Pine Grove Again Football Champs

Scored Twice, Saturday To Beat Ottawa United In Exhibition Game

With one game still to be played as we write, the Pine Grove entry is assured of the Glengarry Football League Championship for 1946, and winners of the MacDonald Cup.

Last Saturday at Laggan, Pine Grove played an exhibition game with the Ottawa United leaders, of Ottawa City League, and defeated them quite handily 2-0. To show the amateur nature of our game, and the way the sport is played for sport's sake, Ottawa came down on their own without promise of financial reward, etc. but Pine Grove, turned over the entire gate receipts $65, just to show that Glengarry is still the home of hospitality.

It was a race for second place between Lochiel and Dunvegan from the start, but Lochiel, with a young team, surprised everyone by the manner in which they held their own against all comers, and their play and final standing in second place calls for commendation. Dunvegan, had so many available players at the (Continued on page 4)

WHY THE DELAY?

Those of our readers who have in recent weeks been receiving their copy of the News a day late are asked to bear with us until vitally needed repair parts for our linotype are received. Parts which should have arrived weeks ago are still not available and the result is a slowing down of our rate of type setting.

We hope to have the trouble rectified and be back on schedule soon

The Editors.

Glengarry's most-decorated member of the services in World War II, Colonel Donald C. Cameron, D.S.O. and Bar, E. D., returned to Canada, last week aboard the Queen Mary and over the week end visited relatives in Cornwall and Glengarry, before reporting to N.D. H.Q., at Ottawa. Colonel Cameron won the Distinguished Service Order and latter a Bar to the D.S.O., both given for gallantry in action while commanding the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Italy. Holding the Line

With the OPA news in Washington causing considerable concern about the dangers of inflation setting into the economy of the United States, there is a remarkable calm in Ottawa amongst officials in face of this break up of controls across the line in face of the extremely close relationships between the two countries. It is true that the Canadian Government has already given assurance that it will "hold the line" on price controls, rental controls and rationing, though the OPA in the United States may be breaking up. However, it is pointed out that Canada is dependent greatly upon imports from across the international border for such everyday needs as fruits, vegetables, gasoline, oil, coal, cotton, and others, and, if these are to be resold in this country below the ceiling levels, increased payments of subsidies will have to be made at a time when the current trend was to cut such simple payments of subsidies. In other words, a reversal of policy may be forced by the developments at this time if price ceilings here are to be maintained and removed only gradually as conditions warrant. Last year the Commodity Prices Stabilization Corporation paid a total of $100,000,000 to offset price increases and it was planned to spend only a sum of about $90,000,000 this year, though present estimates indicate that this may have to be much higher due to current events across the line.

Moreover, it is indicated in stories circulating in Ottawa that there is such favour here in following a policy whereby the Commodity Prices Stabilization Corporation would pay more subsidies rather than pass the additional cost onto the consumer directly. Another story here indicates that there may be complications from a break up of the controls in the United States in labor agitation for increased pay in tune with such increases in the other country, especially in the same lines and where international union operates in both countries so that the rumoured possibilities of Canada paying a benefit in competition against United States products on the international market from these developments may be nullified by possible strikes or stoppages in this country for this reason, with the production being unable to keep up with the demand if this should happen in Canada's labor front.

On the other hand, the more optimistic attitude in Ottawa can be discovered in the report that the whole control system has operated much better in Canada than in the United States and there is evidence of this in many directions, particularly in the 10 to 12 per cent difference in the cost of living in the two countries, with controls being tighter in Ottawa than in Washington at all time as well as much less internal disturbance in the control machinery itself. Likewise, another important factor is that the discount in exchange has brought about a gradual increase of efforts towards exports to the United States from Canada as against a discouragement of import efforts from that country.

More Speed Foreseen
Since the heat in this capital has been excessive lately and the session has been lasting quite a long time now, it would be no great surprise to observers on Parliament Hill if more speed would be applied soon to the activities in order that Parliament may move more rapidly towards prorogation. Indeed, if early prorogation is to be accomplished, more sittings of Parliament may be inaugurated. It is hinted, and this may be continued until the session is prorogated. Incidentally, there has been much talk "in the lobbies" about the small number of members present on some occasions recently as revealed in the voting figures, such as on such important measures as the redistribution bill debate when two divisions found the figures to be 129 and 150 votes in a Parliament of 245 members. On other divisions, it was noted, for instance, on the Government's farm prices programme there were only 109 votes on one occasion and 93 on another; on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation dispute there were only 155 votes; on the Crown companies dispute there were 154 votes; there were somewhat small numbers of members present on other occasions when important statements of policy were made and other significant discussions took place, including topics like atomic energy, international affairs, etc.

Tighten Operations
According to Order-in-Council PC 2316, it appears that the regulations on Family Allowances may be tightened up since, under certain circumstances, it is provided the Director may order that the allowance be paid to such other person or agency deemed in the best interests of the child where in his opinion the person receiving the allowance does not apply exclusively same towards the child in respect of whom it is paid.

Quarter of All Expenditures
With an expenditure of no less than $620,000,000 in the current fiscal year in different payments to or on behalf of War veterans, including war service gratuities benefits, re-establishment credits, etc., it is disclosed in Ottawa that almost one quarter of all expenditures of the Federal Government this year will be directly for the benefit of veterans and their families.

Colossal Cheating Alleged
Reconstruction Minister, Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, has informed the veterans' Committee of the House of Commons in Ottawa that the priority system for veterans on new cars or trucks has "bogged down" and charged that veterans have been re-selling their cars at times to civilians after buying them "on a colossal scale."

Welfare of Canada's Indians
A delegation from the North American Indian Brotherhood of Canada and the United States, in colorful dress worn by some of them, marched along Parliament Hill and into the building in order to request consideration of an amendment to the Indian Act to assure the better welfare of Indian tribes throughout this country. In the colorful march could be seen the president of the Association, Andrew Paul, of North Vancouver, and the vice-president, J. Dellsie, of Caughnawaga. One Indian, Alex McKinnon of St. James, B.C., was said to have travelled 96 miles on snowshoes to reach his own tribe as well as to arrange for a delegation to be sent to this meeting.

Leg Make-up Long Used By Native African Police

The subject of leg make-up, of all things, has attracted the attention of the Chicago Natural History museum. Dr. Wilfrid D. Hambly, curator of African ethnology, commented that American girls' complacent assumption of originality in their solution of the problem due to lack of nylons and silk, is quite unjustified. The idea was anticipated years ago by policemen — African tribesmen civilized and trained for police work, and used in the service of the government of British West Africa.

"The uniform of the Nigerian police was a dark blue, with knee breeches, and blue puttees," said Dr. Hambly. "But more often than not the feet were bare, yet they were resplendent with an unnatural jet black luster. Indeed, no shoes were worn for all the toes were visible, but at a distance there was a remarkable effect of wearing patent leather shoes polished to a high degree."

"The solution of this mystery came unexpectedly during an early morning visit to a government station where a number of police were preparing for parade. All their feet were up on a low wooden bench, and shoe polish was being liberally applied to the bare pedal extremities up to the lower edge of the puttees. The men then vigorously brushed until the skin of their feet and ankles assumed a polished surface that the most conscientious shoe-shine boy could hardly expect to attain on leather."

Doughboys Offer Selves For Sandfly Fever Tests

Fourteen soldiers who volunteered to submit to experiments which greatly increased the knowledge of sandfly fever, a disease encountered by American fighting men in tropical and semi-tropical regions, have been awarded the Legion of Merit, the war department announced. The soldiers were all infected with the disease during the experiments. The fever was produced in some of the volunteers by small injections of blood from individuals who had it, and in others by deliberate exposure to repeated bites of infected sandflies.

Sandfly fever—the medical men call it "phlebotomus fever"—is caused by the nocturnal bite of a sandfly carrying the infective agent, a filterable virus. The carrier is a fly about an eighth of an inch long, and it is only the female of the species which bites. The puncture of the skin is usually painful and in a week or two the bite area becomes inflamed and swollen.

The fever is not contagious. The only way it can be transmitted is by the bite of a sandfly that has bitten a person who has the fever. The onset of the sickness begins two or three days afterwards and results in symptoms not unlike those of influenza. The patient is incapacitated for one or two weeks, although his temperature, going as high as 102 or 104 degrees, usually subsides in about three days.

How Deep Is Depth?
Depths of oceans vary. Each ocean has extra deep portions called "deeps," which doesn't necessarily have any connection with average depths. The Pacific ocean has the deepest deeps, then the Atlantic, the Indian ocean and then the Caribbean sea. The Pacific is also deepest in average depth, followed by the Indian ocean, the Atlantic, the Caribbean sea and the Gulf of Mexico.

Equilibrium Test
Equilibrium is unstable when an object tips over easily or tends to keep moving when changed a little from its original position. A pencil poised on your fingertip is an example of extremely unstable equilibrium. Unstable objects fall readily to more stable positions. The pencil can be put into stable equilibrium by sticking a penknife or other weight in each side obliquely.

Oil Deposits

By finding the microscopic pattern of various kinds of rocks, a scientist has discovered that certain kinds of rocks or sands, formed during mountain-making motions of the earth, produce the type of oil found in California. Milder motions of the earth produce the oil-bearing sand of the eastern United States and most of the Gulf coast. In relatively quiet periods of the earth's evolution, oil rock or sand is formed which now gives us the oil of most of the mid-continent, and east Texas.

Says Desert Isn't Sand

Desert shiiks and sirens and even the famed Foreign Legion have been debunked. And now comes a University of Illinois chemist debunking the Tunisian desert itself. The desert isn't sand at all, says Lieut. John Cressman. It's powdered dirt, powdered fine as face powder, and only a few inches deep. Beneath that is a solid clay, very solid, says the chemist, who analytically describes the desert as an excellent battle-ground for mechanized war and not good for anything else.

IT'S WORK AND PLAY FOR CROSBY AT JASPER

Between "takes" for his new picture, "The Emperor Waltz," and golf on the picturesque Jasper Park Lodge course, Bing Crosby had a busy time in the Canadian Rockies. For a Tyrolean location the studio chose the incomparable background of Mount Athabasca in Jasper National Park. Crosby strolls down the highway with his dog, "Buttons," in the scene above. Outside working hours he was invariably on the famed golf course, always happy to give his autograph to those inevitably waiting at each tee. He is shown looking over the layout of the sixth hole before he drives off. Bing told the golf pro: "Yessir, that's a real golf course!"

Hello, Homemakers! You haven't much time to talk on the phone when the berries are ready to jam. Neither have I. Please mail any requests for information to me. I'll be glad to answer by return mail. Anyway, if your taking down instructions they may be incomplete so clip this column and paste it on the filling cards of your recipe box, to-day

Notes on Making Good Jelly

1. Blackberries, gooseberries, crab apples, tart apples, quinces and cranberries jelly easily.
2. Cherries, strawberries, peaches, pears and rhubarb require a pectin or jel-rich combination to give the best results. For example use one part of one of the fruits listed in No 1 to 2 parts of one of fruits listed in No 2. Or a commercial pectin can be used.
3. Fruit should not be over-ripe and should be carefully cleaned. Measure all ingredients or weigh fruits and sugar.
4. Jelly should be boiled rapidly. Use a large preserving kettle to prevent boil-overs and stir constantly.
5. A jelly thermometer assures you of a good jelly or jam and prevents reduction of the amount by too much evaporation. This handy device is hung inside as liquid begins to boil and when it records 220 degrees, it is time to pour.

6. You always skim jelly as the liquid boils.

7. When you use commercial pectin follow the instructions on the package explicitly.

Tuberculosis Diagnosis

Rapped by Physician

Many persons may be put to bed for rest treatment for tuberculosis who do not have the disease.

In a report before a symposium on tuberculosis at the University of Chicago, Dr. Florence B. Seibert of the Henry Phipps Institute, Philadelphia, declared that a wide variation in sensitivity had been found when the protein portions of the tubercle germ, the most potent part of it, is injected into animals and humans.

The problem of correct diagnosis is also complicated by the fact that calcium deposits in the lungs may be due to diseases other than tuberculosis but on an X-ray plate will look like typical tuberculosis damage.

In a series of tests on animals false reactions to tests for tuberculosis were often obtained by first "sensitizing" them with very minute doses of the tuberculin protein, as little as two-hundredths of a milligram. Later a larger dose caused typical tuberculosis indications even in normal individuals who had no trace of the disease.

"It is interesting that in a study which we made on a large group of high school boys and girls in which we compared two different proteins from the tubercle bacillus" a higher sensitivity to the tuberculin test occurred with the second injection with boys reacting more highly than girls.

In the light of this knowledge much more accurate diagnosis of tuberculosis may be made by using the smallest doses of tuberculin possible for skin injections in order to make sure that the red swelling under the skin is a true indicator of presence of the disease, Dr. Seibert declared.

Vegetarian No Match for Meat Eater, Say Doctors

"Vegetarian" Hitler would certainly be no match for "beef-eating" Churchill if both were given the same dose of pyridine or benzene (poisonous chemicals used in the manufacture of war gasses), according to the report of two Fordham university chemists to the American Chemical Society.

The two scientists in their report disclosed the damaging effects of war gasses on body tissues which can be prevented through a diet rich in meat and other foods containing the protein constituents cystine and methionine.

In experiments on both men and animals during the past seven years, the two research experts learned that through these controlled diets the poisonous gasses could be detoxified. Not only will the diet prevent the damaging effects to tissue, but will aid in the recovery of those already exposed to the gasses, they said.

Value of Onions

Extensive experiments have shown the value of green onions in preventing pellagra. Onions supplemented a diet which was believed to be complete except for a deficiency of the pellagra-preventive factor. When onions were omitted, this diet inevitably led to pellagra.

Garlic, a near relative of the onion, was utilized as a medicine around 1850. On that date, a United States dispensary recommendation said, "The oil of garlic may be given with great advantage in obstinate bronchitis and catarrhal pneumonia of young children. The bruised garlic cloves are often used as poultices to the lungs, and similar applications were formerly used to the feet for nervous restlessness or even convulsions of young children. Further, it has valuable properties as a germicide, disinfectant, for ulcers, as a remedy for pneumonia and tuberculosis, and all bronchial infections."

Hunchback Luck Ancient

Probably everyone who has ever placed a bet on a horse race, and many who haven't, are aware of the superstition that to touch the hump of a hunchback will bring good luck. Cripples afflicted with this deformity have made small fortunes at race courses and gambling casinos. But few who have tipped an enterprising hunchback for the privilege of "rubbing his hump" realize they are following a custom thousands of years old.

The early Romans availed themselves of the same good-luck charm before crowding into the Circus Maximus to watch the racing chariots roll. The Egyptian Pharaohs had their favorite hunchbacks conveniently at hand and the Phoenicians placed his image aboard their trading galleys.

The superstition of the Lucky Hunchback, not only as a charm for gamblers but also as the supreme protector against evil spirits is one of the oldest and most widespread of all such popular notions.

Athlete's Foot

Of all the self-doctoring for foot ills, Athlete's Foot, or ringworm, probably heads the list. Most people troubled by the itchy, annoying and sometimes dangerous foot disease seem to be those whose feet perspire greatly, and whose perspiration has a strong acid concentration.

Some 20 or 30 of the fungi (which cause the disease) thrive best on this moist, hot and odorous environment inside of shoes.

"What do you mean . . . I'm lucky?"

Lucky lad! Getting snagged on the wire in his effort to climb over a Hydro barrier . . . probably to recover a ball . . . may have saved his life. Some boys have not been so lucky.

Hydro energy is one of the finest things we have in Ontario to make for better living. But it can stop one from living, if you thoughtlessly give it a chance to flash through your body. Every possible precaution for safety is taken by your Hydro; but once in a while someone gets careless or "takes a chance", and tragedy strikes. A boy climbs a pole and touches a wire. Or he flies his kite near a Hydro line, and it contacts a high-voltage circuit and carries death or injury to whoever is holding it. Sometimes a storm breaks down a line and someone takes hold of the broken live wire with disastrous results. These are just examples of acts that are beyond the power of Hydro to prevent. Your Hydro can only warn of danger, and seek co-operation of parents and teachers and all who have influence with those who might expose themselves to that danger.

Hydro need never be a threat to anyone who:

1. Will not climb poles.
2. Will stay away from distribution lines and transformer stations.
3. Will keep away from fallen wires.

For your safety, in case of trouble immediately notify your nearest Hydro office. But never, never touch a fallen wire.

Fish forms the focal point of meatless Tuesday's dinner. On Wednesday the pot roast reappears, sliced cold and enlivened with colorful vegetables and a twangy relish. With dried beans again market available, the odds and ends of the roast can add flavour and nutriment to Thursday's chili con carne. From the array of fresh vegetables can be chosen an eye-appealing and palate pleasing vegetable plate for Friday, proteinized with an egg or cheese sauce. "Wilson" Role, Year's Prize Screen Plum Won By "Unknown" Who "Sounded" The Part!

Knox Chosen Without Screen Test In Revolutionary Casting By Zanuck

Alexander Knox won the biggest role of the year—the title role in Darryl F. Zanuck's "Wilson"—without a screen test.

Usually, it's how an actor looks that results in his being "discovered." In Knox's case, it was how he "sounded."

This is what happened.

Pine Grove Again

start — took some time before they were weeded out, and so they ended the playing season much stronger than they began.

Greenfield started out badly, but improved as the season progressed. For the last half of the season, they were equal of any club in the League but they lacked that indefinable something in their players, that scores goals, and so failed to secure a playoff position.

The final two games of the Lochiel-Pine Grove series developed into a battle of goalkeepers. The two goalers of these teams are in the race for the goalkeeper medal. Keith MacMillan of Lochiel, has only 3 goals scored against him, Morlin Campbell of Pine Grove has 4. The first game ended in a scoreless tie, so the deciding game will settle the issue. The last game in Lochiel between these teams was a splendid one. The largest crowd since a way back was in attendance. Two events of interest happened there—John A. MacKinnon, ninety years young, viewed the game with interest and humorous comment, and J. A. Macdonnell refereed the game, after an enforced absence of many years from such a task.

With one game to play, the final standing follows:—

	W	T	L	F	A	Points
Pine Grove	6	5	0	15	4	17
Lochiel	2	3	1	3	3	12
Dunvegan	2	7	3	7	11	11
Greenfield	0	6	6	2	14	6

The League Schedule ends Thursday July 11th. That night a League meeting will draw up the Glengarry Championship play-off schedule, which will get off to its semi-final stage next week with Dunvegan meeting Lochiel. The winners of this series will take on Pine Grove in the finals for the Glengarry Cup.

A series of challenge Cup play-offs for the Greenspon Cup will also be played.

McLACHLAN—At Winnipeg, on Friday, July 12th, Janet C. McLeod, wife of J. W. McLachlan.

The remains will arrive at Alexandria Monday morning, July 15th, and the funeral will be held Tuesday morning, July 16th at 9:30 o'clock, to St. Finnan's Cathedral and cemetery.

When Zanuck received the finished screen play of "Wilson" from ace scenarist Lamar Trotti, who had worked on it for nearly two years, he decided to try an experiment. He believed the script to be one of the finest he had ever read, but he wanted to test it by hearing it. Accordingly, he planned a complete recording of the script, and William A. Bacher, radio producer, turned movie producer, was assigned to make the recording.

Because the whole thing would be done on a barren sound stage with a microphone the only "prop," players with good dramatic voices were sought after. Their appearance didn't matter. For the title role, Alexander Knox was selected—strictly for his voice.

When Zanuck heard the recordings, Knox's reading of Wilson's lines was so convincing and effective that he asked, "What does Knox look like?" Stills were produced. Zanuck showed the stills to Guy Pearce, head of the 20th Century-Fox make-up department and asked: "Could you give him a reasonable resemblance to Wilson?" Pearce experimented with sketches of the actor as "Wilson." No dramatic test was necessary.

That's how Alexander Knox, comparatively unknown to film audiences, won the biggest masculine role of the year.

Of his portrayal, the young actor has this to say:

"I sought to make Woodrow Wilson recognizable but I could not hope to bridge time and space and create a literal likeness. I could only hope to catch the spirit of the man, to react as he must have reacted in any given situation.

"In that effort I was aided immeasurably by the fact that every word I uttered was a direct quote from Wilson himself."

In the course of the picture, Knox has 338 speeches—a total of 1124 lines and plays an integral part in 294 scenes. His make-up required one hour more than for any other players and he had only one day off. All of which adds up to marathon record for a screen newcomer.

Also featured in the brilliant cast of the film opening Tuesday at the Garry Theatre are Charles Coburn, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Thomas Mitchell, Ruth Nelson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Vincent Price, William Eythe and Mary Anderson, "Wilson" was directed by Henry King.

In 1886 — 60 years ago — the Dominion Experimental Farms were founded. Starting with five farms the System has since been extended to 34 farms and stations and 210 illustration stations. This System, the largest and most comprehensive of its kind in any country, is maintained, with the other Services of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, for the promotion of agriculture and the national economy of Canada.

As a result of the work carried out in the past by all the Services of the Department in co-operation with the provinces and agricultural colleges, a much greater measure of stability has been given to farming in the Dominion.

Now that the war has ended all the Services of the Dominion Department of Agriculture — Experimental Farms, Science, Production and Marketing — visualize a broader and fuller program of usefulness to the people of Canada. The facilities of these Services are varied and extensive. Everybody in Canada is invited to take advantage of them freely. The Department is always ready to assist in any way in the advancement of the basic industry of Canada — Agriculture.

Prospects Honey Crop Improving

The Beekeepers of the United Counties report that the warmer weather and occasional showers have improved the delayed growth of the different clovers, which were conspicuous by their absence in early Spring and now a more favourable honey crop is anticipated.

The consumer will benefit greatly by the increased coupon value each sugar coupon being good for 1 lb sugar or 4 lbs of honey.

UNDER MASONIC AUSPICES
The congregations of St Andrew's Presbyterian and the United Churches worshipped together in St. Andrew's church, on Sunday evening, June 30, when the service was under Masonic auspices, Rev. H. A. Doig was assisted by Rev. J. H. Hamilton of the United church who read the scripture from John 1 and led in prayer. A full choir led in the singing of the hymns, "How beautiful the sight of brethren who agree", "O God of Bethel by whose hand" and "Blessed be the tie that binds" with Miss Netta McEwen at the organ. Mrs. Farquhar Finlayson of Ottawa rendered the solo, "Today I walk with Jesus."

The sermon was preached by Rev. H. A. Doig, minister of St. Andrew's, from John 1:22. "Then said they unto Him, who are Thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest Thou of Thyself?"

He extended a cordial welcome from St. Andrew's church to the Maxville Lodge A.F. & A.M. as well as the visiting brethren. The service was being held according to an ancient custom of Masons, honoring St. John the Baptist, who with St. John, the Apostle, were both justly revered and highly honored in all Masonic circles.

Of St. John the Baptist it could be truly said that the firmness of his character, his rocklike stability, his reproval by word and deed of wrong, his witness to Christ the Truth, are all represented in Masonic standards.

The outside world not having any great knowledge of Freemasonry have a terrible suspicion of it. That suspicion sometimes breaks out into open attack and undoubtedly hostility. There is need for frankness in answering.

Freemasonry is not a social club or a benefit society. Basically it is religious in its teaching based on the word of God. It is a spiritual process which claims to help men in answering certain questions about life and life's meaning.

Two basic beliefs are fundamental in Masonry:

1. A Mason is man who believes in God. What is back of the world?—Is the world a cruel place? It is only a material attraction of atoms? Behind our world there is a living personality which in symbolism of masonry we call the Supreme Architect of the Universe—"Whose builder and Maker is God."

2. A Mason is a man who believes in his fellow-man. His consideration of man is against three back grounds: (a) The Material World, Considering our great world we realize how insignificant man is against the Majesty of God Yet God has selected man for his special and peculiar care, Man is peculiarly the temple of God where in his spirit dwells, (b) Eternity, but, of Eternity. Masons uphold and firmly believe in the Resurrection, (c) Divine Grace—The great consideration in Masonic thinking about man is the fact of God's love for him in Christ—"A thing of price is man, because, for him Christ was crucified." Because of that love of God loves in turn becomes the great virtue to be practised by man. The glory of Freemasonry is love—and on that great moral law. The greatness of Masonry's Tradition and power is based. Masons are urged "to love, not in word or in tongue only but in deed and in Truth."

Improvements Can Add To Home Comfort
Certain building improvements can be made in your existing home to make it more comfortable, reduce fuel costs and extend the life of the heating equipment. Protect the outside doors with storm doors, because large amounts of cold air leak past a door, even if it fits fairly snugly against the frame. Such air leaks cause cold drafts.

Insulate your ceiling. At least two inches but better four inches of insulation should cover the ceiling exposed to a cold attic space. Material used for insulation should be such that it will not decompose, will be resistant to vermin and will be relatively fire resistant. Insulate the side walls. In existing houses, the only practical method is to have the insulation blown into the side walls with a machine. The material should be blown in with sufficient pressure so that it will not settle later and form vacant pockets.

Caulk all leaky joints around window frames, door frames and even along the basement sill where the house foundation and wood structure meet. The caulking is applied on the outside of the window and door frames with a caulking gun that may be borrowed or purchased from a building supply dealer. Any heat that leaks from loose fitting basement windows and doors is just as expensive as heat that escapes from the upper living quarters. The heat from the furnace and the pipes in the basement serves to warm the floors of the room overhead and should be conserved.

List Advances Made By Agricultural Scientists

Here are a few typical examples of recent scientific advances made by the research scientists:

Chopped sugar cane was found to be a good roughage for fattening steers; experiments showed that steers receiving only a small grain ration graded lower than either fully fed animals, or those fed an intermediate ration; it was found that yellow corn cannot be counted on to furnish fattening cattle with enough vitamin A. Yellow corn is a source of this vitamin but well-cured high quality hay or silage should be used as a dependable source of additional amounts of vitamin A.

CHAPTER X

The Magnolia Room was on the sixth floor of the city's most popular department store.

On a blazing hot day the dim green walls splashed with the cool beauty of giant magnolia blossoms cupped in their thick dark green leaves, tables like small white pools with shaded lamps, and with neat-looking mulatto girls in print dresses and white aprons to serve the delectable food, it was not odd. Lissa and Ann were given a small table, and the pleasant little mulatto girl took their order and departed.

Lissa said, her slim hands folded on the table, "I haven't seen you around much lately. I mean at the night spot."

"It's so hot—and I've been pretty busy," answered Ann evasively.

"Oh, yes, an engaged girl and her troupeau," said Lissa, and smiled, though not with her eyes. "When's the great day? Oh haven't you set the date yet?"

Ann hesitated and then she said evily, "No—we haven't set the date yet."

Lissa laughed. "Well, if I were in your place, I wouldn't lose any time Dr. Frazier's darned attractive and with so many men away at the war."

"Hounded" by HEADACHES

Blinding pain, constant throbbing can make life a misery. Many headaches may be caused by the failure of the kidneys to perform their normal duty of filtering poisonous wastes and excess acids from the blood. If kidneys fail and poisons remain in the system, headaches, backache, rheumatic pains, disturbed rest may often follow. Dodd's Kidney Pills help your kidneys clear out trouble-making poisons and excess acids so that you feel better—rest better—work better. Get Dodd's today. 142 he's likely to be snatched up any minute," she suggested lightly.

"I'm not worried," said Ann, and meant it; though not of course, the way Lissa took it.

"Hi, wake up!" protested Lissa shocked. "That's no way for an engaged gal to talk! What do you mean you're not worried? That you are so sure of him you're sure no other girl could take him? That is flying in the face of Fate to hurl a challenge like that!"

"I—didn't mean it quite like that," said Ann evenly.

Lissa studied her shrewdly. "You mean that since you are not in love with him, anyway—" she began, but Ann stiffened and straightened.

"I'd rather not discuss it, if you don't mind," she said stiffly and added deliberately. "Have you read any good books lately?"

Lissa tipped back her chair and laughed richly as at some delectable joke.

"You are transparent, aren't you?" she said flatly. "You're not one shred in love with Lyn Frazier—but you're completely mad about Tracy—"

"How dare you?" protested Ann.

"Then why in Heaven's name don't you marry the man?" demanded Lissa sharply. "Tracy's completely off his head about you—and if you are in love with him—"

"I suppose you wouldn't have any idea why Tracy hasn't asked me to marry him?" asked Ann.

Lissa looked at her shrewdly.

"Unless because you're engaged to Dr. Frazier—Tracy's pretty much a nut about loyalty and stuff," she returned carelessly.

Ann said deliberately, "Tracy feels under such obligations to you, that he will not even consider—marrying someone else—just—on the off-chance that some day you may—need him—"

Studying Lissa, Ann said dryly, "I suppose you had not the faintest idea that Tracy felt so obligated to you?"

Lissa's eyes widened a little and she started to look surprised and hurt, and then she relaxed, grinned and with a little shrug. "Oh, I knew something about it, but I did not dream he'd go to such lengths. I mean, I've turned to him for help when the going got a bit tough; he sent for me to come down here as soon as he got the job on the Courier, because I was out of a job and bored stiff and at a loose end. But—goodness, there's no reason for him to stay single on my account. After all, I could yelp to him for help even if he was married—"

"Not if he were married to me, you couldn't," said Ann impulsively, and was a little startled because she hadn't meant to say it. But the picture of Tracy, as he husband, receiving "yells for help" from the lovely but reckless and careless Lissa, and responding to them, was a little too much.

Lissa smiled, pleased at the thought that Ann was jealous of her. "But, my dear!" she protested prettily. "I'm not in the least in love with Tracy. He's a sweet old thing and I'm terribly fond of him but I haven't the faintest objection to his marrying you, if he wants to!"

On their way out of the tearoom, half an hour later, there were a number of women chatting in the foyer, waiting for tables, and among them was a slender blonde with too much make-up wearing a shelter, thin black frock and an enormous cartwheel hat.

As Ann made her way through the group she came face to face with the blonde, who started, and shrank a little, before she recovered herself to say hesitantly, "Oh—hello, Ann."

And Ann said evenly, "Hello, Julie."

There was a tiny taut silence, and Lissa looked curiously from Ann to Julie, so that Ann knew that Lissa expected to be introduced.

"Julie, this is Miss Marven, Lissa, Mrs. Barton!"

And Lissa said, round-eyed with every evidence of delighted surprise, "Not Julie Barton?"

The painful red surged up under Julie's too-heavy make-up and her eyes looked sick and hunted. But she said evenly, "Yes, Miss Marven—I've heard a lot about you, too."

Lissa laughed. "Not really! I'm much too unimportant to be talked about—"

"You dance beautifully and—Lyn loves dancing," said Julie quietly.

Lissa stood very still for a moment and an odd little expression flickered over her face and was gone, before she said smoothly, politely, "Lyn? You mean Dr. Frazier? Yes, he does dance well—I've met him several times at the Driving Club."

"And at less public places," said Julie so quietly, so gently that for a moment Lissa seemed not to grasp the full implications of that.

When she did, she lifted her lovely head and her eyes were frosty, her tone hostile as she said quietly, "That sounds very much like an unpleasant crack, Mrs. Barton. I'm afraid I shall have to ask you to explain it."

"I'd be glad to," said Julie and her voice had risen a little; not much; no more than the voices of the women gabbling and laughing around them; but there was a faint thread of hysteria in Julie's voice and Ann felt a mounting apprehension. Thursday night at the Chicken Pen; the Wednesday afternoon before that drive into the country; Tuesday night at the Pig and Whistle; Monday night at Haven Tourist Court—

Lissa drawled, her voice infuriatingly cool and amused, barely flickered with contempt, "Really, Mrs. Barton. You—or—private detective is doing all right! I hope you're paying him properly! The man's uncanny!"

Julie's voice went up another note and she was trembling violently, and as she swayed a little, Ann put out a swift hand to steady her and caught the scent of liquor on Julie's breath.

"You can't have him!" She was sobbing clawing at Lissa, reaching for her sobbing wildly. "You can't have him do you hear? He's mine—"

Ann did the only thing she could think of in that moment when she realized that the well-bred woman about them were staring, whispering—she slapped Julie hard, full across the face and Julie's head rocked, and then she was still, and a tiny drop of blood spurted from her lower lip into which she had sunk her small, sharp white teeth.

"Thanks, Ann," she said huskily, and became shamefully conscious of the group about her and lowered her head until the brim of the cartwheel hid her face. "Sorry—I—I'm not feeling so well—"

She tried to make her way through the throng that opened to let her pass, but she stumbled and swayed and Ann went to her, and put an arm about her, steadying her to the elevator. Outside in the blazing hot street Ann summoned a taxi, put Julie into it and told the driver the address.

At home that night, Ann found Sarah waiting for her, with the news that they were having guests for dinner and dinner would be put back an hour.

Ann smothered her weariness and her impatience at the thought of guests and dutifully took time well spent, for when she came down the wide stairs, she looked truly lovely. At least to the man who stood at the foot of the stairs, and watched her descending, there had never been anything in the world more lovely.

For a moment she stood quite still on the bottom stair, and looked at Tracey with wide astounded eyes.

"What—what in the world are you doing here?" she demanded swiftly.

Tracey grinned. "I'm just as surprised as you are!" he admitted frankly. "Your grandmother called me an hour ago, and asked me to come to dinner. She was very insistent—not that she needed to be, of course. I was delighted. Ann's head was swimming a little."

"But—she didn't say anything about your coming—she said we were having guests—and made me dress up—" she said hurriedly, because if he kept on looking at her like that, his eyes clinging hungrily at her mouth, she would fling herself into his arms and beg him to kiss her; and that would be a terrible thing to do—terrible—but beautiful.

"And a very nice job you made of it, too," said Tracey and his eyes took her in from the turquoise flower in her hair to the tips of her silly head strapped sandal slippers that peeped like two silver mice from beneath the long skirt. "You're—you're so beautiful, darling—it's all I can do to keep my hands off you—Ann, dearest—"

"And now that we are all settled and cosy," said Sarah in a voice so artlessly pleased that Ann stiffened a little and looked at her with suspicion. "I have to ask you a few questions, Mr. Driscoll and I do hope you won't mind answering them frankly—and truthfully, of course."

Tracey grinned a little. He liked the old girl. She was quite a character, he told himself. Strong, forceful, dominant—she had humor, too and a great deal of it. She would be a swell friend—but she could be a bitter and implacable enemy, he knew, as well.

"I don't promise to answer at all, Mrs. Clayton," he told her frankly, "but if I do answer, it will be frankly and truthfully!"

"Good!" said Sarah happily. "First of all, then—are you in love with Ann, Mr. Driscoll?"

Ann was for a moment rigid with shock and embarrassment, the color burning hot in her face, and then she cried out, angry and incredulous at Sarah's outrageous frankness.

Sarah flung her a quelling glance and then looked straight at Tracey. "Well, Mr. Driscoll?" she asked briskly.

Tracey's hands were locked tightly and his face was white and set. He flung Ann a glance that all but took her into his arms and kissed her.

She knows that I am, Mrs. Clayton he said quietly, the quiet of hard-won control, of dearly-bought composure. "She knows that I adore her."

Ann felt warm and breathless with happiness, and a sudden shyness that made her eyes fall before his, and that set her heart pounding.

"That's splendid!" said Sarah briskly, "and since she has admitted to me that she is madly in love with you, it seems to me that the two of you should do something about it don't you think?"

"Such as what, for instance?" suggested Tracey almost grimly.

Astrologist Says Three

Stars Brighter Than Sun

Three stars of our galactic system are more luminous than the sun, Dr. Peter van de Kamp of Swarthmore, Pa., director of the Sproul observatory at Swarthmore college, declares.

"The brightest is the well-known Dogstar Sirius, the fifth nearest star, at a distance of 8 light years and a candlepower 30 times that of the sun," said Dr. van de Kamp. "Next comes Procyon, the little Dogstar, at a distance of 11 light years and a candlepower 7 times that of the sun; Altair, at 16 light years, is 10 times as bright as the sun."

"Vying in brilliance with the sun is the brightest component of the triple star Centauri, the nearest stellar object, at a distance of only 4 1/4 light years, or 26 trillion miles. The other stars represent various degrees of candlepower, the faintest one, 8 light years away, having a luminosity of only one 50,000th times the sun."

With few exceptions these nearby stars show a remarkable behavior, according to Dr. van de Kamp. With decreasing candlepower the size decreases and the color becomes redder. Most of the stars are red and much smaller than the sun; they are called "red dwarfs." Dr. van de Kamp said that all stars, including our sun, are huge spheres of incandescent dense gases, sending out light whose spectral proportions are determined by the surface temperature, just as for molten metal.

Faulty Engine Adjustment

May Cause Power Loss

Don't be too quick to blame low octane fuel for your tractor's lack of power and sluggish action. It's possible that the fault may lie in lack of compression, improper ignition timing or faulty carburetor setting.

If there is a rebound on each compression stroke when the engine is cranked slowly, the valves are closing properly and holding compression, it is pointed out. Piston rings are also likely to be in good shape. A lack of compression means waste of fuel and loss of power. Leaky valves permit gases to burn and warp the valves and burn out the valve seat.

Leaky or broken piston rings, also evidenced by lack of compression along with an undue hissing in the crank case, cause serious loss of power. They allow deposits of carbon to form in the combustion chamber and cause cylinder walls to score and burn because of improper lubrication.

Prisoner's Last Meal

There appears to be no definite information on exactly how or when the custom of a prisoner's last meal originated but Warden William Snyder of Sing Sing says it is his understanding that the practice originated years ago, as a humane gesture, in order to give the condemned person an opportunity to select certain foods within reason and the regulations as his "last meal." Robert G. Elliott, New York State executioner for many years, in his book "Agent of Death" explains that contrary to the general belief, the meal is not eaten with relish and often is not even eaten by the condemned man at all. Frequently it is shared with other occupants of the death house and there is a tradition that one man ordered for his "last meal" the dishes he knew another inmate relished and gave them to him when the tray was brought. The recipient was so pleased by the gesture that he himself did the same thing when he reached the time of his "last meal."

Controlled Contractors

Social control of private construction is not as new as some of its opponents would have it appear. Hammurabi, King of Babylon around 2000 B. C., prescribed that: If a contractor builds a house for a man and does not make it strong enough, and the house which he built collapses, and causes the death of the house owner, then the contractor shall be put to death. If it causes the death of the son of the owner, then the son of the contractor shall be put to death. If it causes the death of a slave of the owner, then he (the contractor) shall give the owner a slave of equal value. If it destroys property, he (the contractor) shall replace what has been destroyed, and because he did not build the house strong enough and it collapsed, he shall rebuild the house at his own expense. If a contractor builds a house for a man and does not build it so that it stands ordinary wear and tear, and a wall

Guinea Pigs

Department of agriculture scientists in studies of heredity directed toward the improvement of livestock used guinea pigs, for "guinea pigs." Geneticists collected voluminous records on weight, size, color, fecundity, abnormalities and other traits. Using methods of statistical analysis unknown to earlier livestock breeders, the department scientists worked out graphic charts to get a clear picture of how heredity works and especially as to what degree inbreeding can be used safely to purify germ plasma, so as to produce farm animals of uniformly high quality.

134th Infantry Solved

This One—But Quick

One of the outstanding characteristics displayed by today's service men is ingenuity. No situation, no matter how difficult, seems to stump them.

When the 134th Infantry gave a party at Camp Robinson, Ark., somebody neglected the all-important item of girls, an oversight which went unnoticed until the party was well under way. But Private Bob Skinner, a more than usually personable infantryman from Lincoln, Neb., proved equal to the occasion.

Commandeering a truck, he dashed over to a quartermaster outfit's dance, unerringly picked the prettiest blonde on the floor and cut in. Without loss of time the enterprising infantryman suggested a stroll in the moonlight. The girl agreed and he escorted her to the truck. Excusing himself, he returned, cut in on the second prettiest blonde and brought her out also. When the truck was full Private Skinner roared back to the 134th's party with his giggling booty. The quartermasters haven't gotten over it yet.

New Design Takes Jolt

Out of Railroad Cars

Railroad history was made recently with the initial test run of a new "tree-floating" type of coach developed in Los Angeles.

Embodying radical departures in design from the standard car, it is hung from the railroad tracks instead of being balanced on top of them.

The car is remarkably free of swaying and jiggling, even at a speed of 102 m.p.h., attained during a trial run.

"Smooth as silk," observed veteran railroaders aboard the car. "The nearest thing to an airplane yet built to ride on rails."

The coach has the first fundamental car engineering innovations in more than 100 years of railroad history, according to Courtlandt T. Hill, president of the Pacific Railway Equipment company, builders.

The point of suspension in the car is above, rather than below, the center of gravity. Consequently, in negotiating curves at high speed, it does not lurch outward.
