

Glengarry Stays Liberal Giving Dr. MacDiarmid Increased Majority

Plurality Is 1968 Over Nearest Opponent, L. Devaux, As Heavy Vote Recorded—C.C.F. Candidate Gets But 287 Ballots.

Glengarry remained true to its Liberal tradition in Monday's Federal election when Dr. William Burton MacDiarmid of Maxville was re-elected to represent this riding at Ottawa. The Liberal candidate scored a decided victory, increasing his majority over that gained in 1940. Unofficial returns from the civilian vote gave MacDiarmid a majority of 1968 over his nearest opponent, Lionel Devaux, Progressive Conservative. In 1940 his plurality was 1757.

The unofficial vote was as follows: MacDiarmid, Liberal, 4751; Devaux, Progressive Conservative, 2783; Dewar, C.C.F., 287.

Glengarrians went to the polls in greater numbers on Monday than turned out for last week's Provincial voting and the vote was as well considerably heavier than that recorded in the Dominion election of 1940. The tabulation of Monday's balloting shows a total of 7821 votes cast, an increase of 44 over the 7777 recorded in Glengarry proper a week ago. The vote in 1940 totalled 7367.

A study of the vote by polls in an adjoining column shows that the Liberal plurality came from all seven municipalities, and Progressive Conservative majorities were recorded in only five polls, with a tie vote for both parties in Poll 1 of Lancaster township. The C.C.F. vote reached two figures in only 14 of 43 polls and Mr. Dewar's highest vote was 22 in Alexandria's south poll. Dr. MacDiarmid's strongest vote was recorded in his native Maxville, while Martintown gave Mr. Devaux his biggest majority, 77.

Rain Marred Reception of Returns
A driving rainstorm which set in at 7 o'clock, just as first returns from the Maritimes started coming in over the radio, marred the reception of reports from the riding and the country generally at the News Office bulletin boards, but a large crowd braved the elements until a late hour to follow progress of the voting westward across the country. The rain continued intermittently throughout the evening but a crowd of over 300 stayed on to watch the boards and hear the brief addresses of the candidates.

Glengarry county returns were received at the office of the Returning Officer, J. J. Morris, and simultaneously by Mr. Clarence Ostrom, at the local Bell Telephone exchange. From there they were quickly put up on the boards and shortly before 8 o'clock, when returns from 32 polls gave Dr. MacDiarmid a 1500-vote plurality, Mr. Lionel Devaux spoke over the loud-speaker system, extending congratulations to the winning candidate and wishing him well at Ottawa. He was followed by CPO John A. Dewar, C.C.F. candidate, who also extended his congratulations and expressed his thanks to those who had supported the C.C.F. program.

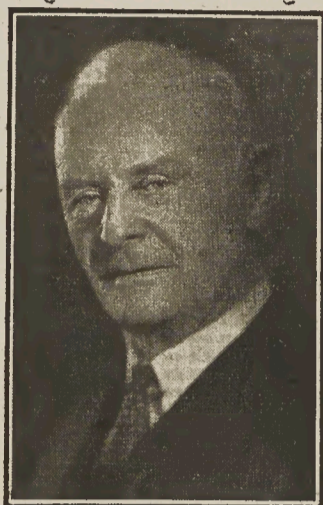

Dr. MacDiarmid reached Alexandria from his home at Maxville, at 8:30 p.m. and he was greeted warmly by the crowd as he made a brief address, thanking his many supporters and active workers and opponents for their expressions of goodwill. He repeated his campaign declaration that he would be ready to assist any resident of Glengarry irrespective of race, creed or politics.

Returns from all sections of the riding came in with despatch and the complete results for the county had been tabulated shortly after 8 o'clock—a much better record than had been made in the previous Monday's Provincial voting. To Clifford Campbell, D.R.O. at Dalketh, went the honour of first reporting poll results, at 6:21 less than half hour after the closing of the poll. His return was followed closely by Altonie Menard and J. Charles Stuart of Glen Robertson, who had the returns from their large double poll into Alexandria, in fine time.

Died Suddenly While At Cards

Stricken with a heart attack while enjoying a game of cards with members of her family at 9:30 o'clock, Sunday evening, Henriette Sauve, wife of Alfred (Fred) Fontaine, died suddenly at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Phyllis Lalonde, Bishop street south, within a few minutes. The news of her passing came as a shock to family and friends and there were many expressions of regret and sympathy. She was 72 years old.

Rt. Rev. Msgr. Emile Secours, parish priest, and Dr. M. Markson were called but death had ensued before they could arrive.

The late Mrs. Fontaine was born at River Beaudette, Que., and with her husband and family came to Alexandria in 1921. A fine type of womanhood and a devoted and loving mother, she will be sorely missed in the family circle as well as by many friends. In addition to her husband she leaves to mourn her passing: three sons and seven daughters: Louis Fontaine, Whitney, Ont.; Joseph and Percy Fontaine of Alexandria; Mrs. Hilda Clarke of Cornwall; Mrs. Jack McKay of Montreal; Mrs. Alex. Lauzon, Mrs. Josephat Lapierre, Mrs. Phyllis Lalonde, Mrs. Jos. Dapratto and Mrs. Rose Montroy, all of Alexandria.

Attended by many relatives and friends, the funeral was held from her late home, Bishop street south, at 9 o'clock, Thursday morning, to Sacred Heart Church. Rt. Rev. Msgr. Emile Secours, P.P., sang the Funeral Mass and interment was in Sacred Heart cemetery.

Football Notes

The Glengarry Football League got under way last week when Pine Grove under way last week when Pine Grove Glengarry Football Champions, was held to a scoreless tie by the young Greenfield entry on the latter's home grounds.

Tuesday of this week, Dunvegan battled the champions to another scoreless draw at Pine Grove. For this game, the weather was ideal, and a large and enthusiastic crowd from all the surrounding districts was in attendance. It showed how the people of the North like their football, and how ready they are to back up their boys. The game was very interesting and keenly contested. Former stars like John MacMaster, Willie MacGillivray, Wallace MacLeod for Pine Grove and Jimmie Campbell, Bud McKinnon and Willie MacLeod for Dunvegan, showed that they had lost little of their former ability at the game, while many of the younger players showed great promise. The backs of both teams were too strong and experienced for the young and little organized forward lines. The teams have two smart goalers—both Campbell by name. It is worthy of note that the two Piche brothers resumed their football with their former smartness after having taken part in a bigger game in Europe for three years and where they were wounded.

On Friday, Greenfield plays at Dunvegan and on Monday next, Greenfield plays at Pine Grove. Make it a point to attend these games.

Among Arrivals Home From Overseas

P.O. DOUE THAUVEITE of the R.C.A.F. who arrived at his home here, last week end, from overseas where he had been serving since November, 1943. His mother, Mrs. L. Thauvette, St. Paul street, his sister and brother motored to Lachine, Que., Sunday, to meet him.

Flying Officer Thauvette crossed on the French liner "Pasteur" and most of those on board were ex-prisoners of war. He had many interesting chats with them and sympathized with the families of those servicemen who have been over there for 4 or 5 years.

Pte Alex. Cardinal Home

Wounded in action while serving with the North Shore New Brunswick Regiment in Germany during April, 1945, Pte. Alex. Cardinal of Alexandria, arrived home, Sunday and is being warmly welcomed. Pte. Cardinal will enjoy a 30-day leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cardinal, and his wife, the former Cassie McCuaig, Mrs. Cardinal and her sister, Miss Hattie McCuaig, were in Montreal to meet him.

Pte. Cardinal was wounded in the elbow and has undergone three operations, with two more pending.

Five Years Overseas

Tpr. Clifford Snyder of Alexandria, arrived home, Saturday, after nearly five years' service in England, Italy and Western Europe, and he is receiving a warm welcome from his many friends. A son of Mr. Alex. Snyder, the young trooper served with the Fifth Canadian Armoured Division, enlisting in July 1940 and going overseas one month later.

Tpr. Snyder saw most of his fighting in Italy but reached Western Europe in time to help clean up the last resistance there. He liked his taste of Europe very much and found both climate and people preferable to Italy. After 30-days' leave he will report at M.D. 4, Montreal, for further duty.

Home After Four Years As P.O.W.

Alexandria friends were delighted on Monday to welcome home John J. (Jack) McLaughlin of the Merchant Marine, who had been for four years a prisoner-of-war in Germany. Jack arrived in Halifax on Friday, June 8th, aboard the Dutch troop ship "Volendam" and reached his home in Martintown, Sunday evening. He is a son of Mrs. Geo. P. McLaughlin and the late Mr. McLaughlin of Alexandria.

With Jack was his brother, Flight Lieut. Robert McLaughlin of the R.C.A.F. who also was warmly welcomed. Robert is home after three years' service in Burma, Italy, Africa and Britain.

During his four years' captivity, Jack McLaughlin kept a day-to-day record of events and he has an interesting story to tell of his adventures since joining the Merchant Marine in June 1940. He was serving on the oil tanker "M.V. Canadotte" en route from Freetown, South Africa, to South America, when, on March 25th, 1941, his ship was captured by a German raider. They had been followed throughout the previous night and at 7:30 in the morning the raider bracketed their ship with shellfire. The tanker was abandoned and the crew picked up by motor launches from the German raider. Jack was one of a prize crew put back on board to run the ship into a French port of Bordeaux and he states they received very good treatment from their captors.

As a youth he went to Glen Robertson when his father was named Postmaster at that point, and in his late teens he went to Montreal where for many years he was employed as a salesman with the Jas. Clear Liberal Majority In House Depends On Vote Of Servicemen

King Government Now Has 117 Liberals Elected But Service Vote Might Alter Results In 65 Ridings

Named Senior R.C. Chaplain 3rd Division

A.H. MAJOR DONALD A. KERR, who has been named Senior (R.C.) Chaplain of the Third Canadian Division, overseas. Major Kerr, a native of Alexandria and a member of the diocesan clergy at the time of appointment as Chaplain, in July 1940 is a son of Mrs. James Kerr of Ottawa, formerly of Alexandria.

In a letter, written on June 4th, and received by his mother on Saturday, Major Kerr refers to the Solemn Mass of Requiem he sang for dead comrades of the Ninth Infantry Brigade, his last act before leaving the Brigade to assume his new duties at Division H.Q.

The church at Ellersham, Holland, which seats 1900, was crowded with civilians and some 550 Catholic members of the 9th Brigade which is comprised of the S.D. & G. Highlanders, the North Nova Scotia Highlanders and the Highland Light Infantry of Galt, Ont. Assisting Major Kerr at the Mass were Hon. Captains Campbell and Steele, as deacon and sub-deacon. Cpl. John Angus McDonald of Cornwall, was Master of Ceremonies; Pte. Claude Lalonde (son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lalonde, Alexandria), of the S.D. & G. Highlanders, was Incense Bearer; two boys from the H.L.I. were candlebearers and one from the N.N.S. carried the Holy water. The massed Pipe Band of the 9th Brigade attended and a fine Dutch choir sang the Mass.

Major Kerr adds that he much regrets leaving his boys of the 9th Brigade whom he refers to as "the finest in the world."

It is noteworthy that Major Kerr, while serving with the Highland Brigade was the first Catholic priest to cross the Rhine. He and two doctors crossed at midnight, March 24th, in the opening phase of the last big push, and set up a casualty clearing post in an abandoned stable. In writing some time ago to his mother, he stated the crossing was "uneventful, in fact tame."

1946 Valley Seed Fair To Be Here

At the Annual Meeting of the Ottawa Valley Seed Growers' Association, held in the Kemptville Agricultural School, June 12th, the invitation of the Glengarry Crop Improvement Association to hold the annual Ottawa Valley Seed Fair in Glengarry in 1946 was unanimously accepted. This fair is an event of long-standing, and takes in counties in Eastern Ontario as far North as Renfrew, and as far West as Leeds County. The last time this Fair was held in Glengarry was in 1937.

It is expected that the Fair will be in Alexandria, and in all probability at the Armouries.

In the list of officers, J. K. Nesbitt of Britannia Heights was elected President in the coming year, and W. M. Crowsley continues Secretary. J. M. Arkin-stall of Dunvegan is director for Glengarry County on this Association, and this year is also on the executive committee.

Those present at the meeting from Glengarry included: J. M. Arkin-stall, Dunvegan; Robert MacKay, Maxville; and R. C. Bennett, Alexandria.

OTTAWA, June 12—Faced by an opposition which gained strength in a more complete tabulation of yesterday's election results, the position of Canada's Liberal Government tonight hinged directly on the service vote expected to be announced June 20. A total of 65 seats might be affected.

With results still coming in from scattered polling stations, Prime Minister Mackenzie King's Administration tonight held 117 seats on the basis of the civilian vote, one less than it was credited with last night.

In addition Mr. King had eight Independent Liberals on whom he might be able to depend for support, while an Independent, Bona Arseneault of Quebec, announced today his intention to back the Liberal Government. This added up to a total of 126 in the 245-member house.

Further Prog. Con Gain
The Progressive Conservative official Opposition, headed by John Bracken, had on the other hand, increased its strength from 62 members reported last night to 66 late today, and this was supplemented by one Independent Progressive Conservative.

C.C.F. strength stood at 26, but was supplemented today by the election of an independent C.C.F. member. Two seats still were in doubt—Athabaska, where a Liberal was leading, and North Battleford, where the C.C.F. candidate was in front.

But over these figures hung the uncertainty of the vote by some 750,000 men and women in the services. On the assumption that a candidate whose lead was seven per cent or less might be overtaken as a result of the service vote, there were 65 seats in doubt. Of these, 29 now are attributed to Liberal candidates, 20 to Progressive Conservatives, nine to C.C.F. and seven to others.

The Searchlight

BY SPECTATOR

Ottawa, June 13th.—These are very happy days for many homes in Canada as they welcome back wounded men of the forces and those who spent years of the war behind the wires of German prison camps. The hospital ship Letitia arrives in a day or two, the British ship Llandovery Castle a few days later followed by the Lady Nelson. It was recently announced that all wounded and otherwise invalided men who could be moved would be back by the end of July and this seems certain. If it had not been for advancement of medical and surgical science and the discovery of remedies like penicillin it is highly probable that many of those now reaching Canadian shores and assured of a reasonably useful and happy life in the days of peace would never have returned. We should all be deeply grateful that the Canadian medical men in the armed forces have kept abreast of all scientific advances. There are no better medical officers than the Canadians. Another thing for which the hearts of many Canadians feel gratitude is that in most cases at least the Germans abided by the Geneva Conventions in their treatment of prisoners and that the prisoners got their Red Cross parcels, although sometimes delayed.

Migration Back Home

The great migration of our boys from Europe is on and gathering momentum. Some armmen are coming back in bombers, some by sea with men of the Canadian army, and sailors are arriving in the warships of the Royal Canadian Navy. Some are coming for demobilization, some to carry on, after leave to be spent with their families and friends, in the war in the Pacific. There are warships congregating in Halifax and other ports for refitting before they set out for the Orient. These are part of that gallant company of 254 Canadian escort ships which piloted over 25,000 vessels carrying over 180,000,000 ton of cargo from North American ports to Europe during the war, shepherding their flocks across treacherous waters infested by enemy U boats.

Needs for Strong Navy and Air Force

It is certainly to be hoped that with the knowledge of the vital importance of the work done by the Canadian navy in the fight for freedom, the navy will not be allowed to sink to anything like the helpless condition it was in at the beginning of the war when it had only six destroyers. It will have 60 ships taking part in the Pacific war, including 2 aircraft carriers and two cruisers. Many believe that this should be the minimum strength for the time of peace. The Pacific fleet is "balanced" in accord with the needs of modern naval warfare, including as it does the fleet air arm. Canada as a leading "Middle" power will have its obligations under the charter of collective security, even if such obligations are not definitely prescribed and a reasonably strong navy will have to be in the background.

The part played by the Royal Canadian Air Force also demands that it be not allowed to vanish. The whole story of the war particularly in its latter stages has shown so clearly what superiority in air power means that Canadians are not likely to forget the part played by Canada in the air. As everyone knows captured German generals ascribed their country's downfall primarily to the relentless persistent bombing of the war plants and their communication systems. The allies weren't able to estimate the havoc that their planes had wrought until their armies invaded the continent. Then the story was rapidly unfolded. The scene of desolation which was Berlin, over which hangs "an atmosphere of death and decay" is just one picture—though a striking one because it was the control centre of Nazidom—of what an unremitting torrent of bombs will do. Now the scourge is coming to the cities of Japan. We know from our own side what happened to London and other English cities, and we also know, as a sign of what may happen in another war, that Germans had planned and were manufacturing four engine jet-propelled bombers that were going to be sent to America. To fulfill its obligations in plans for joint security against aggression Canada is certain to maintain a substantial nucleus or a strong air force. Only in this way can it hope to help to guarantee a lasting peace.

Sgmn. W. T. Barton Cables Wife

Sgmn "Bill" Barton who cabled his wife, who resides at 23 William street, Cornwall, conveying congratulations and best wishes on the second anniversary of their marriage, June 5. The cable came from Germany, where Sgmn Barton has been on service since February last.

Newmarket, Ont., on July 30, 1940, and was stationed at Barrieffield and Vimy Barracks, Kingston, taking a course as wireless operator. He came to Cornwall and continued an electrical course at the C.C.V.S. for 2 1/2 months, after which he returned to Kingston to take a technical course at Barrieffield and Vimy Barracks.

He left for overseas with the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals in March, 1944 since which time he has served in England, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany, being in the latter country since February last, located near Oldenburg.

Mrs Barton has received souvenirs of various kinds from her husband from all the countries in which he has seen service. Naturally, she prizes these gifts very highly.

Sportsmen's Tax Fund Used for Wildlife Aid

Only about one gunner in a hundred can tell you what has happened to the $9,000,000 that has been collected from sportsmen through the federal excise tax on ammunition and sporting arms.

Every dime of it has been earmarked for conservation and propagation since the Pittman-Robertson act was passed in 1937. The job that is being done for conservation with this fund represents the most important forward step in conservation since the Migratory Bird Treaty act of 1918.

Wildlife conservation and restoration in the United States is bound to continue during the war in spite of some curtailment of state funds due to the failure of hunters to purchase hunting licenses. From two to three million dollars should be available annually under the terms of the Pittman-Robertson act of 1937. Every penny of it is earmarked for distribution to 46 of the 48 states so further the Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration program. This is money that has been raised by a 10 per cent tax on the purchase price of sporting arms and ammunition and there is a considerable balance on hand to tide over the period while consumer interest in sporting weapons, shells and cartridges is impaired by war interests, activities and restrictions.

Tens of thousands of acres now belong to the public that would otherwise be in private hands and legally closed to hunters were it not for his program.

Army Tries Out Latest Plastic Training Plane

The Fairchild AT-13, two-engine crew trainer built entirely of Duralumin, except for certain members supporting the bombing, machine gun, camera and other equipment, has been successfully test flown at Hagerstown, Md., the war department announced. Vance Breese, test flight engineer, handled the ship on its first flight. Armand Theibolt, who designed the plane, watched the flight.

The plane is one of the largest and fastest designed and built for training. The AT-13 was designed to meet the necessity of training bombing crews as a unit. It provides places for bombardier, pilot, co-pilot, navigator-radio man, machine gunner, and camera man. The ship is equipped with all of the instruments needed to enable a training crew to simulate all of the conditions of a long-range bombing attack.

The army air forces ordered the AT-13 in quantity from the design on the drawing board and production will proceed after completion of flight testing. The principal characteristic of the new plane is the smooth exterior finish. It is without rivet heads or exterior fastenings of any sort.

In the Deep, Dark Sea

It's hard to see deep down in the ocean, and under the difficult conditions of seeing Nature has evolved some curious creatures. One of the most remarkable of the deep sea animals is a type of angler fish that lives about a mile below the surface. Floating about in the darkness of the deep where sunlight does not penetrate, it is apparent that a mature woman angler fish would have a hard time in finding a mate. In fact, scientists hunted for years before they discovered a few male deep-sea angler fish.

The difficulty of courtship in the darkness of the under-ocean has been solved by the angler fish in a novel way. The male fish are very very small, and soon after they are born swim about in the dark. If a female swishes by, the male hooks on. He hangs on for his life, both figuratively and literally. He becomes a parasitic gigolo of the deep permanently attached to his mate. Apparently many males perish while waiting.

Goose Island Ceded by Britain to Venezuela

Patos, or Goose Island, ceded to Venezuela by Great Britain, is one of the smallest of several islands lying between the two mountainous peninsulas that nearly join north-western Trinidad to the Spanish Main. In the 12-mile strait between the tips of these peninsulas, Patos lies farthest south into the Gulf of Paria, and farthest west. It is less than three miles from the Venezuelan shore.

The island is only a mile long, from west to east. Its land area is less than 200 acres. At its highest point—330 feet—the Union Jack had been raised each day. Two Trinidadians assigned to this duty were the only human residents of the island. Their "neighbors" included five-foot iguanas, some smaller, green lizards, and a herd of wild goats.

Rock formations of Venezuela's Paria peninsula, Patos and nearby islands, and northern Trinidad indicate that Trinidad was once linked with the South American mainland.

Six miles northeast of Patos rises Chacachacare, nearest of the Trinidad coast islands and site of a leper colony. Separated by narrow channels, are Huevos (Egg) island, Monos (Monkey) island, and Gasparee—all resort islands for Trinidadians with attractive bathing and fishing facilities. Discovering Trinidad in 1498, Columbus named this strait between the Caribbean sea and the Gulf of Paria "The Dragon's Mouths" because of its many channels.

New England Canal Offers Haven to Ships From South

The Cape Cod canal, now reopened after being closed for several weeks by a ship that sank across the channel, lessens the sailing distance between New York and Boston about 70 miles.

When ships must go around the cape they are exposed to submarine attack, and they also enter waters that are particularly treacherous. A thousand ships are estimated to have been wrecked there during the first two decades of the century. Huts were built on the beach to shelter wandering survivors, as early as 1798.

Charts of the 17th and 18th centuries show possible routes for a canal through the cape, and work was started several times. The successful effort began in 1909. The canal, completed in five years by a private corporation, cost about $13,000,000.

During the first world war, the war department assumed temporary control, and in 1928 the canal was purchased by the federal government for $11,500,000. Building locks and enlarging the bed later brought the cost to about $40,000,000. No tolls are charged.

Handy Back Shields

Ugly discoloration of perspiration on the back or shoulder of valued silks and synthetics can be avoided by sewing or pinning in a lightweight back shield which will keep perspiration from soiling the dress. Back shields may be bought in department stores and dime stores. They are made of washable cloth, sometimes of cotton, sometimes of silk, sometimes of cotton net. The last is particularly good for very sheer dresses. They can be bought ready-made or can easily be made by hand or machine. Use the back pattern of any dress or blouse to cut out the material, and hem all around. Fasten to the inside of the dress at the shoulder seams with small stitches or tiny safety pins.

Down Near New Guinea

The Aroes, lying northeastward toward New Guinea from the Tanimbar, also consist of a large main island and many islets. The main island, Tanabesar, 120 miles long and 50 miles wide, is divided by several shallow channels. The town of Dobo, on one of the small islands, provides good harbor facilities.

The Kai group, northeast of the Tanimbar and west of the Aroes, is the most fertile and most populated. It includes mountains up to 3,000 feet and dense forests supplying excellent timber for the native boat-building trade. Harbors at Doelah and Elat are well concealed. Small shore settlements are numerous and abundant fish supplement coconuts, bananas and maize in the native diet.

Great Duck Increase Reported

A recent bulletin issued by "Ducks Unlimited," an organization using American sportsmen's dollars for the restoration of waterfowl on the great Canadian nesting grounds, reports that "a great increase in the duck population is now certain."

It further states that "this year's crop certainly tops that of the past two years" and that this has been "the first summer in a decade that nature has given the ducks a break."

Indiana Bans Hen Pheasant Shooting

Indiana has announced that the season on hen pheasants—open in 1941—will be abandoned in 1942, as the result of a survey which included reports on birds taken during the 1941 season, survival after the hunting season and after winter months. The survey revealed an abnormal ratio between hen and cock birds that prevented maximum natural production.

Illegal Collectors Almost Destroy Balata in Guianas

The Guianas, earliest source of balata, a rubber-like substance, exported three to five million pounds annually from 1910 to 1923. Meanwhile British and Dutch officials established regulations, designed to keep the trees alive. They banned felling by the gum collectors and limited the extent of tapping and retapping. They licensed collectors and registered laborers. Forest rangers and land officers policed the industry. But regulations deep in the jungle were easily overlooked by workers paid for each gallon of production. Depletion of accessible trees is shown by the drop in Guianas production in 1940 to less than 800,000 pounds. Unrestrained by conservation laws, balata collectors attacked Venezuela's jungles in 1906 and for 15 years averaged over three million pounds of export balata annually. It is estimated that in this period they left nearly 40 million fallen monarchs to decay in the forest. Venezuela's 1940 export total was under 300,000 pounds.

By felling a mature balata tree, about three gallons of gum can be drawn off, producing 16 pounds of dried export gum. By restricted tapping of the standing tree it is estimated that a gallon of the milky latex yielding five pounds of balata may be taken every second or third year for many years.

Northern Brazil, untouched in the early years of balata production, recently has been the outstanding source. Brazil exported over five million pounds in 1940—about three-fourths of the year's total for all South America.

Tells How to Have Warm, Dry Winter Poultry House

Most of the troubles caused by wet floors in poultry houses during the winter can be avoided if preventive measures are started before cold weather begins. C. M. Ferguson, poultry husbandry specialist, Ohio State university, says that condensation of moisture from the air causes the wet floors. If the floor is well insulated with litter, both floor and litter will stay dry in cold weather.

Mr. Ferguson advises the use of straw, sawdust, or ground corn cobs for poultry house litter. Several inches of any of these three materials should be placed in the house while the weather still is warm. Then, more litter should be added each week for six to eight weeks.

The litter forms an insulating blanket that is the same temperature as the air in the poultry house—so moisture from the air will not condense on the litter. Bare floors or thin coverings of litter on the floor are about the same temperature as the air outside the house—so moisture from the air inside condenses on the floor and accumulates from day to day.

Storage Stretches Tomato Harvest

When frost threatens, the supply of home grown tomatoes fresh from the vines can be kept coming for several weeks by pulling the vines and hanging them in a dry and moderately light storage place. Ripe fruits can be used at once, and the ones that are well developed but not ripe will be able to draw considerable food material from the vines to help them ripen and color.

If the gardener has a large patch with more vines than can be managed conveniently in the storage space available, it will pay to select the best vines for storage and then strip the green fruits from the other vines for use as green tomatoes in cooking and for pickling. Getting full food value from the last of the tomatoes is always good management and better than usual this year because it will conserve the canned supply.

'MORE' Is Shifted in Production

By changing the emphasis from "use MORE equipment," to USE equipment MORE," American small farmers in battle array are inching ahead in the United Nations' effort to produce more food.

Two simple examples: Two farmers in Yuma county, Colorado, recently bought as partners a combine formerly owned by one operator; and three Beadle county, South Dakota, farmers bought a threshing machine which had been owned individually. The object in each case was to get wider utilization of partly idle farm machinery. Co-operative use helps to "spread" machinery by getting it into service on several farms. This saves metal for war, and helps get the food job done despite a short age of labor.

Pre-Christian Customs

Zoroaster lived in Persia at least six centuries before the Christian era, so the Parsis' religion shows little evidence of Christian influence but has not the obstacles to conversion to Christianity found in the Islamic or Hindu religions. Zoroaster was one of the first to advocate the worship of one god. His followers believe in life after death, resurrection of the body, and prayers for the dead. They have their own calendar, with each day dedicated to a particular guardian angel.

They often are erroneously called fire worshippers because when in prayer, they stand facing fire or the sun, as the most appropriate symbols of their god. Parsi history reveals a hatred of idolatry.

With the lifting of restrictions on the manufacture of many consumer and commercial products, Minister of Finance Hsley said:—"Consumers must not expect an immediate increase in the available supply of these commodities." And he added, "an increase in civilian goods will depend upon the which manufacturers will require to secure the necessary skilled labour and materials without interfering with continuing war requirements."

Our ability to install telephones depends not on instruments alone, but also in many cases on obtaining wire, cable and exchange equipment. Even when we can secure necessary manpower and materials, it will take time—it might be months—to install all the apparatus necessary to serve our waiting applicants. We shall lose no time, you may be sure. We are grateful for the patience and understanding of so many who have had to wait so long for telephone service.

Americans Not Singing Like in First World War

The complaint is heard today that Americans are not singing "As they did during the preceding war; that spirit is lacking, that new songs do not hit the spot, and that a revival in singing old ballads and patriotic songs is needed in every neighborhood.

An army officer is quoted as saying that besides munitions of war, four things are needed for the success of any army: Food, clothing, shelter, and music. Another officer is credited with saying: "A silent army never wins victories."

To do something about this, at least in rural areas of the state, a wartime recreation committee has been appointed at the colleges of agriculture and home economics at Cornell university. Their job is to decide how the extension service, which includes county agricultural, home demonstration, and 4-H club agents and farm and home leaders, can revive interest and enthusiasm for singing in rural neighborhoods throughout New York. It is felt that wars are dreary and tragic and that the inspiration of music is needed to help endure it.

Members of this committee are Prof. Dwight Sanderson, head of the department of rural sociology; Mary Eva Duthie, Earl A. Flansburgh, Eunice Heywood, William Smith Jr., Margaret Wylie, and Dorothy DeLany, all college staff members.

Professor Says 'New Age' Will Follow Present War

A "golden age" of American art will flourish in the postwar period, Prof. Emerson H. Swift of the Columbia University fine arts department predicted at the university's summer session.

"History shows that all the great art periods developed immediately after important wars," Dr. Swift said. "This factor, as well as the encouragement of native-trained artists and the great improvement in the public's artistic taste within the past 25 years will be responsible for this new era of art in the United States."

"Until recently America lacked the background to produce a great national art. Official government sanction and public backing, always necessary to the growth of a great artistic period, was lacking. Art was a luxury reserved for the well-to-do and mainly the product of European trained men and women."

"Since the war has shifted the center of culture from Europe to America and recent federal projects have helped to popularize art and bring it to the public's attention, we can now look forward to the emergence of an important art period of our civilization in this country."

Voice and Physiological History

The trained laryngologist can tell a good deal about the past physiological history of an individual by listening to his or her voice. The type of voice a person has is not something that happens accidentally or is produced by training, but is a direct result of the general bodily functions. Dr. Robert F. Ridpath, of Temple university, Philadelphia, in a recent address to the American Medical association explained how we get our tenors and basses and also our coloratura sopranos.

"The character of the adult voice depends on the size, shape and length of the vocal cords and this again depends on the age of adolescence," he said. "Those whose voice assumes the tenor quality, for instance, mature early. The larynx, which up to the beginning of sexual life is infantile in character, grows more rapidly at this time, with resulting diminution in size of the anatomic members and shortness of the cords."

Not Great Ice Age Relics

Glaciers in the Sierra Nevada mountains are geologically recent in origin, not relics of the Great Ice age, as tourists are informed by guides. Both the glaciers and Owens lake are less than 4,000 years old, Dr. Francois Matthes, of the United States geological survey, says. And 4,000 years back is only yesterday in the geological time scale.

"From its salt content," Dr. Matthes says, "it is clear that Owens lake cannot possibly date back to the Great Ice age. The lake appears to be the same age as the small glaciers of the Sierra Nevada. It is probable that these glaciers made their last great advance as recently as 1850. If the glaciers were older than 4,000 years they would have deposited much more material. They cannot possibly date back more than 10,000 years to the Ice age."

India's Rice

Rice is by far the most important food crop of India. The diet of the bulk of the rural and urban population, except in wheat-producing areas consists mainly of rice. Rice occupies approximately 23 per cent of the cultivated area and from 31 to 33 per cent of the food crop area, but the rice acreage is not uniformly distributed, the greater part being concentrated in the eastern and northeastern part adjacent to Burma. India has the world's largest acreage under rice and is second only to China as a producer. In 1941 India's rice output from 72 million acres was 57 billion pounds.

A Worthy Successor

The following editorial comment by J. G. H. in a recent issue of "The Canadian Register," Kingston concerns the recent appointment of Rt. Rev. Msgr. Wm J. Smith, D.F., D.C.L. as Bishop of Pembroke.

"When Bishop-elect Smith was invested in the robes of a Domestic Prelate, Father Cameron of Glen Nevis said in the sermon for the occasion, 'In Rome he imbibed the wisdom of the ages, the science of the saints, and the spirit of the Apostles.' These are the qualities which he now brings to the Diocese of Pembroke.

The Bishop-elect enjoys the reputation of a thorough student, even long after he has completed his scholastic courses. He has always striven to make his own what was good in the history of the past. Now, in the light of that history, he can prudently judge the problems of the present. This wisdom, along with his lengthy experience in chancery office work, ensures thorough administration in his new jurisdiction.

With the background of Glengarry faith he was equipped to absorb much of the "science of the saints," which has served only to deepen his earlier love for the things of God and his desire to foster such faith and love in the souls of others. He will find a fertile field in Pembroke Diocese, where similar faith abounds, and he is assured a bountiful harvest.

Monsignor Smith did not need to go to Rome to acquire the zeal of the Apostles. That, too, was inherent in the soil of Glengarry; it was planted there by the first Bishop of Upper Canada, and has given many a missionary to the Church in Canada. But at the centre of Christendom his zeal was devivified with, the spirit of the original Apostles, and he was fitted to be one of their successors.

The Apostolic succession in the Diocese, regrettably laid down by Bishop Nelligan is secure in the episcopate of Monsignor Smith.

'Steamship Special' for Child War Guests

BACK TO BRITAIN: Child war guests who came to Canada from Great Britain in 1940, when 6,600 of them were carried in Canadian Pacific ships, now are returning to the Old Country. A group of them are shown above at dinner in the Windsor Station coffee shop prior to boarding a C.P.R. "steamship special" for the east coast. Also making the trip were R.A.F. dependents like the wee Scottish-Canadian (right), enroute to Falkirk and her R.A.F. father, who trained and married in Canada.

"Here comes our cheque Mummy!"

All over Canada, in cities, towns, villages and on farms, hundreds of thousands of men and women watch for the postman to bring dependents' allowance cheques as other people look for pay-day. They are people of all ages whose breadwinners are away on active service. They include returned men not yet back in civil life.

And soon there will be hundreds of thousands more back from the war. They will receive cheques to help them buy civilian clothes, to go to college, to get technical or vocational training, to start in business for themselves, or to set up as farmers or fishermen.

The banks have to be prepared to cash all official cheques for these and a dozen other purposes—and to do so anywhere in Canada without charge. In fact, the banks supply Canada with the nationwide machinery to facilitate a grateful country's plans for restoring service men and women to civilian life.

This is a tremendous task. It will entail a vast amount of bookkeeping. But you can be sure that your banks will take it in their stride without impairing regular banking service.

"UGANDA" Bakes "INTERNATIONAL" Bread In Pacific

Aboard H.M.C.S. "UGANDA" in the Pacific: Chief Cook Frank Daws of Vancouver, of H.M.C.S. "UGANDA," is all smiles as he shows off the "International" loaves of bread baked in Canada's new cruiser, now serving with the British Pacific Fleet. The signs show how much "UGANDA" is getting around these days. Her bread is baked with flour from Australia, milk from Canada, lard from the United States, yeast from Egypt, salt from Ceylon, sugar from England, and water from the ship's supply. In the first six months after her commissioning, "UGANDA" travelled 25,000 miles.

J. W. MacRae Buys Home At Kemptville

The news that J. W. MacRae of Lochiel had last week end purchased a home at Kemptville and would remove to that town at the end of this month was received here with regret by many friends. While appreciating the fact that Kemptville is more centrally located for Mr. MacRae's new work as fieldman for the Crops, Weeds and Seeds Division, his friends here had hoped he would remain in Glengarry.

D. W. MacLeod Among Purchasers

The excellent average of $412, the best in the 3-year history of the All Eastern Ontario Sale, was obtained at the Holstein Sale held at Kemptville, May 31st. The 57 head sold for $23,495. Among the purchasers was Dan W. MacLeod of Dalkeith, who paid $385 for a four-year-old cow consigned by James M. Brown, Almonte.

Junior Farmers At Kemptville

On Saturday, June 9th, a Field Day was held at Kemptville under the auspices of the Eastern Ontario Junior Farmers' Association. This Field Day, the first held in a number of years, was highly successful. There were about 400 present representing the juniors from ten counties in this part of the Province and as far west as Hastings County. The highlights of the day were two softball tournaments, one for boys and one for girls. There were nine entries in the boys' tournament, and seven entries in the girls' tournament. Both were won by teams from Carleton County. There was also a parade of the school livestock, under the direction of J. A. Dalrymple. Two picnic lunches were served by the Kemptville Agricultural School, which were greatly enjoyed by those present. At the conclusion of the noon meal, a cheque for $600. was presented on behalf of the Junior Farmers of Eastern Ontario to the British War Victims Fund.

Members of the recently organized Junior Group in Charlottenburgh represented Glengarry at the Field Day. The boys entered a team in the tournament, and although they did not win, they gave a very creditable showing. In all there were about 45 present from this County. It is hoped that through activities of this kind more encouragement will be given to the furtherance of the Junior Farmer Movement throughout Ontario. A similar but somewhat larger Field Day will be held at Guelph on June 29th, for the Western Ontario Junior organizations.

Home After

went by train to Bremenwood in North west Germany and walked 12 miles to a former Jewish concentration camp which they reached on April 21st 1941. In September they were transferred to a Navy camp at West-ertimke near Bremen, where they were kept busy building up the prison camp from some 10 barracks buildings to a total of 38. Later they were sent to a nearby camp for naval prisoners to enlarge accommodations there too. His group was fortunate, Jack reports, in having a type of guard who was never really brutal and their worst problem was food. The typical meal was sauerkraut, fish, soup and black bread and if it had not been for Red Cross food parcels, Jack would undoubtedly not be in the good health in which he now appears to be. Only in the winter of 1941-42 was the regular arrival of Red Cross parcels interrupted, and their camp had the reputation of being the best in Germany, mainly because these food parcels arrived regularly each week.

The last few days at Milag, before the camp was freed by advancing troops of Montgomery's 2nd Army, were exciting ones with fighting going on in the vicinity of the camp for three days. Some shellfire whistled over their camp and at nearby Marlag, the Navy camp, 6 Poles and French were killed and 16 wounded by artillery fire. Prisoners totalling 8,642 were freed in that area and Jack celebrated V-E Day at Diepholy, where they had been brought by British Army trucks. From there they were sent by plane to Brussels and, after an overnight stop, flew across the channel to England, which was reached on May 11th. They were on leave in Britain until May 30th when they sailed from Liverpool for home.

Jack states he has had enough of the sea, and of Europe as well, and will be content to settle down on the home farm.

OBITUARY

MRS. ALEXANDER MACINTOSH

On Thursday morning, May 31st, after a week's illness there passed away at her late residence, lot 8-9 Caledonia, Mary MacSweyn, wife of the late Alexander MacIntosh.

The deceased was born at Dunvegan, March 6th, 1863, a daughter of the late John MacSweyn and his wife Isabella MacLeod. In September 1893 she was married to the late Alexander MacIntosh who predeceased her in November 1908. With the exception of five years spent in Escanaba, Michigan, she had resided at her late home with her son Donald H. MacIntosh.

Mrs MacIntosh was held in high esteem by both old and young. Possessed of a bright and cheerful disposition she had a host of friends who will mourn her sudden passing. A devoted Christian she was a member of Kenyon church for many years and a life member of Skye Women's Missionary Society.

The funeral, on Saturday, June 2nd from her late home to Kenyon church was attended by a large crowd of sympathizing friends. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Philpott who gave a very comforting message on "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" from Psalm 116 verse 15.

The hymns sung were favourites of the deceased, "O God of Bethel," "Forever with the Lord," "Asleep in Jesus," also the anthem "At the Cross" by the choir.

She leaves to mourn her loss one son, Donald H. MacIntosh, six grandchildren and one great grandchild; also two brothers and five sisters: Donald Duncan MacSweyn of Dunvegan; Finlay of California, U.S.A., Catherine MacSweyn, Mrs. D. D. MacLeod and Mrs. Fred N. F. MacCrimmon of Dunvegan; Mrs. Hugh MacMillan of Vankleek; Mrs. D. W. MacLeod, Kirk Hill.

The Pallbearers were: Alex Chisholm, John MacQueen, William Urquhart, Nell B. MacLeod, D. D. MacKinnon, J. K. MacSweyn.

In addition to numerous messages of sympathy, the following floral tributes were received: Wreath from family, Sprays from sister and brothers, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Chisholm, Mr. and Mrs. John MacQueen, Mrs. D. W. MacLeod and family, Mrs. Alex MacNeil, Norma and Rita, Cornwall; Mr and Mrs Charles Ververs, Rochester N.Y., Mr and Mrs Jack Dingwall, Mr D. W. MacLeod and Mrs H. J. Fraser, Montreal, Mr Allan MacCrimmon and Mr and Mrs Stanford MacCrimmon. Cut flowers were received from Mrs Forbes MacKinnon, Mrs Ewen A. MacMillan, Miss F. A. MacCuaig.

Friends from a distance who attended the funeral were Mrs H. J. Fraser and Mr Jack Dingwall, Mrs George Robinson, Mr Ian MacLeod, Mr and Mrs Clarence Moyer from Montreal; WO 2 Allen MacIntosh, Torbay, Nfld; Murray MacQueen, Ottawa; Mrs Alex MacNeil, Mrs Alex G. MacLeod, Mrs

Rod MacGillivray, Cornwall; Mr Albert Urquhart, Regina, Sask.; Mr D. D. MacCuaig, Victoria, B.C. Mrs Morrison MacLeod, Finch, Ont

Clear Liberal

likelihood of recounts in constituencies where the returns are close. It also will determine the country's total vote which, it appears certain, will show that more than 5,000,000 voters cast ballots to set a new record. In the 1940 election 4,672,531 votes were polled.

A combination of the popular vote and candidates elected in the civilian balloting showed this:

The Liberal Government polled 564,965 fewer votes than in 1940 and had 38 fewer members than at the dissolution of Parliament. The Progressive Conservatives received 125,035 less votes than in 1940 and had 26 more seats than at dissolution. The C.C.F. increased its vote by 271,114 compared with 1940 and had 26 members against 10 at dissolution.

Two-Way Fight
The cross-country election picture showed that in the Maritimes it was a straight two-party fight with the C.C.F. holding its single Maritime seat of Cape Breton South and with little change from the party lines drawn in the 1940 election.

In Quebec, the Liberals held control, electing 45 members and eight independent Liberals to a single Progressive Conservative, two Bloc Populaire candidates and eight independents. The Labor Progressives held their only Commons seat in that province with the re-election of Fred Rose in Montreal Cartier.

It was in Ontario that the Progressive Conservatives gained strength, taking 47 of the Province's 82 seats in an echo of last week's Provincial election. In 1940 Conservative candidates won only 25 seats in Ontario. Yesterday's gains were made from the Liberals and from the C.C.F. which lost its sole Ontario seat, York South, won by J. W. Noseworthy in the 1942 by-election.

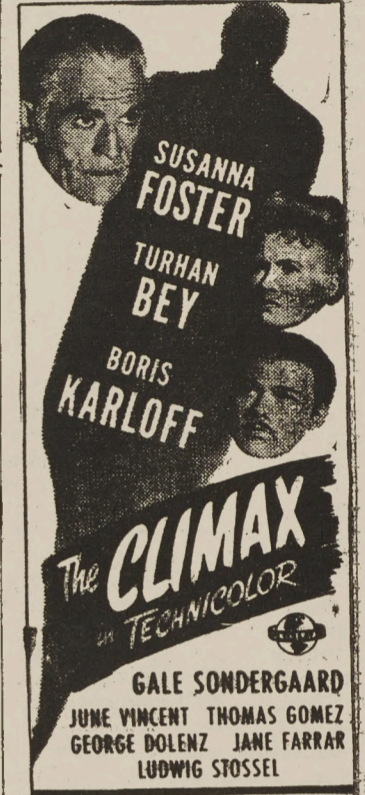

Liberals Beaten in West.
The Liberals also lost ground in the West, holding only half the seats they took in 1940. Gains were chalked up in the Progressive Conservative columns for Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia. The C.C.F. made its major stride of the election in Saskatchewan, where the first C.C.F. Provincial Government is in power, and it also gained ground in other Western Provinces. The Social Credit party increased its strength from 10 to 13 members.

Two cabinet minister were defeated in Monday's balloting, Defence Minister McNaughton in Qu'Appelle, Sask, and Revenue Minister MacLaren in St. John-Albert, N.B. Prime Minister King in his riding of Prince Albert, Sask., had a lead of but 300 in incomplete returns and other members of the cabinet also have leads that could be wiped out by the service vote. The civilian vote brought success to the leaders of the four major parties. Prime Minister King, John Brocken, Progressive Conservative; M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F., and John Blackmore, Social Credit.

Large Membership
 St. Raphael's Club

(Intended for last issue)
 The first meeting of the newly formed Junior Farmer Organizations in Charlottenburgh Township and district was held in the St. Raphael's Parish Hall, Wednesday, June 6th. J. W. MacRae of the Crops Weeds and Seeds Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture who is District Weed Inspector in Eastern Ontario, gave a very interesting talk on the work of his Department with particular emphasis on permanent pasture, and weed control. He emphasized the need of improved pasture, pointing out that a cow required 150 pounds of pasture per day, and at the present time, many of the pastures which are feeding 10 and 11 cows would not contain 150 pounds of good nutritive greens. With regard to weed control, he stated that it would be an excellent project for a group such as the Junior Farmers to take the lead in stamping out some of the noxious weeds which are becoming a menace to Canadian Agriculture.
 Robert McDonnell, Secretary, gave a very interesting talk on new problems which Junior Farmers and indeed farmers as a whole are going to have to face in the near future. He dwelt particularly on the need for reforestation and soil conservation, and also the setting up of an improved economic system.

Musical numbers were given by Betty McNaughton of Martintown, and by Duncan MacRae and James Sauve. Community singing was led by R. G. Ben, nett. Christena McDonnell presided in the absence of Eldege Vaillancourt, who is President. The group made final arrangements for attending the Eastern Ontario Junior Farmers' Field Day in Kemptonville on Saturday, June 9th, when a ball team from this Club will compete in the Special Softball Tournament. Considerable interest is being taken in this new group, and this was borne out by the fact that more than 85 were present at the meeting Wednesday, and the group has now 61 paid up members. It is hoped that in the near future similar organizations can be organized in other sections of Glengarry.

The next meeting of this organization will be held in July at the home of Betty and Wilfred McNaughton.

Greenhouse Supervisor
 Gives Tongue Twisters

If your tongue tangles on such daily Russian communique from Ryazhak, Voronezh, and Borislogbesk, try pronouncing the scientific names of plants in the Pennsylvania State college botany garden, says Albert F. Hildebrandt, college greenhouse superintendent.
 For a starter, try Cochlearia amorocia, horseradish in ordinary American and named after the Greek goddess of love, Hildebrandt suggests. Another is Saxifraga michauxii, a juicy morsel that rabbits had no difficulty in eating up despite its name.
 Started last year to satisfy scientific needs, the botany garden contains more than 50 families of plants. Among the plant groups are Baptisia australis, indigo plant formerly used in the manufacture of dye, and Cassia marilandica, ordinary edible peas and beans.
 The after-dinner excuses for chewing gum, onion and garlic, are called allium cepa and allium sativum. Visitors who have Kentucky colic in their families may want to learn how to pronounce Melissa officinalis, a highly scented mint.
 If a few persons have survived the articulation test, they may try their mettle on the nightshade family which includes Solanum capsicastrum, the Jerusalem cherry; Nicotiana tobaco, "fags" to the smoker; Solanum melangena, egg plant; or Solanum tuberosum, the lowly "spud."

Climbing Lofty Peaks Is Dangerous Sport

Mountain climbing—the scaling, that is, of authentic major peaks—combines the aspects of one of the world's most dangerous and exacting sports with exploration in the broad sense and a developed skill which has become one of the most specialized and stylized on the globe.
 Lofty heights are a challenge to venturesome men, and because of the test of physical stamina and courage, and because also there is a distinct scientific side to mountain climbing, techniques have been worked out which the experts all employ, writes Paul I. Wellman in the Kansas City Times. The nomenclature of mountaineering is enough to show how specialized this is:
 Aiguille, a rock spire; arete, a ridge; crampons, climbing irons attached to the soles of boots for use on ice or snow; crevasse, a deep fissure in a glacier; glissade, sliding down a snow-slope; piton, a metal spike to be driven in rock or ice to afford a foothold; traverse, the horizontal or diagonal crossing of a mountainside, and so on.
 Amateurs are warned never to attempt really serious heights, unless they have with them expert guides or companions, and even then only after much practice and conditioning. And above all they should not go without the proper equipment of clothing, climbing shoes, ropes and gear.

Willow Ware

There is a story about the figures on the blue willow ware dishes. This legend is associated with the Willow Ware pattern: Koong Shee, daughter of a mandarin, despite her father's opposition loved his secretary, Chang. The mandarin imprisoned her in a pavilion by the lake, over which willow trees hung their boughs, from which she was rescued by Chang. An alarm notified the father who pursued them across the bridge, but love triumphed and the pair entered a boat, usually shown in the design, and found safety on the opposite shore. Their happiness was disrupted by a former jealous suitor who discovered their abode and set fire to it, killing the lovers. Their souls were united in the form of two doves, who are represented flying above the willow trees.

Gold, Silver Markings

It is easy for amateurs to decipher those symbols which were first stamped on articles of gold and silver by the Goldsmiths' company at Goldsmiths Hall in London as evidence of the purity of the metal, through the use of key manuals which any dealer in antique silver has. Oddly enough these marks, which are so helpful to modern collectors and dealers in determining the age of English silverware, were first used to indicate the sterling qualities of the pieces and were not intended as a date stamp.
 As early as 1800, writes Deborah P. Teel in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, a law was passed in the British Isles which provided that a leopard's head should be placed on all solid silver by the goldsmith.

House Numbers for Farms

Numbers for farm houses may seem just a bit too civilized, but the plan has advantages as is proved in the states of Oregon and Washington where there are about 600 miles of public roads on which every farm has a number. The numbers not only indicate the highways, but distance and direction from the courthouse. All numbered farms are then listed in a directory which also gives the telephone number, principal farm products and number of acres in the farm. This directory is very useful for buyers but the advantages of the plan seem to outweigh any disadvantages.

of Chevrons Depicts Early Customs of Marines

Prior to the adoption of chevrons, non-commissioned officers of the United States marine corps were distinguished by bars. Earlier, paulettes and other marks were used to designate ranks of sergeants and corporals.
 Sleeve stripes were adopted in 1833 when an order approved by President Andrew Jackson provided that sergeants be designated by two small stripes of worsted lace worn in each arm below the elbow. Corporals wore one stripe.
 During the American Revolution non-commissioned officers of the marine corps were distinguished by pieces of cloth sewn upon the right shoulder of their jackets. Sergeants wore red patches and corporals wore green.
 Stripes styled by President Jackson were used until 1836 when sergeants were ordered to wear chevrons having two angles of tinsel ace on each arm above the elbow. Corporals wore the same chevrons below the elbow and lance corporals wore a plain stripe of worsted lace in each arm below the elbow.
 Marine corps chevrons, a decade later, were yellow silk lace, each stripe being one-half inch wide. They were worn on the uniform coat above the elbow. Scarlet edgings, one-eighth of an inch wide, were added in 1875.
 Since 1900 styles and material of marine corps chevrons have changed frequently. Designs, except those of sergeant, corporal and private first class, have been adopted, abolished and changed as needed.

Famous Cardiff Giant
 Was Proved to Be a Hoax

The Cardiff Giant, strong contender for the title of "greatest hoax of all time," was the contracted figure of a giant more than 10 feet tall. Uncovered by well diggers on the farm of a William Newell in Cardiff, N. Y., it was rumored to be the petrified figure of a prehistoric man. It was exhibited (for an admission fee) to thousands of the curious. Paleontologists, physicians and art connoisseurs offered theories on its origin ranging from petrification to a buried Phoenician statue.
 Andrew D. White of Cornell and Dr. O. C. Marsh of Yale proclaimed it a hoax and, pressed by the resulting inquiries, neighbors recalled the arrival of a big box to the farm. Eventually the giant was discovered to have been carved by a Chicago sculptor from a block of gypsum. The hoax was perpetrated by Newell's brother-in-law, George Hull, partly to make money and partly to gull an Iowan clergyman with whom he had arguments on giants in Biblical times.

Can't Replace Parents

A college may be expected to teach thinking, but it cannot be offered to parents as a nostrum for the mental ills of their children, as Richard Fecheimer points out in his article, "Education Isn't 'Patent Medicine'" appearing in Hygeia.
 Many a parent has been deluded into thinking that college could remake, in four crowded winters, a personality that had been 17 years in formation.
 Of course, the job of a professor is not to remake his students' characters. His function (and the object of general education) is to train students' minds in intellectual activity. To ascribe any other function must surely result in confusing students, teachers and parents.
 Like "patent medicines," education has been advertised as a cure for all ills. "Does your daughter lack poise? Send her to finishing school." "Let military school discipline your son!" "Develop charm and personality—take a mail order course in personal magnetism!"

The Seven Pleiades

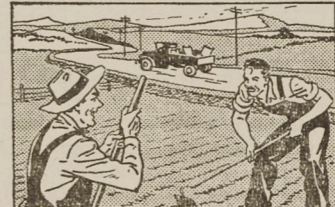

If a person with ordinary vision on a dim night looks directly at the well-known group of stars known as the Pleiades he will see four or five. But if he looks at them out of the corner of his eye he will see two or three more stars, says the Better Vision Institute. The seventh star in the group, known by the ancient Greeks as the "weak sister," has such weak light that it is difficult to distinguish even with excellent eyes under the most favorable conditions. The Pleiades, according to Greek mythology, are the seven daughters of Atlas transformed into stars. One of the girls, Merope, had an affair with a mortal man, which was forbidden to goddesses. As punishment she was made into the "weak sister" star. She conceals herself out of shame for having loved a mortal.

Garage Miniature of House

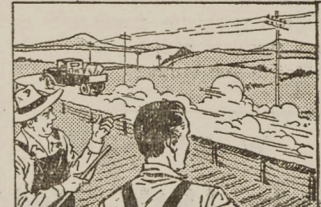

If you find it necessary to build a detached garage, you may be pleased with the idea of a miniature replica of your home. This novel structure will blend well with the house. Shutters, windows and doorway may be inexpensively painted on instead of built. A wooden dummy chimney, painted with a brick design will add realism. If the residence is of brick, but the garage is to be built of wood, a similar design might be stenciled on an entire wooden garage. The idea can also be applied to the dog kennel or a child's outdoor playhouse. And most any child would be thrilled with a tiny reproduction of the big house for a doll house.

1. "Isn't so long ago that you couldn't grow truck stuff anywhere near the roads in this county. Some chaps tried it but it was so gritty that you couldn't eat it. And as for sellin' it—well, that was hopeless."

2. "You'd make your plantin' in the spring and things would look fine. It's good land in these parts. But directly the roads dried up the dust just smothered everything."

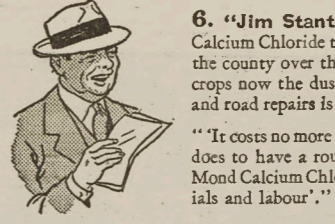

3. "I reckon those dusty roads cost us farmers plenty of money. There was a good market but we couldn't get in on it—you had to have good clean stuff even in those days."

4. "But since they made the roads dustless, it's a different story. Truck Crops are a payin' proposition and we get as good prices as anywhere. What's more, working them ain't half as pesky."

5. "And it wasn't a big job either. The council got together and had Calcium Chloride spread on the roads and we haven't had any trouble since. What it cost was paid for in saving roadwork and gravel."

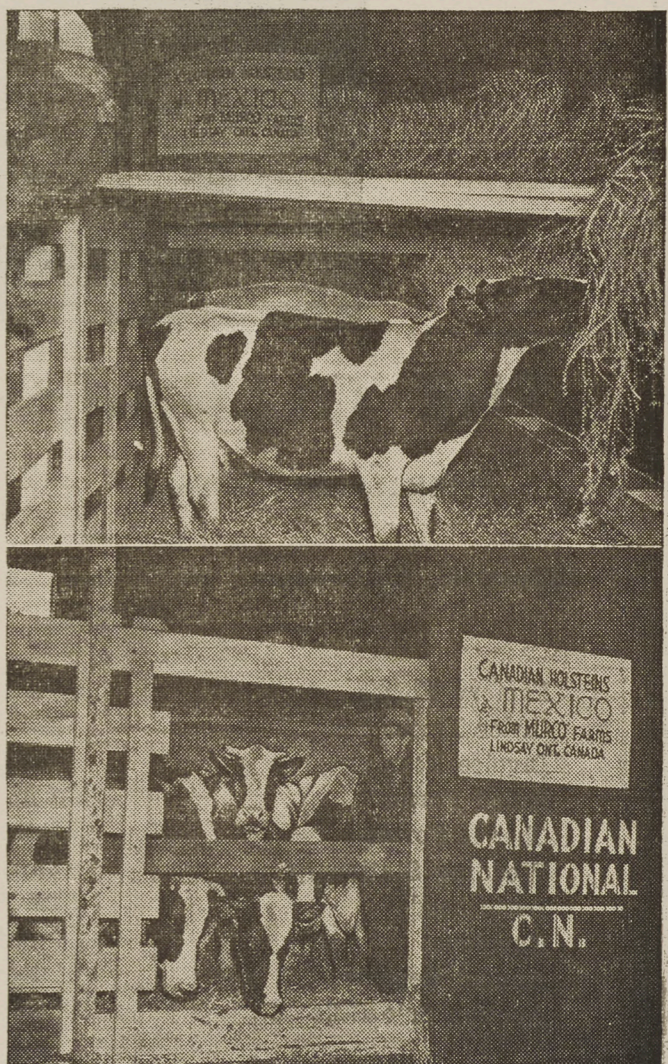

6. "Jim Stanton, our county engineer, says that Calcium Chloride treatment on his gravel mileage has just put the county over the top. And I agree. We grow better truck crops now the dust's gone and the cost of gravel spreading and road repairs is lower than it's ever been."

CANADIAN CATTLE FOR MEXICO

THE first complete herd of dairy cattle ever to be purchased in Canada for shipment to Mexico, 109 purebred and grade holsteins, was moved recently over the Canadian National Railways. They went from the Murco Farms, Lindsay, Ontario, to Mexico City, on their way to the Guadalajara Ranch of Jesus Gonzalez Callo, secretary to the president, a 4,000 mile journey. More livestock will be going from various parts of the Dominion. The photographs show the cattle being loaded in selected freight cars, which were fitted with special watering troughs and with food racks stocked with grain and hay, to tide them over a six day trip to the Mexican boundary.

CHAPTER XII

She decided to pick up a new dress in a hurry. She had to do something. But she had gained in spots, her hips and waist for instance. She no longer wore a regular size. There would have to be alterations. It would be impossible for her to get the dress for several days.

She watched Tony anxiously when they were ready to set off. She looked frumpish and dowdy. Not even the bronze orchids Tony had bought for her could conceal the fact that her gown was a last year's model and half a size too small. But if Tony noticed, he gave no sign. He was very gentle with her as they drove to the Akers.

There was nothing baroque about the Akers' duplex. One had to know values to realize how expensive such exquisite simplicity was, and Rosemary Akers was like that herself, a slender girl with smooth black hair and grave dark eyes and a beautiful sensitive mouth. Not until she smiled did you realize how lovely she was. Her gown was severely plain, a white chiffon velvet cut on long graceful lines. She wore no jewels, but there was a white rose in the coil of her lustrous dark hair on her slender neck. She had the most beautifully modulated voice Barbara had ever listened to.

She had not known until she saw them together how well Tony knew Rosemary Akers. Rosemary knew a great deal more about the progress of the play than Tony's wife did.

Barbara felt as if something was squeezing her heart. She had the seat of honor on her host's right at dinner and Rosemary had placed Tony on the other side of his wife while she sat at the opposite end of the table. But Tony could not keep his eyes off Rosemary and she kept looking toward him, watching for his smile, smiling back shyly.

It had happened, the thing of which she had once been so afraid, the thing which she had later persuaded herself could never happen. Tony was falling in love with someone else. He was falling in love with Rosemary Akers and she with him, but he knew what she and Rosemary did not, Barbara was convinced of that. Rosemary did not know that she betrayed herself every time she spoke to Tony, although he knew. Barbara read it in his face and he was afraid—afraid of himself.

She heard Rosemary reproach him because he had not been to see her for weeks. "You are always meeting Father somewhere, Tony," she said

"You never drop in here as you used to."

Tony's eyes were miserable. "Sorry he said. 'I didn't realize, Rosemary.' He had been trying to keep out of Rosemary's way because he wanted to be true to Barbara and to everything there had been between them."

"Why don't you come around for dinner next week when you're in town?" asked Rosemary, almost timidly. "Just a home dinner with Dad and me, and we'll have one of our long talks, such as we used to have when I first came home."

Tony's eyes lit. Then he glanced away from Rosemary's pleading eyes. "I'd love to," he stammered, "but I've an engagement."

"The next week, then?" asked Rosemary, her chin quivering slightly. "I'm afraid I can't make it week after next, Rosemary," Tony said. "I'm going to go over the play with Pinkney Law, the new one, I mean. I'll probably take us till far into the night."

"I'll see," said Rosemary like a disappointed child. "Some other time then."

Just before they reached the house, going home, Tony sighed and announced in a careless voice that he believed his weekly trips to town were more trouble than they were worth. "I think asked Tony. "Aren't you feeling up to par?"

Barbara's lips quivered. "Oh, yes," she said, and managed to smile brightly. "I have to do something about the old waistline. It's spreading all over the place. Hadn't you noticed?"

"You always look all right to me," said Tony loyally.

She did not go to her bridge club that week. She asked Tony if he would like to go on a little picnic, just the two of them. He looked startled, but he said yes, of course. It was the first time Barbara had ever proposed their going off without Skeeter. She hoped to remind Tony of their honeymoon. They ate on the beach beside a tiny of driftwood. She had put on her prettiest dress and had her hair done becomingly. She thought it would be easy to recapture the old mood when Tony had held her in his arms and kissed her until she lost her breath. But it did not work out. Tony was sweet. He was attentive. But he did not hold her in his arms and he never offered to kiss her. He kept looking at the water, his thoughts far away.

She proposed with a dull flush to go to New York when he went in that week, but Tony said he thought he would try to see everybody he had to see, if only for a minute, and then and stick to the old hearth fire."

"I'll follow your example, Bab," he said. Barbara made a hundred new resolutions before she finally fell asleep from pure exhaustion. She would fight for her man. She would fight as much for Tony's sake as for her own. They had been through so much together. They had a child. They could not let their love die. Barbara refused to believe it was too late to save the situation. She would not let herself believe it. She was convinced he was as unhappy as she was about the whole thing.

Barbara started in the very next morning, doing her daily dozen before Tony awoke. When he shut himself up in his study, she took a long walk, leaving the sedan in the garage. On the way back she stopped at a beauty parlor and signed up for a course of scalp treatments and a series of facials. She refused dessert at luncheon and did not touch the rolls and butter.

"What's the trouble, Skeezicks?"

not go in soon again. He did not go for a month, and to Barbara's dismay, looked more miserable every day. He had not seen Rosemary since her dinner party and he was hungry for the sight of her. Barbara read it in his eyes, in the way he paced the floor at night, in the way he rolled and tossed in his sleep. He thought of Rosemary constantly.

Barbara was panic-stricken. The situation was far more serious than she had allowed herself to believe. Nothing she did had any effect. He was not pleased when she tried timidly to make love to him. He was relieved when she was content to be just good friends, and it broke her heart.

Pinkney Law accepted the new play it was to be produced early in September. Tony had nothing to do—nothing except take long walks along the Sound by himself, his mouth clamped shut, his eyes haunted. Skeeter relieved the strain. They made a great deal of him. It was a relief for Barbara to kiss Skeeter. At least he was not thinking of someone else.

Glendon Akers and his daughter had been away on a cruise to the West Indies. They were gone six weeks. Before they left Rosemary wrote Tony a stiff little note, asking him to come in and say goodbye. He did not go, but he was like somebody tormented all that week.

Rosemary and her father returned in July. They opened their house at Southampton. Barbara saw Rosemary's picture in a rotogravure section. She looked lovelier than ever, although there was a wistful expression in her eyes, a droop to her lips. Tony saw the picture too, and turned white.

A week later a note came from Rosemary addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Blake. It was an invitation to a week-end party at the Akers' place in Southampton. Rosemary went on naively to say that both she and her father had missed Tony so much and there would be a number of interesting people at the party whom he ought to know and she hoped he and Mrs. Blake would arrange to come. It was signed, "Your sincere friend, Rosemary," in a plain, straight-forward hand with out curlicues.

"I expect you should go," faltered Barbara. "The people who are going to be there sound important."

Tony looked up eagerly. "Do you really think so?" His face was all lighted up.

"Yes," she said, as steadily as she could, "I think you should go, Tony." He drew a long breath and years seemed to slide off his shoulders. "All right," he said, "I will."

Barbara's hands knotted at her side. He has fought a good fight but he's licked, she thought, numb with pain. He isn't going to fight any more. This is the end. He's going to see Rosemary. He's going to tell her he loves her. If he does, it is all over. Once he has committed himself to Rosemary, he will never turn back. He could not play fast and loose with that lovely child. Everything went a little black before Barbara. "If you don't mind, Tony," she faltered, "I think I'll go with you. It—it sounds like—like an interesting party."

"Of course I don't mind," said Tony gently, not looking at her. But she knew he did mind. "This time I won't let Tony down," Barbara told herself desperately. Whatever happened, she would not look like a frump on this occasion. It was Barbara's last stand, her one chance, she thought. After all, nothing had really happened between Tony and Rosemary.

"If I can only wake him up to me again," Barbara thought, almost praying that in the acid test she would be able to hold Tony, even against Rosemary who was so much younger and fresher, who had not had a baby or been ill, who had never been poor or on her own.

Barbara hated to leave Skeeter with anyone else. At the last she strained him to her, kissed him feverishly. Oh Skeeter, darling," whispered Barbara, beginning to weep. Then she remembered that for all their sakes she must not spoil her make-up. This once, if never again, she must be gay and blithe and pretty, if it killed her. She was out to win back her husband, to snatch him away from another woman. Barbara forced her lips into a smile. She tripped down the steps to where Tony was waiting in the coupe, her face as bright as if she hadn't a care on earth. "Let's go, Mr Blake!" she called out gayly.

Tony grinned. "You're sort of dressed up, aren't you, Mrs Blake?" he asked. Barbara fluttered her eyelashes at him coquettishly. "How do you like the get-up, Mr Blake?" she asked, cocking her head on one side to display her jaunty new hat.

Tony smiled. "It's all to the good," he said.

Barbara's heart sank. He had not really looked at her. He was not thinking about her. He was gentle as usual, but she could not delude herself. Tony could not see her for the shadow of another woman. He was not aware of the inches which Barbara had taken off her waistline. He was not aware of her at all. "I must make him notice," she told herself.

She tried deliberately to flirt with her own husband, but it did no good. His imagination was leaping ahead to Rosemary, whom he had not seen for six weeks.

They stopped at a little wayside inn for luncheon. There was fresh clam chowder on the menu. Tony ordered it and Barbara drank a cupful before she realized that the chowder hadokra in it. "Oh, dear!" she said, "okra never agrees with me."

Tony laughed. "How do you know?" he asked. "We never have it." (To be continued)

COUNTY NEWS

MARTINTOWN

The regular meeting of the North Branch W.M.S. of St. Andrews United Church met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs Cunningham with the President Mrs W. McArthur in the chair. Mrs L. C. McArthur was the chairman for the meeting.

The programme in the May Missionary Monthly was followed. The ladies taking part were: Mrs L. C. McArthur, Mrs W. McArthur, Mrs Graham, Mrs J. P. McMartin, Mrs. A. Robertson, Mrs. D. H. Campbell. Hymns sung were Nos. 187, 41 and 378.

Mrs A. J. McDermid gave an interesting Intercession period on the Twenty Years of the United Church. The Missionary lesson was given by Miss Mamie Urquhart.

The reports of the Presbyterial were given. That of the first day was given by Mrs Graham. The report of the second day was prepared by Mrs Kirker and presented by Mrs Wilbur McArthur. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered those taking these reports.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Eleven members were present. The certificate received for last year's Reading Contest was then displayed. It was decided that both the certificates be hung in the choir room.

Books for the present Reading Contest were then given out to members. After the closing of the meeting a social half hour was enjoyed when Mrs Cunningham served a delicious lunch.

Canned Ham and Eggs Is Newest Food to Be Sold

The 365 items of canned food have added a new member to their ever-increasing family—ham and eggs, America's favorite breakfast duet.

The food-canning industry, which in normal years rolls out approximately 12 to 13 billion cans of various kinds of edibles, actually began in the days of the Napoleonic wars.

The French government, seeking to feed Napoleon's hungry soldiers on far-flung battlefields, offered a prize of 12,000 francs to anyone who could "preserve" food for the armed forces. In 1809, 14 years after the offer was made, Nicholas Appert, a Parisian confectioner, received the award. His method of sealing certain foods in stoppered glass bottles and heating them in boiling water was made public in 1810 and other countries rapidly picked up the method.

In England a search began for a cheaper and better container. Appert's heavy glass bottles were too cumbersome for shipment. A tin canister, similar to the one used for packing tea, was used. Thus the canister, shortened to "can" by Americans, came into being.

Canned goods were taken with Sir William Edward Parry on his voyages in search of the Northwest Passage between 1819 and 1826.

Gasless Days Bring Back Community Sings, Dances

Good, old-fashioned community sings, and band and orchestra concerts are coming back with gasless days.

With tire and gas rationing and defense work holding people in their own communities, the home town music fans are dusting off their pianos and tuning up their fiddles.

Not only has music become a community entertainer, but also it has placed the high school music director in a more responsible position than ever. The need for high school bands, orchestras, and choral groups to fill the gap of much-needed entertainment for war purposes and public morale is greater than ever.

Victory concerts for war effort drives, send-off parades for selective service men, community sings for war defense workers, high school group entertainment for nearby army camps and USO centers are some of the jobs which the high school music director must assume.

Because of a Curious Boy

Another idol of history is knocked from his pedestal. In his place stands a curious boy.

Although Galileo has long been named in the history books as the inventor of the telescope, which opened the path to our knowledge of the universe, recent researches indicate that the telescope actually was discovered by a curious boy. It is said that the children of a Dutch spectacle maker, Hans Lippershey, were playing with some old spectacle lenses, all of which then were made circular, and one of the boys held up a combination of lenses before his eyes and was delighted to find that distant trees appeared to be close at hand. Lippershey made many experiments in 1608, and in the following year Galileo so improved upon Lippershey's telescope that he was able to see the mountains of the moon.

Number One Port

Massaua, Eritrea's No. 1 port, boomed during the Italian-Ethiopian war. From October, 1935, to April, 1936, more than 550 Fascist ships docked, landing in all about 270,000 workers and soldiers, and more than 700,000 tons of war materials. Their cargoes also included 12,000 motor vehicles and thousands of mules for pack duty.

A military city developed within the civilian city as barracks, warehouses, supply depots, hospitals and other buildings multiplied. To keep pace with this mushroom growth a plant was built capable of a daily production of 30 tons of ice and 700 tons of distilled water. Regular air and shipping services connect Massaua with Italy.

Give Umbrella Shower Bath

A silk umbrella that is not used for a long time needs a shower bath once in a while. Clean a silk umbrella by brushing it with a soft cloth.

Clean an oil-silk umbrella by washing with mild soap and water. Rinse off and dry in the shade before closing. Handle oil-silk umbrellas very carefully in cold weather or the oil-silk will stiffen and crack.

When you carry an umbrella of any kind closed, keep strap buttoned to prevent ribs from catching and bending.

Hang your umbrella up in the closet to keep it from sliding around on the closet floor.

Canal Shortens Distance

The Cape Cod canal is a little less than 12 miles in length, and connects Buzzard's bay with Cape Cod bay. It has a bottom width of 100 feet, and a depth of about 23 feet. Its banks are paved with stone.

Official measurements show that the canal shortens the distance between points north of the Cape and points west of Buzzard's bay from 53 to 144 miles.

The Oyster Drinks and Works 24 Hours a Day

The oyster drinks all day, swallowing up to 4½ gallons of water an hour through a slight gap between the two valves of its shell. From this liquid diet it strains the nourishing minerals washed away from the soil into the sea. Calcium is spread in a pearly layer over the inside of the shell, enlarging its diameter about an inch a year.

Foreseeing that nature's bounty would end, the founding fathers of Connecticut began protecting their oyster fisheries in 1784. Despite protective measures, the oyster has become scarcer. At the beginning of this century the annual yield of oysters from the continent's coastal waters was half again as large as the present "take."

The gradual depletion of the nation's "wild" oyster beds is typified by the Chesapeake fisheries, which 60 years ago yielded from 25 to 30 million bushels annually. Now the yearly crop may be less than one-seventh of the old totals. Efforts about the 1880s to protect the natural oyster beds in Chesapeake waters started "oyster wars" between government boats and an oyster-pirate fleet armed with cannon. Now the seafood patrol enforces conservation laws protecting oysters under a prescribed size. Since the wild oyster has become scarce, the bivalve now served on the half-shell in most parts of the country is as domesticated as the strawberry or the tomato, a product of planting, transplanting, cultivating, and harvesting.

U. S. Now Attacking From Center of Aleutian Isles

Occupation of the Andreanof islands by navy-supported U. S. army troops puts the Americans "in the middle" of the Aleutian War theater. The central island of the Andreanofs is just about halfway between the Alaska mainland and, until recently, Japanese-held Attu, westernmost of the Aleutians. Tanaga, nearest of the main Andreanof islands to Kiska, is only about 175 air miles (little over half an hour's average bombing time) from that much-attacked Japanese base.

The Andreanof group offers a possible selection of half a dozen sites for Uncle Sam's reportedly large occupational forces. Atka is the largest. Situated near the eastern end of the chain, it is, however, more than 300 air miles from Kiska.

Atka has an area of roughly 600 square miles. It is curiously shaped, with a headlike formation in the northeast tapering to a slim tail's point in the southwest. Like the rest of the Aleutians, Atka is generally mountainous, with rocky, precipitous shores, although there are a number of harbors, beaches and inland open spaces suitable for air fields. Its active volcano, Korovin, in the northeast, is nearly 5,000 feet high.

Oil on Bahrain Island

Bahrain island, in the Persian gulf, greatly overshadowing the other islets of the small archipelago, runs 26 miles north to south and is 10 miles wide. The petroleum wells and refinery are near the center, where there are hills up to 400 feet. Along the north coast is a small fertile area where herds graze and figs, dates, wheat and barley are grown. On the northeast coast the Sheikh's palace overlooks Manama, the island's port town of 35,000 people. Northward is the harbor, lying between protecting reefs. In recent years a causeway has been built from Manama to Muharraq town on Muharraq island, because the latter was chosen as the site for a commercial airline port. In the protected water east of Manama and south of Muharraq is a British naval anchorage.

Army's New Plastic

If it is any solace to the soldier, the notes of reveille which awaken him in the morning soon will have a better tone, the war department announced today.

Designed primarily to save brass, an essential metal, a new plastic trumpet has been adopted and will be issued. Not only will the new instrument save approximately 20 ounces of brass for each trumpet, but the tone is better, it is reported.

Made of cellulose acetate, the trumpet is olive drab, blending well with uniforms and other army equipment without benefit of paint or polish.

The trumpet needs no "warming up" period as is required in brass instruments, and musicians who have tested the plastic trumpet say it does not "choke up."

Penalties for Careless Hunters

The Michigan law providing for denial of hunting licenses to big game hunters accidentally shooting humans, has been extended to apply also to small game hunters, the Michigan department of conservation announces. However, while the court may order revocation of a deer hunting license for the current year and the three years following, small game licenses may be revoked only for the current and first ensuing year.

The small game provision has been on the books since January 10, but last season's hunting was nearly over at that time, so few small game hunters are now barred. Two hundred and ten names appear on the 1943 deer license blacklist.
