way in which they read the newspapers—just as you can usually spot the other kind.

The great majority of men and women never put a newspaper down until they have read the important news which is directed to them through the advertisements.

The modern woman, especially, finds the advertisements indispensable. She spends more than five-sixths of the family income. And the prosperity, happiness and health of her household frequently depend on her reading of the advertisements and on the wisdom with which she chooses everything she buys.

The advertisements bring you complete information about accepted products and new ones. Through them you can compare values . . . discover ways and means for greater household efficiency and enjoyment . . . and make sure that every dollar spent will bring its full return.

The Kennel Murder Case

—BY—
S. S. VAN DINE

Synopsis of preceding instalments:

The supposed suicide of Archer Coe, acquaintance of Philo Vance, detective, proves to be a murder of the most mysterious sort. Coe, a collector of Chinese ceramic, is found dead in his bedroom, the door being bolted from the inside and the windows tightly fastened. A revolver is clutched in his right hand and there is a bullet wound in his temple. He is sitting up in a chair and is wearing a dressing gown, but his street shoes are on his feet. Further examination discloses that he has been struck over the head, and there is a deep stab wound in his back, which has bled internally. Vance, who has insisted from the first that the case is murder, is assisted by Sergeant Heath and District Attorney Markham. Miss Hilda Lake, Coe's niece and ward, frankly admits there was enmity between herself and her uncle over money matters. Wrede, a neighbor who is engaged to Miss Lake, also had been on bad terms with Coe. Grassi, a representative of an Italian museum, has been a house guest at Coe's home. Brisbane Coe, Archer's brother, who lived in the house, supposedly left for Chicago the previous evening, but Vance finds Brisbane's favorite stick in the hall. Brisbane's suit-case is found in the check room at the station. In a coat closet in the lower hall is found the dead body of Brisbane Coe. Vance interrogates the Chinese cook, Liang, who says he did not return to the house until midnight. Vance insists that the cook was in the house early in the evening. Vance finds a bit of porcelain from a rare Chinese vase. A cheap imitation has been substituted for the rare work of art. Vance says the bit of porcelain from the vase that has disappeared has blood on it.

INSTALMENT 16

Thursday, October 11, 12:45 p.m.
Liang was dismissed with instructions to remain in the house to remain in the house until further notice.
There was little to be done until he had Doctor Doremus's report.
Heath had taken a violent dislike to Liang.
"You think the Chink was here early last night and that he knows something about what went on," asked Heath.
"Oh, undoubtedly," Vance admitted.
"Maybe it was him who put the bathrobe on the guy upstairs."
"That," replied Vance, "was one of the possibilities I was toying with."
It was at this point in the discussion that Burke came to the door and beckoned to Heath.
"Say, Sergeant," he reported from the corner of his mouth, "that Chink just went upstairs. Right with you?"
Heath looked sour.
"Now, what's the idea?" he bawled.
Gamble entered the hall from the dining-room at this moment, and Vance addressed him.
"What is Liang doing upstairs?"
The butler seemed perturbed and replied with apologetic obsequiousness: "I told him to fetch Miss Lake's tray, and tidy up her quarters. . . Shouldn't I have done it, sir?"
Vance scrutinized the man closely.
"When he returns keep him downstairs," he said. "And you'd better stay here yourself."
Gamble bowed and returned to the dining-room; and a moment later Doctor Doremus arrived.
We were close behind Heath when he opened the closet door. Doremus, straightway assuming a professional air, knelt down and touched Brisbane Coe's body.
"Take hold of his shoulders," he said. And he and the Sergeant carried the body into the library and placed it on the davenport. For the second time that day Doremus went about his gruesome task.

ZUTOO

"Could you tell us, doctor," Vance asked, "which of the two victims died first?"
Doremus glanced at his watch.
"That's easy," he said. "The one upstairs. The advance of rigor mortis in the two bodies is practically the same. This one might be slightly further along; but it's been nearly four hours since I went over the other fellow. Therefore, I'd say that this one died anywhere from two to three hours later."
"How about nine o'clock last night?" put in Heath.
"Maybe," Doremus again bent over the corpse. "But I'd put it later. Say eight o'clock for the one upstairs and about ten o'clock for this one."
"That's not certain, y'understand; but it's my guess."
He then proceeded with his examination. After a while he straightened up and frowned at Markham.
"You know what killed this guy?"
Markham shook his head.
"Not yet. What was it?"
"A stab in the back. . . Same like the fellow upstairs. And almost in the same place."
"And the weapon?"
"The same. A sharp, narrow, four-cornered instrument. Only, in this case, the hemorrhage was external. A lot of blood lost."
"Died instantly, I take it," remarked Vance.
"Yep." The doctor nodded. "Must have fallen in his tracks."
Vance picked up the blood-stained coat and waist-coat of the dead man, and inspected them.
"And this time the stab was through the clothes he was wearing," he commented. "I say, doctor; any indications of a struggle?"
"Nope." Doremus put on his hat at a rakish angle. "Not a sign. He got it in the back when he wasn't expecting it. Startled him for a split second—probably—look at that expression—and then he curled up and passed out. Doubt if he even saw the fellow that did him in. Quick, smooth business."
He started for the door, but turned and fixed Heath with a leering eye.
"Say, look here. Got any more corpses round the house? If you have, bring 'em out now. I can't be running up here all day. I got work to do."
In another moment he had slammed the front door behind him.
Vance gave him a commiserating smile.
"About the middle of the Gobi desert, I should say, Sergeant."
"And where might that be, Mr. Vance?"
"The Gobi desert," explained Vance. "—or, correctly, simply the Gobi—is an almost unexplored territory in Mongolia. The Chinese call the Gobi desert Han-hal and Sha-mo. The Monoglians say Samak."
"That's enough, sir," Heath interrupted. "I understand what you mean." He regarded Vance shrewdly.
"And it's my opinion the Chink cook did it. If Mr. Markham would give me the word, I'd arrest him now."
"Why such haste, Sergeant?" sighed Vance. "You haven't a particle of evidence against him—and he knows it. That's why he will not admit that he was here earlier last night."
"See here, Vance," Markham said, "how do you know Liang was here early last night?"
"By the fact that Gamble heard him come in at midnight. Gamble said he 'sneaked' in; but I assure you, Markham, if Liang had wanted to come in the back way without being heard, he would have done so with no difficulty whatever. Moreover, I imagine he always comes in silently—it's a Chinese characteristic. On general principles, the Chinese never want their movements, however innocent, to be known to foreigners. But last night Liang was heard returning—and Gamble had already retired to the fourth floor. A bit significant—eh, what? Liang probably saw Gamble's boudoir light ablaze, and let it be known, in a subtle way, that he was arriving from his afternoon and evening off. I can even imagine Liang leaving the kitchen door and windows open while he cluttered Archer Coe's supper dishes and brewed himself a pot of tea. . . Tea at midnight for a cultured Chinaman? No, no, Markham. Really, it's not done in the best oriental circles. And Liang had probably been flooding his system with goat fat steepings most of the evening. He was merely signalling to Gamble that he had returned at midnight."

"I see what you mean," Markham nodded dubiously. "But, after all, your reasoning is purely speculative."
"Oh, quite," Vance admitted. "But the entire case is in a speculative stage just now, what? Anyway, I have even more definite evidence that Liang was here early night and I'll present him with it later. . . . And that being the present state of affairs, what do you say to our having polite intercourse with Wrede and the Signor Grassi?"
Markham waved his hand in assent. Heath gave orders to Burke to remain at the library door and see that no one entered the room. Gamble was told to stay in the front hall and answer the door bell.
"Which of the babies do you want first?" the Sergeant then asked.
"The Italian, by all means," said Vance. "He's frightfully upset, and therefore in an admirable state of mind for questioning. We'll keep Wrede till later—he's teeming with possibilities."
INSTALMENT SEVENTEEN
Heath went toward the drawing-room door as Vance and Markham and I ascended the stairs to Archer Coe's room. Liang, with Miss Lake's breakfast tray, was descending from the third floor when we reached the upper landing.
Grassi and the Sergeant joined us a few seconds later.
"Mr. Grassi," Vance began, "we should like to know exactly what your social and professional status is in this house. We understand you have been a house guest of Mr. Coe's for a week."
The Italian now had himself well in hand.
"Yes—that is right," he returned, looking at Vance with calm disdain. "I came here at Mr. Coe's invitation a week ago yesterday."
"Had you any business with Mr. Coe?"
"Oh, yes. Business, one might say, was the basis of the invitation. . . . I am connected, in an official capacity, with a museum of antiquities in Milan, and I had hoped to be able to purchase from Mr. Coe certain specimens of Chinese ceramic art."
"His Ting yao vase, for example?"
Grassi's dark eyes became suddenly brilliant with astonishment; but almost at once a wary look came into them.
"I must admit I was interested in the vase," he said. Have you examined it?"
"No," Vance told him. "I've never seen it. . . . but I think I've had a fragment of it in my hand."
Grassi stared.
"A fragment?"
"Yes, a small triangular piece," Vance nodded. Then he added: "I have grave fears, Mr. Grassi, that the Ting yao vase has been broken."
The Italian stiffened, and his eyes clouded with suspicious anger.
"It's impossible! I was inspecting the vase only yesterday afternoon. It was on the circular table in the library."
"There's only a Tao Kuang vase there now," Vance informed him.
"And where, may I be permitted to ask, did you find this fragment of Ting yao?"
"On the same table," Vance replied carelessly. "Beneath the Tao Kuang."
"Indeed?" There was a sneer in the inflexion of the word.
Vance appeared to ignore it.
"I understand from Gamble that you left the house at about four o'clock yesterday afternoon."
"That is correct. I had a business appointment for dinner and the evening."
"With whom?"
"Is that information necessary?"
"Oh, very."
"Very well, then. . . . With one of the curators of the Metropolitan Museum of Art."
"And," continued Vance, without change of tone, "at what time last night did you meet Miss Lake?"
The Italian rose indignantly.
"I resent that question, sir!" His voice, though dignified, was unsteady.
"Even if I had met Miss Lake, I would not tell you."
"Really, Mr. Grassi," Vance smiled. "I would not have expected you to. Your conduct is quite correct. . . . I take it for granted you were aware that Miss Lake is engaged to Mr. Wrede."
"Yes; I knew there was some understanding. Mr. Archer Coe informed me of the fact. But he also stated—"
"Yes, yes. He also stated that he was opposed to the alliance. He enjoyed Mr. Wrede intellectually, but did not regard him favorably as a husband for his ward. . . . What is your opinion of the situation, Mr. Grassi?"
The Italian seemed surprised at Vance's question.
"You must forgive me, sir," he said after a pause, "if I plead my inability to express an opinion on the subject. I may say, however, that Mr.

Brisbane Coe disagreed with his brother. He was very much in favor of the marriage, and stated his views most emphatically to Mr. Archer Coe."
"And now both of them are dead," Vance remarked.
Grassi's eyelids drooped, and he turned his head slightly.
"Both?" he repeated in a low voice.
"Mr. Brisbane was stabbed in the back shortly after Mr. Archer was killed," Vance informed him.
"Most unfortunate," the Italian murmured.
"Have you," asked Vance, "any suggestion as to who might desire to have these two gentlemen out of the way?"
Grassi suddenly became austere and aloof.
"I have no suggestion," he replied in a flat, diplomatic voice. "Mr. Archer Coe was the type of man who might inspire enmities; but Mr. Brisbane Coe was quite the opposite—genial, shrewd, kindly."
"But he had undercurrents of passion and resentment," suggested Vance.
"Oh, yes," the other agreed.
"And what are your impressions of Mr. Wrede. . . . I assure you any opinion you express will go no further."
Grassi readjusted his thoughts.
"Mr. Wrede impresses me as being very clever. But I have sensed another side to him. He is capable, I should say, of unexpected things. I have a feeling he would stop at nothing to gain his own ends."
"Thank you!" Vance cut in on the other's remark with unwonted harshness. "I perfectly understand your feelings." He looked down at Grassi contemptuously. "And now, sir, we should like to know exactly what you did yesterday between four o'clock in the afternoon and one o'clock in the morning." His tone was almost menacing.
Grassi leaned forward, grasping the arms of the chair with frantic force.
"I went to Doctor Montrose's for tea," he began in a high-pitched, nervous voice. "We discussed ceramics; and I stayed to dinner. At eight o'clock I excused myself and went to the railway station to take the train for Mount Vernon—to the Crestview Country Club. . . ."
"Your appointment with Miss Lake was at what time?"
"Nine o'clock." The man looked appealingly at Vance. "There was to be a dance. . . . but—but I took the wrong train—I'm not familiar."
"Quite—quite," Vance spoke encouragingly. "And what time was it when you arrived at the Club?"
"It was after eleven," Grassi fell back into the chair, as if exhausted.
"I had to make several transportation changes," he continued in a forced tone. "It was most unfortunate."
"Yes, very." Vance studied the other icily. "Did the lady forgive your tardiness?"
"Yes! Miss Lake accepted my explanation," the man returned, with a show of heat. "The fact is, she did not arrive until several minutes after I did. She had motored to the Arrowhead Inn with friends for dinner, and had an accident of some kind on her return to the Club."
"Very distressing," murmured Vance. "Were her friends with her at the time of the accident?"
Grassi hesitated and moved uneasily.
"I do not believe they were," he answered. "Miss Lake told me she had motored back alone."
At this point Detective Burke stepped into the room.
"That Chink downstairs wants to speak to Mr. Vance, he said. 'He's all hot and bothered.'"
Vance nodded to Heath.
"Send him up, Burke," the Sergeant ordered.
Burke turned and called down the stairs.
Liang appeared at the door and waited till Vance came to him. He said something in a low voice which the rest of us in the room could not distinguish, and held out a crudely twisted paper parcel.
"Thank you, Mr. Liang," said Vance; and the Chinaman, with a bow, returned downstairs.
Vance took the parcel to the desk and began opening it.
"The cook," he said, speaking directly to the Italian, "has just found this package tucked away in the garbage-pail on the rear porch. It may interest you, Mr. Grassi."
As he spoke, he smoothed out the corners of the paper; and there were revealed to all of us many fragments of beautiful, delicate porcelain with a pure-white lustre.
"Here," he went on, still addressing the Italian, "are the remains of Mr. Coe's Ting yao vase. . . . And, if you will notice, several of these pieces of fragile Sung porcelain are stained with blood."
Grassi rose and stared at the fragments, stupefied.

The Queen's Park Arena

By The Watchman
Toronto, August 13th. In almost every line of endeavour, except agriculture, tremendous strides have been taken toward eliminating the risks and hazards that bring ruin and failure. But in the age-old occupation of agriculture, the laws of nature prevail, and man has yet to bend these laws to his will. Floods and droughts and pests still harry the man on the soil, robbing him of his thin profits wiping out the toil of a season; breaking his pocketbook but never his courage.

Governments can do much towards alleviating the troubles of farmers, but they can do little or nothing about lack of rain, or too much of it. Farming, no matter what branch, is a pure gamble. The man on the land knows the risks and he is content to take them. That is why most farmers possess the stoicism of an Indian and the patience of ancient Job.

Undue emphasis has been placed in recent years on the troubles that beset the industrial worker. True, these troubles are complex and serious, but what about the farmers? Unfortunately, farmers as a whole are unarticulate. If they had as good press agenting as the other bodies and trade unions of the cities, there would be more sympathy and understanding of their plight. True enough, farmers don't need to stand in bread lines or depend on relief contributions. They have their independence, but many of them have little else.

The same amount of physical toil and care that a farmer expends, if put into some other line of business, would bring much greater returns than are received by the men on the land. It is a tragedy, no less, when a searing drought deals a death blow to crops. Human enterprise goes for nothing beneath the hot rays of the sun. And the farmer must start all over again.

City dwellers sometimes pass over as unimportant an announcement that the government plans to do this or that for agriculture. Perhaps they read an item in the newspapers that the cheese industry has been bonused or that quality cattle have been brought to Canada to improve Canadian herds, and dismiss it as being of no interest. They are wrong. Nothing that a government does on behalf of agriculture is wasted. No branch of human industry is entitled to more consideration and help from the state than is agriculture.

Therefore it is encouraging to find the Ontario government mapping out a definite program of farm aid in all the many and important branches of the industry. More money should be spent by the Department of Agriculture—though it is true the amounts have been increased in some cases—and even more thought given to the problems and difficulties besetting the farmers.

Hawk Family Ordinary Up to Entirely Beneficial

There is a hawk species, according to a representative of the United States Department of Agriculture, that ranges in human significance from "ordinarily neutral; sometimes injurious" up to "almost entirely beneficial." These are the hawks which the farmer, the sportsman, the outdoorsman generally, should learn to recognize and to salute with "Pass, friend," when he sees them. A group, known to hawkmen as the Buteos, or "mouse hawks," prey predominantly on field mice and other small rodents. These hawks very seldom err in the direction of taking song birds or game birds.

An important item in the dietary of the beneficial hawks is insects. They devour huge numbers of fat caterpillars, wireworms, beetles and grasshoppers. One species, the sparrow hawk is misnamed and should be called the grasshopper hawk. In grasshopper time its food consists almost entirely of these leaping pests.
Eagles, which are close kin of the hawks, come in for a bit of debunking. They are not the fierce and glorious birds of prey that fly through political speeches. The golden eagle feeds mostly on rabbits—and carrion. The bald eagle, America's proud emblem, feeds predominantly on fish, which it either steals or finds dead along the shore.

Wisconsin Was Thirtieth State Admitted to Union

Wisconsin was the thirtieth state to be admitted to the Union, and the last to be formed from the "old northwest." It was early explored by Nicolet, LaSalle and French traders who made the first settlement at Green Bay in 1639. Nicolet's reports of the Mississippi river led the Jesuits to believe it a passage to India. In 1763 the treaty of Paris gave the territory to the English, under whose jurisdiction it remained until 1796, when it was ceded to the United States. In 1836 it was formed into a separate territory, and included, besides its present area, the present states of Iowa and Minnesota and parts of the Dakotas. On May 29, 1848, the state was admitted into the Union.

The present Constitution dates back from 1848. The population of Wisconsin in 1840 was 30,945. The state motto is "Civilitas succedit barbarum" ("the civilized man succeeds the barbarous").—Indianapolis News.

The Painted Desert

The Painted Desert is an area of plateaus and low mesas in north central Arizona. It extends from the top of the Marble canyon of the Colorado river southeastward along the east side of the Little Colorado for about 100 miles. The desert lies at an altitude of about 5,000 feet. Its vast areas of rocks, mostly Triassic shales and sandstones, exhibit a great variety of colors, including red, pink, purple, chocolate, lavender, pale green and gray, whence the name Painted.

Antics of Elephants

The private lives of elephants are no longer private. Reginald Campbell, an Englishman who for many years was a forester in Siam, has written his memoirs. Here are some of the things he learned about the jungle giants: They can't jump, even a little ditch will stop them. . . . Can't turn their heads as their necks are too short. This makes them nervous about being approached from the rear. . . . Distrust dogs and horses more than any other animals.—Washington Post.

Demanded Safety First

In 1831 a colored fireman on the South Carolina railway became annoyed by the roar of the steam from the safety valve and tied it down, causing the first locomotive boiler explosion in the United States. So thereafter, for several years, this railway, in order to secure the patronage of timid passengers, had to separate each engine from the rest of the train by a flatcar loaded with cotton.—Dave A. Martin, Los Angeles, Calif. in Collier's Weekly.

St. Anne de Beaupre

Sainte Anne de Beaupre, the famous pilgrim resort, is 20 miles east of Quebec. A shrine was founded there about 1620 by Breton sailors in gratitude to Sainte Anne for their escape from shipwreck. A chapel was built in 1658. In 1676 the chapel was replaced by a larger one in 1876. In 1922 this was destroyed by fire, but was replaced by a handsome edifice. The shrine is visited by 150,000 annually.

Queen Victoria's Birthplace

The Duke and Duchess of Kent, although they lived in Europe before the birth of the princess, were determined that their child should be born in England because of the possibility that she might one day be queen. They accordingly journeyed across Germany to England, where they were established in Kensington palace when the Princess Victoria was born, on May 24, 1819.

The President's Flag

The origin of the flag of the President of the United States cannot be traced to an official document and therefore the exact reason for turning the eagle's head to sinister instead of to dexter as in the United States seal cannot be definitely stated. It was probably for the simple reason of differentiating it from the older symbol.

The prospects of an important new industry for Alexandria seem bright following a meeting of our citizens on Tuesday evening when three representatives of the Dominion Cutlery Company laid a proposition before the gathering which may result in this town securing that industry. The proposition is that the municipality guarantee the bonds of the company to the extent of $24,000, and exempt them from taxes for ten years. The company would bring in a plant valued at from 30 to 40 thousand dollars and install it in the Schell Foundry buildings. Obituary

DONALD GRANT
(The Kootenayan, Kaslo, B.C.)

Donald (Dan) Grant of Ainsworth passed away in the Victorian hospital on Friday, July 24th after a lingering illness, which started some four years ago following a stroke. He was 74 years of age, and leaves his brother Alex of Ainsworth and a sister, Mrs. Murphy of Vancouver to mourn his passing.

Dan came to this district in 1891 and has followed mining practically all of the time. In partnership with M. J. Halpin, now of Kimberley, and his brother Alex, he leased for a number
