

Instructive Talk Delivered To Crop Improvement And Plowmen's Meeting By W. B. George

Coloured Slides Used To Illustrate Points In Address—Committee Named To Select Locale For Seed Fair

An enthusiastic group of farmers met in the Agricultural Office here Wednesday afternoon, to discuss plans for 1942. Following the reading of the minutes and the Treasurer's Report of the Crop Improvement Association a report was given on the projects carried on in 1941. W. B. George, Kemptville Agricultural School, was the Guest Speaker. Coloured slides were shown which included the work of improvement Associations in Eastern Ontario. Many of these described the importance of pasture improvement. Tests being carried on by the Renfrew Crop Improvement Association in regard to potatoes were illustrated. Mr. George emphasized the importance of building up soil fertility and outlined an experiment which is being conducted at the present time in regard to soil fertility levels.

The following officers were appointed for 1942:

Honorary Presidents: Lionel Chevrier M.P., Dr. W. B. MacDiamid, M.P. F. B. Brownridge, M.P.P., E. A. MacGillivray M.P.P.; President Robert MacKay, Maxville; Vice-Presidents Thomas Hay Alexandria, R. 1 J. K. Condie, Bainsville J. L. McDonald, Harrison's Cors. Secretary-Treasurer J. A. Dalrymple, Directors: J. M. Arkinstall, Dunvegan, R. 2, Carman Rowe, Maxville, J. J. McDonald, Dalhousie Sta. R. 1, Stanley Wightman, Lancaster, Adelard Menard, Glen Robertson, Roy Barton, Dalkeith, R. 2, George McIntosh, Moose Creek, John McLennan, Maxville, George Goodfellow, Lancaster, Wm. Scott, Martintown, R. 1, C. T. Johnson, Mille Roches, Stuart MacKay, Cornwall, R. 2; Auditors—D. W. McPherson, Glen Sandfield, Arcade Trotter, Alexandria, R. 2.

The question of the Seed Fair was discussed and an invitation was extended from Bainsville district to hold the Seed Fair in that locality. Mr. J. W. MacRae, J. K. Condie, and the Secretary were appointed as a committee to arrange for the Seed Fair.

Following the adjournment of the Crop Improvement Association the Plowmen's Association met for their Annual Meeting. The report of the Secretary-treasurer showed a very active year with a goodly balance on hand. Plans for 1942 were discussed and a committee, consisting of the directors from Cornwall Township, was appointed to arrange for a site for the 1942 Match. It was felt by all present that the officers for 1941 should carry on in 1942 as they thought this was not a time to make changes in the management of an organization. Robert MacKay, Maxville, again heads the Association, J. A. Dalrymple is Secretary-treasurer, and the complete slate, is the same as in 1941.

Sgt. Pilot Perrin Magwood Safe But Wounded

Sgt. Pilot Perrin Magwood, son of Col. and Mrs. W. H. The flier reported he was being well attended.

Sgt. Pilot Magwood left for England in May and was reported missing and a prisoner of war following an operational flight over Germany, October 24th.

Flax Co-Operative Plant Modern In Every Particular

TWO SHIFTS EMPLOY 70 MEN—WORKING STEADILY TO PROCESS TWO CROPS

The new processing plant of the Glengarry Flax Co-operative at North Lancaster, is a fine, substantial structure, modern in every particular, as was seen by a News representative who visited the plant on Tuesday. Some 35 employees were busy at the various machines and work is steadily progressing on the big task of processing both the 1940 crop and that of 1941. Two ten-hour shifts, some 70 men in all, are busy and each week sees about 24,000 pounds of fibre processed.

Production in the new plant started on September 29th as soon as machinery had been secured and installed. Line fibre flax from 1940 crop, most of which had been deseeded last Spring, is now being processed and about January 15th it is expected a start will be made on the 1,000 acre crop of 1941 tied flax. It should be finished by early August, in good time for the 1942 crop.

Mr. Charles Maville, is plant superintendent and he took the News' representative on a tour of the building, thoroughly explaining the work of each machine. Mr. Calvin McPherson is night foreman and some idea of the development of the industry can be had from the fact that Secretary-Treasurer Duncan Condie makes up a payroll of about $5,000, a month.

Completely fire proof, with each section separated by fire doors, the new plant is a two-storey building of cement block construction. It measures 137 feet long by 60 feet wide and 50 feet high, and is a big improvement on the first plant lost by fire last Spring. Present equipment consists of one turbine scutcher, ten Flemish knives and four breakers. A second turbine scutcher is to be installed later, the plant having been laid out with this in view.

Construction started early in May and the work was done by local labor under the supervision of Mr. Ovilla Cuerrier of St. Telephore. Total cost was in the neighborhood of $22,000, but little more than the cost of the first plant which was much inferior. The processed fibre is being shipped to Ireland and to the United States.

Merry Christmas

For millions of our fellow men—for the homeless, the destitute, the orphaned, the captive, the exiled—there will be no tinsel, no feasting. Yet men of good will with thankful hearts await this third Christmas of a world at war.

To our readers everywhere, to their families and all who are dear to them, we extend greetings and good wishes.

Two Planes Made Forced Landings Near Maxville

MAXVILLE—Farms near Maxville were emergency fields for two airplanes during last week end, one being forced down on Saturday evening, while the second made a forced landing Monday afternoon. In both instances none of the crew were hurt.

Saturday's plane was a Royal Air Force Ferry Command Lockheed bomber, which was on a practice flight out from Dorval, Que. The huge machine was forced down on the farm of Daniel MacMaster, about five o'clock, during the first bad snow storm this season. The plane circled the town several times, barely skimming high tree tops. The pilot admitted that he was flying very close to the tree tops, and that "the visibility was very poor, with a ceiling of a little over 100 feet", due to the snow storm.

The co-pilot, George Couthan, of Montreal baled out while the plane was near Osnabruck Center, which is about 12 miles north-west of Cornwall. John Neville, a farmer living about two miles north of Osnabruck, drove the airman to Cornwall, where he got in touch with his base by telephone.

The radio and port motor of the bomber were not functioning properly and with darkness approaching fast, the forced landing was imperative. Besides the co-pilot, the members of the crew were: Captain Lowell Thompson. (Continued on page 5)

John R. Cameron Passes At Findlater, Sask.

Findlater and district lost one of its oldest and most loved friends in the passing of John Roderick Cameron, on Saturday, Nov. 22nd, 1941. Although he had been in failing health for a long time, his death came as a shock to his many friends.

People from far and near always took pleasure in dropping in to see him and enjoy his cheery smile and sage humour. For many years he was a tireless worker for the Edwards school district, both in church and community; besides being an active member of the Pool and other farm organizations. During his stay in Findlater he always took a great interest in all social activities although his health did not permit any active participation.

He was born at Dunvegan, Glengarry County, Ont., on July 6th, 1877 and was the son of the late Rory Cameron and Mrs. Rory Cameron who still resides at Dunvegan. The funeral was held in the United Church, Findlater, on Tuesday, Nov. 25th, 1941, and a large crowd attended from all parts of the province. Rev. Coveney, Bethune, gave a very beautiful service which touched the hearts of all his friends there. Rev. Coveney also sang the deceased's favorite hymn. Mrs. Topping presided at the organ.

John R. Cameron came to Brandon, Man., in 1901 and to Arcola, Sask. in 1902, to manage the farm of J. D. Steadman, M.L.A. for Cannington Manor. He moved to Findlater, Edwards School District, in 1908, where he homesteaded and farmed for 19 years. When his health failed in 1927 he moved into Findlater where he resided until his death. He leaves his wife, the former Jessie E. Chisholm of Dunvegan, Glengarry County, two daughters, Lillian (Mrs. Joe Donaldson) and Annabel (Mrs. Glenn Gesy) of Elrose, Sask.; one son, Roderick Angus, on the home. (Continued on page 8)

Heart Attack Fatal To Julien Carriere, Wednesday

Julien Carriere, 70 died suddenly about 2 p.m. Wednesday, at the home of his son, Mr George Carriere, 3rd Kenyon, half mile west of Alexandria, death resulting from a heart attack. Mr Carriere had been in apparent good health right up to the time of his death and his sudden passing has evoked many expressions of sympathy for the bereaved family.

Deceased had been working about the house and, complaining of not feeling well, he sat down in the kitchen and expired immediately. With him at the time were Mrs George Carriere and Jos. Vachon of Alexandria. They summoned Dr. D. J. Dolan, but Mr Carriere had succumbed before he reached the scene.

Born at St. Justine, Que., the late Mr Carriere came to the 4th Kenyon some 24 years ago, since which time he had been a valued resident of that district. His wife predeceased him 21 years ago and Mr Carriere leaves to mourn his passing, six sons and three daughters: Arthur and Henry 4th Kenyon; George, 3rd Kenyon; Aime of Brownsburg, Que; Paul of Valleyfield, Que; Alcide in Ottawa; Mrs. Donat Caron, Cornwall; Mrs Willie LaJole, Brown House, and Mrs Howard Kelly, Alexandria.

The funeral will be held from the home of his son, Mr Henry Carriere, 4th Kenyon, to Sacred Heart Church Alexandria at 9.30 o'clock, Saturday morning. Interment will be at St. Justine, Que.

Annual Visit of Santa Brings Large Turnout

Santa Claus received a warm welcome on Saturday morning when he paid his annual visit to Chenier's Hardware, here. After the big parade from the C.N.R. station, Santa officiated at a scramble from Chenier's store, a generous quantity of kisses, peanuts, etc. being thrown and instantaneously picked up by the large throng of kiddies.

The big feature was the parade along Main street, possibly bigger and better even than last year's large turnout. The kiddies rode in trucks, private cars and sleighs and a feature this year was the presence in the parade of two Shetland ponies ridden by the proud owners. Members of the Maxville Boys' Band supplied music.

Heard On Troop Broadcast

L.A.C. A. J. Kennedy, son of Mr and Mrs S. A. Kennedy, Centre St, Alexandria, was heard on the Sunday morning broadcast "With the Troops," from England over the O.B.C. L.A.C. Kennedy, who recently arrived overseas declared he was in fine health and he sent Christmas greetings to all his Glengarry friends.

National Selective Service Soon, Announces Power

GOVERNMENT HAS FULLEST AUTHORITY TO ACT HE DECLARES

MONTREAL, Dec. 14.—Air Minister Power said Saturday night the Dominion Government proposes to bring about national selective service in an effort to put every man and woman in his most valuable place in the present emergency.

In his address at the annual dinner of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, Major Power said that under the National Resources Mobilization Act passed last year "the Government of this Dominion has the fullest authority and jurisdiction to enable it to bring about national selective service, not only of our manpower, but of our woman power also."

"These powers we propose to use in this emergency which confronts us, and in an endeavor to see to it that every man and woman in this country carries on the work which will be of the greatest possible benefit to the state as a whole", he said.

"We will organize manpower for the defence of our shores, so as not to be a liability to our friends and allies, and so that there shall be no chink in the armor of the democratic front."

"We will mobilize manpower for the greater production of munitions and food so as to be an asset to our friends and allies. "We will organize our women to work in the arsenals, the shops and the factories."

Died In British Columbia

Miss Flora Macdonald, Kenyon Street West, Alexandria, this week was notified of the recent passing of her brother, Mr Neil Macdonald, of Kaslo B.C. The deceased was a son of the late Mr and Mrs. Alex. R. Macdonald, Ottawa St. and left his native town many years ago. His wife predeceased him and besides four of a family, he leaves one brother, Robert Macdonald, of Prince Rupert, B.C. and two sisters, Miss Flora Macdonald, Alexandria and Miss Mary Macdonald, of Nelson, B.C.

In some parts of the County the Popularity Contest which has been under way for the past few weeks, has not been obtaining the results which this worthy cause deserved in spite of the excellent work by the canvassers throughout the various districts. Maxville and Kenyon have been leading the way so far, but there is ample room for improvement in most sections of the County.

While it is true that in some sections the membership drive and the popularity contest have come on at almost the same time, it is felt that, since the objective of this drive is to secure ample funds to purchase supplies required throughout the coming winter, each family should feel it a duty to take tickets to the value of at least $1.00, and assist in this way in procuring the necessary supplies.

It is only recently that the Canadian boys have come to grips with the enemy in large numbers, but it is expected that hence forth the casualty lists will be considerably higher than they have been since the commencement of the war, so that there will be much greater need for Red Cross supplies of all kinds.

It is to be hoped that when the canvassers call and ask our citizens to take tickets in connection with this drive, they will receive a cordial reception and a generous response so that the objective may be attained.

It has been decided to continue the canvassing until the beginning of January, so that no portion of the County may be overlooked.

Mild Spell Holds Up Ice Making On Rinks

This week's mild spell has called a temporary halt to ice-making at the Curling rink and the Municipal rink and will delay the opening of the two rinks. Ice making was started last week and good progress had been made in each instance. Reg. Cheney has been engaged as ice maker by the Curling Club, while Thos Douglas is to be in charge of the skating rink this year.

Minor damage was done to the car while it was missing and Mr. Greenspon left it in Montreal for repairs.

A.H.S. Chit-Chat

"Well, it's all over now!" You will soon know this when you receive the reports which are being sent out today. This year our brilliant student body is receiving an extra long holiday, from to-day until Jan. 7.

As the rink is progressing rapidly, we are before very long, thanks to the efficient rink manager, Mr. T. Douglas.

The boys are raving to get in a little hockey practice.

Since we have to send off our letters to old Santa Claus, before it gets too late our chat is brief, and we shall close by wishing all our readers,

A VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS and A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

Fashions

Smart Three-Piece Suit.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

LIGHT BEIGE spiked with black is a favorite and fashionable color alliance, and here is a pleasing example of this combination. The collarless suit is of oatmeal tweed with four crescent shaped patch pockets on the jacket and a slim skirt. Worn with the suit is a black sweater and an oatmeal tweed cape with tuxedo and lining of black Alaska seal, which is reversible. Oatmeal is a particularly pleasing shade and is popular with stay-at-homes this winter as well as vacationers.

Production Of Many Articles To Be Regulated

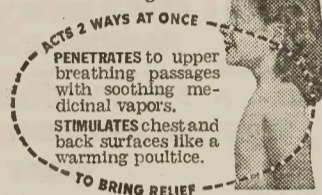

A wide range of metal articles including bicycles, toys, skates, furniture and novelties have been designated "supplies" under the Munitions and Supplies Act and Supplies Controller Alan H. Williamson said Friday night that "regulation or elimination of their production will begin at once."

The action was taken, Mr. Williamson said, "because the steel and other metals used in the manufacture of the articles affected by the order are essential to the war effort."

"In addition to releasing valuable war materials, labor badly needed for war industries will become available", he added.

Gifts For Britain's Fighting Leader

These two dolls, one dressed as a U.S. army nurse and the other as a Red Cross nurse, were sent to Prime Minister Churchill by Marguerite Davis of Syracuse, N.Y. The prime minister, accepting the gift with amusement and thanks, forwarded the dolls to London Red Cross headquarters where they were put on sale.

"Well—McGinnis—how do you account for this?"

The order declaring certain metal-made objects to be supplies was issued by Mr. Williamson with the approval of R. C. Berkinshaw, chairman of the War Industries Control Board, and goes into effect immediately.

The new order specifically designates electric broilers, fans, grills, irons, mixers, percolators, sandwich toasters and grills, stoves for glass coffee makers, electric tea kettles, toasters, roasters and grills, waffle irons, and all other small electrical appliances for household use.

All toys of which metal of any kind, other than precious metals, is "the component material of greatest volume or chief value", are included, as are bicycles, joy-cycles, tricycles, children's wagons and carts made of metal, ice skates and roller skates.

In addition the order covers spring-filled mattresses, upholstering springs, bedsprings, and upholstered furniture in which metal is used, commercial laundry and dry-cleaning machinery in which any metal is the component material of greatest volume or highest value.

Other items included in the order are: metal signs and metal and wire waste paper baskets, metal and wire letter trays and metal and wire desk trays; metal smoking stands; metal novelties and ornaments, including metal counters, metal display stands, metal ash trays and vases; metal lockers, metal partitions, metal shelving, and metal storage cabinets; metal radiator covers; metal fencing; metal coffins, or coffins in which metal is the chief component in volume or value.

All metal furniture is embraced in the order. This includes such metal articles as beds, bedroom furniture, benches, card tables, chairs, coat racks, couches, cribs, flower stands or ferneries, footstools, kitchen cabinets, humidifiers, lamps and lamp standards—electric and otherwise—tables and all metal garden furniture.

Ask Owners To Salvage Automobile Plates

Old Metal Will Benefit Red Cross Funds

A plan for salvaging of obsolete 1941 motor vehicle registration plates will again be carried out by the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society early in February, 1942.

From the proceeds of the sale of these plates, the funds of the Red Cross Society will benefit by a substantial sum, and motorists are asked to cooperate by delivering their old registration plates to any gasoline service station.

Through the cooperation of the oil companies, and the Automotive Transport Association, the plates will be collected from the service stations and transported to the steel mills where they will be used in production for war industries. The collection and transport of the plates are being conducted by the oil companies and the Automotive Transport Association without charge, and motorists who cooperate by handing in their old plates at the service stations are rendering a two-way service, at no cost to themselves, by providing the Red Cross Society with the proceeds of this salvage, and adding to our metal resources.

This is an effective form of aid to the national salvage campaign and provides the motorists with a plan for disposing of old registration plates that is at the same time useful and practical.

Milk For Britain Half Million Quarts

Toronto, Dec. 13.—Their "Milk-for-Britain campaign" has gained such momentum, the National War Services Committee of the Association of Kinsmen Clubs of Canada will shortly reach the half million quarts mark, it was announced today by Hal A. Rogers, founder of the Kinsmen Clubs and chairman of their National War Services Committee.

An urgent need for milk still exists in Great Britain, according to word from Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and the news brought back to Canada by many prominent government officials and journalists who have recently visited Britain. So serious is the shortage of milk, there is only enough available to provide five pints a week for children under six years, two and a half pints per week for children under 12, and none for children over 12. Minimum requirements for growing children are said to be four quarts of milk per week, according to health authorities.

There are some 3,000 members in the 87 Kinsmen Clubs across Canada. Nearly 25 per cent. of the peacetime membership of the clubs states Col. A. E. Kirkpatrick, Chairman War Service Board, Navy League of Canada, Ontario Division today.

Insect Damage To Grain In Storage

Can be controlled by running grain slowly through fanning mill on a cold day.

During the last few years there has been an alarming increase in damage by insects to stored grain, says the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The insects chiefly responsible are several species of reddish-brown to nearly black beetles and their whitish larvae or worms. None of the insects are as large as a small grain of wheat and most are much smaller.

An excellent method of control in winter is to run all the grain through a fanning mill when the temperature is below freezing. The grain should be run through the mill at a moderate rate. Once the insects are separated from the grain the cold will quickly make them dormant. They can then be collected and burned.

Traffic Slowed

Traffic on Highways in the district was greatly slowed on Thursday and Friday of last week by a heavy blanket of fog. On Thursday night, however, it was brilliant moonlight and there was no fog whatever. Unusually high temperatures prevailed all last week.

All Employees Affected

Regulations announced by the Price and Wage Control Board last Saturday provide that all employers of labour shall pay a cost-of-living bonus. The order now affects every class of em-fishing, hunting, trapping and domestic service and employees of certain non-profit institutions.

PASTEURIZED MILK NOW BEING DISTRIBUTED HERE
 Pasteurized milk is now being distributed in town by McKilloan's Dairy. An area of between three and four miles around Maxville was declared a pasteurizing area by the Provincial Board of Health in January of last year, instructions being received here by Dr. W. B. MacDiarmid, M.P., Medical Officer of Health. The order went into effect on March 1, 1940, but since Mr McKilloan had the only dairy in town he was given ample time to make alterations on his premises, at the southern entrance to town, to meet the requirements of the Board of Health.

 An egg, weighing six and a quarter ounces, is being shown here by D. N. Dwyer, who claims that it was laid by a seven-months' old Plymouth Rock pullet. The circumferential dimensions of the freak are eight by nine and a half inches. A dead pullet was later found by Mr Dwyer, and it is not known whether or not this hen was the donor of the odd-sized egg.

FIRST SKATING TUESDAY
 The first skating in Jubilee Rink this year was held Tuesday night. It was "free night," being the opening night of the season, and a large crowd of skaters and spectators were on hand. The mild weather did not permit caretaker, George Eppstadt to have the opening night as early as last year, when the first skating of the season was on December 5th.
 Several changes have been made in the rink this year. The entrance has been painted in black and white, and new lights have been placed in the aisle fronting the waiting rooms, office and restaurant. This adds much to the appearance of the building.

The money derived from the draw was used to purchase cigarettes for the overseas lads from Maxville. Thirty cartons, of 300 cigarettes each, were sent to the boys. FRANKLIN—At a local Hospital, on Monday, December 15th, 1941, George Albert Franklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Franklin, Laggan, in his 32nd year. The funeral took place Thursday afternoon to Kirk Hill Presbyterian Church. Interment at Kirk Hill.

son and Radio Operator G. M. White, both of Montreal, and Aircraftman E. L. Burwood, of Dorval. After bringing the big aircraft down safely in the field, which was by no means smooth, Capt. Thompson went to the farm home of Gerard Sabourin to enquire where he had landed. When told, he said, "We completely lost our way and thought we were over New York State." Dorval is about 80 miles east of Maxville.

The base at Dorval was in communication with Town Constable Stephen McLaughlin, and instructed him to place a guard around the aircraft. Local men guarded the plane until repair men and relief crew arrived from Dorval. The bomber's crew who were forced down, spent Saturday night at the King George Hotel, and returned to their base by automobile Sunday afternoon. Following repairs to the motor and radio, and re-fueling, the big bomber took-off at two o'clock Sunday afternoon, to return to its base.

Monday's plane was a Fleet Finch training plane on an instructional flight from the Elementary Flying Training School at St. Eugene, Ont. It was flying in company with another trainer, when suddenly engine trouble developed, and forced the instructor, Richard Fawcett, to make a landing on the farm of Arthur Chariton, about 1 1/2 miles south of here. The forced landing was made at three o'clock. The rudder pin of the plane was damaged slightly in landing. With the instructor as Student Pilot Walter Knobs. They spent the night at the Chariton home until repairs were made to the plane Tuesday morning. The repair crew arrived from St. Eugene Monday night, and spent the night at the King George Hotel, here. The plane was checked by the repair crew and took off for its home shortly before nine o'clock, Tuesday morning.

Our Food Supply

WRITTEN SPECIALLY FOR C.W.N.A. NEWSPAPERS
By JOHN ATKINS, Farmer-Journalist.
No. 9—DOWN TO BRASS TACKS

The time-table of nature does not wait the convenience of men at war. Food production must be planned in time and carried through on time. Now, at the end of 1941, it is late to formulate a plan big enough and sound enough to provide the vital labor for food production in 1942. Tens of thousands of farm workers, farm youths and farmers have flocked from the farms to the forces and to the factories in 1941. Far too many farms have been abandoned. Far too many occupied farms are being carried on by elderly people and children. A vast acreage of tillable land is idle or in grass because there is no labor to make it more productive. Idle land cannot be put into full production in less than two years, and then only with ample capital, labor and equipment. The problem now is to get the utmost production out of the best land by finding labor to utilize all the available equipment. Where is labor available? A good deal of it could be drawn from the forces. Farm boys and boys from the districts first, they will be ready for use on good nearby land that will produce the most food per hour of work. The time to begin repairing is now. The men in the mechanized forces can be given part of their training on tractor motors. They can be taught the principles of mechanics while repairing farm equipment. They can be billeted in homes, often their own. Along with local mechanics who are unfit for service, and handymen from the farms, they can put much of the available farm equipment in condition for spring work. When the equipment is in shape, the men from the forces can be given training in the operation of power equipment on the farms. They can be given leave as needed at the peaks of farm work, in seeding and harvest, and to do the plowing in the fall.

With the help of men who are physically fit and mechanically skilled, the older farm men, women and children, who are now struggling with work beyond their strength, could care for the stock and poultry, milk cows, do the gardening and keep the farms going. Such a plan should be added to all other plans for the supply of farm labor. It is not original. It is the product of contacts with many people who are thinking hard about food for 1942—people in the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, in the government services, editors, and people on the farms and in the towns. It should require the co-operation of all governments, farm organizations, implement companies, garages and repair shops. It should be worked out and given effect by a board created for the purpose by the Dominion Government.

Prayer was repeated in unison. The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Eileen Cameron, after which Rev. R. W. Ellis led in prayer. Eddie Carter then took charge for the balance of the evening's meeting, which opened with Hymn 729. Miss Edna Ellis read the second part of the story, "The other wise man," and Miss Gwen Fraser read, "What Christmas Means," after which Hymn 177 was sung. "Keeping Christmas," was presented as a reading by Eddie Carter, and following this, Rev. R. W. Ellis gave a blackboard talk, in which he drew the many decorations which are seen on Christmas cards. The members then had to draw a Christmas card, in colors. The winner of this contest was Miss Edna Ellis. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting.

CHAPTER XXV ISOBEL'S ORDEAL

Within an hour of reading the news of Leonard Mason's arrest, Peggy was knocking at the door of her sister's flat. Isobel opened. She looked suspiciously at Peggy.

"Who are you, please—and what do you want?" she echoed. It was a shock to Peggy to find that her own sister did not recognize her.

"It was bound to come," said Isobel later, after a storm of tears. "I begged him to go back to his old business, but he wouldn't, and now—" Another sob shook her.

"And now," said Peggy, "we have to make the best of a bad job. What do you want to do, Isobel—to leave him?" Isobel stiffened.

"No, no! He's my husband. He has always been good to me. I love him. I'll manage somehow. You'd better go away, Peggy. It was good of you to come, but you can't do anything."

Peggy's answer was to kiss her sister again. Isobel had had a bitter lesson, but she had taken it to heart.

"I can do quite a lot—at least, I can try," said Peggy with determination.

"You had no idea what he was when you married him, Isobel?" said Peggy.

when her sister became normal again and showed a desire to talk of her husband.

"Of course not. I believed he was a motor salesman—he was once. Then he got into trouble over a stolen car. I don't know much about it, but I don't think it was his fault. But he lost his job. Somehow, he fell in with a bad lot." Again she stopped and drew a long breath. "Peggy, I've done all I knew to make him stop. But all he says is that he can't see me starve. I'm afraid the police have a great deal against him, but he isn't really bad," she ended earnestly.

"I'm sure he isn't," Peggy said, comfortingly, "but now we have to face facts." And thus Peggy steered the talk to helpful conclusions.

Peggy's own eyes were misty as she found her way down into the street—but they were happy tears. Isobel, whom she had lost, was found—she had a sister again.

At Sloane St. she rang up Mr. Meakin and made an appointment.

She found the old lawyer in his first floor office, a beautiful room with fine oak beams. He chaffed her about her changed appearance, but they soon came to business, and Peggy told the whole story.

"I read the case," said Mr. Meakin. "There's not the faintest hope of getting Mason off, but counsel might get a sentence of three years instead of five. I'll instruct young Gifford. His fee will not be extortionate. Can you run to five guineas, Peggy?"

"Of course. And you are kind," he smiled.

"Tell me about yourself, Peggy."

It was a relief to become Peggy Garland for a while, to talk without having to think of every word you said—above all to get news of John Arkwright. Peggy told Mr. Meakin of the reappearance of Edgar and, for the first time since she had known him, saw her old friends really angry. "The man is hopeless," he said sternly. Of course he is looking for a rich wife and, if he finds one, her money will go down the sink with the rest."

CHAPTER XXVI ALPINE PROPOSAL

"To-day it's snowing," Peggy wrote to Olive from Pontresina. "A thin fine powder resembling frozen sand, not a bit like the big soft flakes we get at home. But this is the first snowy day since we came. Most of the time there has been glorious sunshine and hard frost. Althea is enjoying it and I never felt more fit."

"Alan is a brick and has been kindness itself to us both. My chief trouble is that he and Althea, though excellent friends, don't fall for one another. At present I spend my time, collecting any men who seem nice, to introduce her to her. I have become quite shameless!"

She posted her note, and in their sitting-room, found Althea reading a letter. Althea looked up and Peggy saw at once that she was excited.

"I've just heard from Edgar Trelawney, Ruth. He says he's coming here. He'll arrive on Saturday."

The shock was so great that Peggy could not help showing it.

"What's the matter?" Althea demanded and for once her tone was quite tart. Peggy hesitated and Althea went on. "You don't like him, Ruth?"

"I'm not going to lie to you, Althea. I don't."

"Why not? You don't know anything about him."

"I do. Miss Clyde told me that he had been mixed up with that Mrs. Jardine and you know as well as I what her reputation is."

Althea frowned.

"That's first gossip."

"It's true, Althea. I've seen them together. And Mrs. Jardine gives me cold chills!"

"I like Edgar Trelawney," Althea retorted. "He has always been nice to me. When he comes I shall ask him about Mrs. Jardine."

"You don't expect him to tell you the truth, do you?" said Peggy. Althea flared up.

"Why not? Just because you don't happen to like him you believe any nasty story you hear about him. I never dreamed you could be so unfair."

Peggy was silent. She simply did not dare to speak. If she once started she felt she might not be able to stop. She turned and went out of the room and did not see Althea again till lunch, at which they scarcely spoke.

She had an appointment to go skiing with Alan and soon the two were zig-zagging steadily up the long slopes among the pine trees. The sun had come out and the white glare was dazzling, yet very beautiful.

They were far up the valley when Alan pulled up at the head of a steep slope. Close above them was an enormous rock. Alan pointed to it.

"The Monk's Head," he said. Peggy looked. The resemblance was perfect, but terrible.

"Let's get away," Peggy said. "I can't bear the sight of it. I feel it will bring me bad luck." Alan nodded.

"I was going to turn, anyhow. Clouds are forming again over the Sella. There'll be more snow. But there's no hurry. Tell me what's the trouble with Althea."

"She has heard from Edgar Trelawney. He will be here on Saturday."

Alan swore. "That blighter coming. Then I'm going home." He turned sharply to Peggy, and the lock on his face startled her.

"Ruth," he said sharply. "You can't stay, either. Listen! Leave Althea. Come with me. Marry me. I've been in love with you ever since we first met."

The shock was so great it left Peggy speechless. Alan went on: "I have some money. I'll be good to you, Ruth. I—" She held up her hand. "I can't, Alan." Flushed and distressed, she looked so lovely that Alan flung out his arms. She moved away.

"I can't, Alan," she repeated. "I like you very much. You've been the best of friends, but—"

"There's someone else," said Alan. Peggy bowed her head.

"There is. Oh, Alan, I'm so sorry." Alan braced himself.

"It's all right, my dear. It's not your fault. You're no flirt—never were."

He saw the tears in her eyes. "Don't be sad. I'll help you anyway I can."

"You are the kindest man, Alan," Peggy said brokenly. The tears were on her cheeks. "If I'd only known. But I never dreamed you were serious—I—I hoped you were fond of Althea."

Alan answered with a harsh laugh. "I didn't care for her. She's in love with this fellow, Trelawney, and I don't know what can be done about it. He's after her for her money. The fellow couldn't love anyone but himself."

He glanced round. "Those clouds are rising fast. We'd better shove along if we don't want to be caught. We're a long way from the hotel."

The sunlight had gone, the sky was grey again and presently the air became misty with tiny ice particles. Alan quickened his pace. He did not speak but Peggy had a feeling that he was anxious. The mist thickened. The flakes grew thicker; they stung her cheeks. The horizon drew in. A tree loomed ahead, dim in the white fog.

Alan kept to the right, but Peggy who had fallen a little behind, swung left. She found herself dropping into a hollow which she had not seen.

Instead of letting herself go, she tried to swerve. The point of her right ski drove deep into the snow and over she went. An agonizing pain shot through her right ankle and she lay helpless, half buried, at the bottom of the hollow.

In a moment Alan was bending over her.

"Hurt, Ruth?" he asked quickly.

"My right ankle," Peggy replied faintly. Very quickly he had her skis off. He laid them together and lifted her upon them. Gentle as he was, the movement brought a little gasp from her lips.

"Is it broken?" Alan asked, anxiously.

"I don't know. I don't think so. Oh, Alan, I am sorry."

"Don't worry. There's a patrol not far away. We passed the post on the way up. I'll find him. But I'll have to leave you a few minutes. Do you mind?"

"Of course not. Go ahead. I shall be all right."

He hurried off and almost at once vanished in the thickly falling snow. Peggy lay very still. The pain was nothing to the fear and dismay she felt.

She began to wonder what would happen if Alan failed to find the patrol, or if he himself lost his way. In this temperature she would not last long.

A shout came faintly, muffled by the snow. Peggy shouted back. Two figures loomed through the white fog. They were Alan and a sturdy young Swiss. The latter was pulling a hand sledge. Alan was breathing hard.

"I couldn't find him," he panted. "Are you frozen, Ruth?"

"Not yet," said Peggy forcing a smile. They lifted her on to the sledge and wrapped her in a warm rug. The patrol picked up a rope attached to the front of the sledge, Alan took the handles at the back, and they started for the hotel. An hour later Peggy was in bed, and the doctor was examining her ankle.

"No bones broken," he said, "but a severe sprain. You will not be able to put your foot to the ground for at least two weeks."

He gave her an opiate. But for that Peggy would have had little sleep that night.

CHAPTER XXVII THE SCALE TURNS

Althea was kindness itself. Even after Edgar came she still spent much time in Peggy's room. Nothing that money could do for Peggy was left undone.

Alan stayed until the following Tuesday; then he had a violent row with Edgar. After that there was nothing for it but to go. Before he left he came to say good-bye to Peggy.

"I'm not going to apologize," he said. "The fellow asked for it. All the same, it was a bad joss. He's playing the injured innocent, and Althea is comforting him. It's a rotten world, Ruth."

"Not with people like you in it," Peggy said. "I only wish you'd knocked his head off. Tell me, Alan, how are things between him and Althea? She knows I don't like him and never talks about him."

"Bad; you may expect the engagement to be announced any day."

Peggy was silent, but the look on her face wrung Alan's heart.

"Don't look like that, Ruth," he said sharply. "I can't stick it. Anyhow, there's no need for you to be so miserable. This man you speak of—why don't you marry him?"

"I can't!" said Peggy, in a small voice.

"What! Is he married already?"

No! Alan frowned.

"You mean he doesn't know?"

"He knows," said Peggy. "He'd marry me to-morrow if I'd let him."

Alan flung up his hands.

"You're crazy, Ruth!"

"Near it!" Peggy said, grimly. "It's no good, Alan. I can't explain. But when I can, you're the first person I'll tell."

Alan shook his head.

"Ruth, I'm fonder of you than you know. If there's any blessed thing I can do for you, you've only to tell me." Tears stood in Peggy's eyes.

"You're a dear, Alan. But there's not a thing you can do. You'd better go now—I'm going to cry!" He bent and kissed her on the cheek.

"Good-bye, Ruth! You know where to find me. I'll come any time you want me." He turned and went quickly out of the room.

He was a true prophet. That same evening Althea came to see Peggy, and her face was so lit up, her eyes so bright, that Peggy's heart sank.

"Ruth," said Althea, eagerly. "He's told me everything. He admitted he was fond of Mrs. Jardine. Then quite by chance he found that she was not a widow. Her husband was still alive. He asked her straight out if this was true, and she turned on him and demanded to know why he had been spying on her. She was so violent that he left her. He told me that the scene killed all his feeling for her. Then he met me, and he says I attracted him at once. Now he has asked me to marry him, and—oh, Ruth I am so happy!"

Peggy tried to speak but no words would come. She sat, propped with pillows, gazing up at Althea with eyes full of misery.

"Aren't you going to congratulate me?" Althea asked.

"I can't. Oh, I can't!" Peggy answered.

"But Ruth?" Althea questioned. If she had been angry it would have been easier for Peggy. As it was she was at her wits' ends how to answer.

"I can't make out why you are so prejudiced against Edgar," Althea went on. "You don't know him. You have hardly spoken to him. It's all very strange to me." She paused a moment but, as Peggy did not speak, went on, "Edgar has faults. Even I can see that. But I love him, Ruth, and I'm going to marry him. Nothing can change that."

It was true. Peggy saw it and knew at once that nothing she could say would have any effect. When a weak but obstinate woman like Althea takes the bit between her teeth there is no turning her.

A moment earlier Peggy had been on the point of blurting out the whole story. She would have sacrificed herself to save Althea. Now she realized that it was useless. The tale of Chesham's death she could not tell, though the fact of his being missing might reveal itself any day. Apart from that all she could say was that Edgar was extravagant and selfish.

"You have been very good to me, Althea, and I would do anything to see you happy, but I can't feel that you will be happy with Edgar Trelawney. Now you won't be needing me any longer so—" Althea broke in.

"What nonsense! I could not dream of parting with you."

"And yet I must go," Peggy insisted. "Edgar Trelawney would soon want to get rid of me even if you did not."

"Listen, Ruth! He and I plan to go on a six months' cruise. Then we shall go to this place in Devonshire to live. I am sending most of my staff there, for Edgar, who seems to have been very extravagant, has got rid of his mother's servants."

"I want you to go down there, to Coombe Royal—that's the name of the place—and get everything ready. You will have plenty of time and plenty of help and I shall of course give you a free hand."

Peggy drew a long breath. To be down at Coombe Royal again in her beloved Devonshire; to be close to John Arkwright! Then the shield turned. No, the risk was impossible; she would be recognized. She shook her head.

"It only means putting off the evil day. Better to make the break at once."

"There's not going to be any break," said Althea with unusual firmness. "But now you are tired and excited so I'm not going to let you talk any more to-night. Goodnight, my dear."

Peggy had no sleeping draught to help her that night. She lay and tossed miserably but always coming to a blind end. Towards morning she dozed and waked to find a maid with her dainty breakfast.

There was a letter on the tray.

"Peggy, dear," Isobel wrote. "The judge has given him five years. The judge said it ought to have been seven. I'm very miserable, Peggy and longing to see you . . ."

That letter turned the scale. Whatever happened, Isobel should not go short. When Althea came up an hour later Peggy told her that she would go to Coombe Royal. Althea's face lit up. She scooped and kissed Peggy.

"My dear, I knew you'd be sensible," she said.

TWENTY YEARS AGO Friday, Dec. 16, 1921

Ontario remains Conservative as a result of last Monday's Provincial election but Glengarry left the Conservative fold and elected Mr. Hugh Munro the Liberal standard-bearer. As was expected Premier Whitney will have a large majority in the House, but the Liberals did make some gains and can be expected to provide real opposition next time. The fight in Glengarry was a cleanest in many years and the swing to Mr. Munro was quite decided. Col. Robertson, Conservative, lost by a margin of 268 votes.—"Cause of death, unknown," is the verdict of a Coroner's jury investigating the finding of a human skeleton in a third Lochiel swamp recently. The remains have been almost certainly identified as those of Miss Catherine Boush of Montreal, whose relatives at one time lived in the vicinity. Finding of a man's silver watch at the scene has added another angle but efforts of the Elgin Co. to trace the watch ended in Toronto. All evidence has been forwarded to Crown Attorney Dingwall in Cornwall.—Mr. H. Deagle, Ottawa St., this week received a handsome new piano, the sale being made by Prof. Mulhern.—There is a fuel famine at the Power House and as a result the electric light is shut off when the "powers that be" so decided each evening. Sometimes it is 11 o'clock, more often 10 o'clock.—Rev. Donald Stewart was in Lancaster yesterday, assisting at the induction of Rev. H. O. Sutherland into the pastorate of Knox Church.—Mr. J. W. Crewson, I.P.S., recently received a sum of money from the Strathcona Trust Fund for the Schools in his inspectorate to be expended as first prizes in Physical Training, Military Drill and Rifle Shooting. Owing to lack of notice no competitions can be held this fall.

On the evening of Friday, November 28th, a number of friends and neighbors gathered at the school building, S.S. No. 24 Kenyon, to show their affectionate regard for Roderick and Annie Morrison, prior to their departure during the course of the evening, pleasantly spent by all, a short programme was carried out, with Malcolm Grant as chairman. The appended address was read by Francis MacLeod while Lloyd MacLeod presented a well filled purse to Mr. Morrison, and Miss Christina Dashney in like manner to Miss Morrison. Several short addresses followed, the several speakers voicing the high esteem in which Mr. and Miss Morrison are held.

THE ADDRESS
To Roderick and Annie Morrison:— Knowing that you are about to leave our community, we your neighbors and friends have gathered here tonight, to express our regret at your departure. Since childhood you have endeared yourselves to each and everyone of us. We found you faithful companions and trustworthy friends, ever ready to give a helping hand in various occupations which required the cooperation of the community in their execution. We assure you that your spirit of good fellowship has not been in vain but very much appreciated. You will be missed in our neighborhood but we trust to see you often among us.

As a token of our appreciation of the example you have been to us we ask you to accept this small gift, not merely for its intrinsic value but the good will that characterized the minds of the donors. We feel that we are expressing the sentiments of this community when we wish you health, happiness and prosperity in the future which lies before you.

Signed on behalf of your neighbors and well wishers,

Lloyd MacLeod
Francis MacLeod
Malcolm Grant.

MacLeod of Toronto, Ont., Mrs. D. Hartrick and Mrs. K. Hartrick, both of Dunvegan, Ont., and Mandy in Montreal and one brother in Regina, Angus Cameron.

The pallbearers who were all pioneers of Edwards School District, were as follows: E. Josvanger, O. P. Holland, J. Edwards, F. Lake, E. Frederick and M. E. Young.

The sympathy of the whole district is extended to his much loved wife, known to many as "Ma Cameron," and to all the members of the family.

The obituary is reprinted from the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix, as is the following account of the celebration of the 40th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Cameron, held in August of this year.

MR. AND MRS. CAMERON MARKED 40 YEARS

FINDLATER.—When Mr. and Mrs. John R. Cameron celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary, more than 200 people from the district, mainly pioneers, gathered in the village to honor them. There was a huge bonfire on the village green and the large company were treated to a wiener roast. E. S. Donaldson, M.L.A., presided. The chairman and L. W. Jones addressed the gathering; Mrs. O. Holland, Mrs. T. Anfulson and Miss M. MacKay gave readings, and Fred Lake led in community singing. On behalf of the community, J. Coldbert presented Mr. and Mrs. Cameron with a purse of money, and Mrs. Cameron also received bouquets of gladioli, carnations, sweet peas and fern.

Mr. Cameron married Jessie E. Chisholm in 1901 at Dunvegan, Glengarry County, Ont., and brought his bride to settle at Arcola, Sask., where they managed the farm of the late J. D. Stewart, Liberal member for Cannington Constituency. After seven years they came to the Findlater district to homestead. They farmed there for 20 years, then in 1928 moved into the village.

Mr. Cameron was councillor of R.M. of Dufferin for eight years and trustee of Edwards School District for nearly 20 years. He had to give up all public work on account of ill health.

Mrs. Cameron is village secretary-treasurer, and had the unique experience of being for some time the only woman administrator of village affairs in the Province. The councillors resigned and the secretary was empowered by the minister of municipal affairs to carry on the work. She also holds the office of secretary of the rural telephone company, pres. of the Red Cross; is a commissioner of oaths and a newspaper correspondent. Mrs. Cameron was one of the first directors of the Egg and Poultry Pool and has served as director of the Canadian Poultry Pool.
