

Post-Mortem Indicates No Foul Play In Death Of Alex. MacDonald

Body Of Man Missing For Month Found Saturday morning In Outhouse at Benoit Home, Victoria Street — Inquest Will Be Held

The search for Alex MacDonald, missing from his home, here, since October 9th ended Saturday morning with the finding of his body in a pit beneath an outhouse on the property of Joseph Benoit, Victoria street. The body was discovered by Antoine Sauve, son-in-law of Benoit, who reportedly searched the pit at the instigation of his wife who the previous night had dreamed the body would be found there.

A postmortem examination of the body was made on Sunday by Dr. W. Hay of Kingston, a pathologist. While declining to give the exact cause of death, Dr. Hay intimated there was no evidence of foul play. Dr. D. J. Dolan of Alexandria, coroner, has indicated an inquest will be held but no date has yet been set owing to the absence of Crown Attorney J. G. Harkness, K.C. of Cornwall, who is expected to return this week end from a trip to Calgary.

Final decision on holding of an inquest rests with Crown Attorney Harkness but Dr. Dolan states that it is his opinion an inquest should be held. While the autopsy showed no signs of foul play, the coroner pointed out that owing to the condition of the body external signs of violence, if present, could not be determined.

The body was discovered by Sauve about 8.30 Saturday morning and identification was made by Provincial Constable Joseph McBain of Alexandria, who is in charge of the investigation. Benoit on whose property the body was found, had been in jail since the previous day on a liquor charge, police revealed.

During the course of the search for the missing man police examined vacant buildings and haystacks in the Alexandria area and traced Mr MacDonald's movements up to 10.30 o'clock the evening of October 7th when he had been present at a party at the Benoit home. Investigation showed that liquor had been consumed at the party and that none of those present could recall seeing the victim after 10.30 o'clock. Those present told police they had no idea what happened to Mr MacDonald but at the time, assumed that he had gone home.

In the ensuing three weeks no special attention, other than a routine search was directed toward the Benoit property, it being assumed that he had left that area on the night of Oct 7. In the course of the widespread search, Public Utilities workmen last week dug up the excavation for a new water pipe installation on Victoria street not far from the Benoit home. It had been filled in recently and there was speculation he might have fallen into the excavation on the night he disappeared.

The peculiar construction of the outhouse on the Benoit property may have led to MacDonald's death. Built over a pit some four feet deep and which contained on Saturday, nearly three feet of water, the out-house utilized only two, inch-thick pieces of board running parallel some six inches apart instead of the usual solid covering. The front, perpendicular portion of the seat had been covered but the horizontal section directly over the pit was covered only by the two, slim pieces of wood.

Joseph Benoit, owner of the property said he had meant to finish the construction of the building but had not done so. The unfinished work left two wide gaps directly over the pit on either side of the slight supporting wooden slats.

A native of the Sixth Kenyon, Alexander Angus MacDonald was born 38 years ago, a son of Mr Archie MacDonald and his wife Catherine McCulloch, Ottawa street, Alexandria. Mr MacDonald attended the local schools and was widely known as a sign painter. He had contemplated going to work in the woods, this winter, and it was at first thought he might be found in one of the camps.

MacDonald saw service in the Army during World War II, enlisting in the S. D. & G. Highlanders in May 1940. He served for one year before being discharged on medical grounds. In addition to his parents, he leaves two brothers, Hugh MacDonald, and John MacDonald, of Alexandria, and (Continued on page 4)

Mayor Asks Brief Closing Monday

Local Branch Of Legion In Charge Parade To Cenotaph

"Remembrance Day should be observed as a most solemn occasion", Mayor Romeo Rouleau declared this week in issuing a statement asking all merchants and business firms to observe the day by closing between the hours of 10.30 and noon on Monday. This will give all ex-service employees and the public generally an opportunity to take part in the annual Remembrance Day ceremonies, here.

Alexandria Legion Branch No 423 will have charge of the annual parade to the Glengarry War Memorial at 10.45 o'clock in which ex-servicemen of both wars, reserve army men, school cadets and other groups will take part. The parade will form up this year on the town parking lot facing the Honor Roll on Chenier's building.

The local Branch of the Canadian Legion is making its annual POPPY DAY appeal to the people of this community tomorrow. The Poppy Fund is now a recognized institution wherever the Canadian Legion exists in Canada and it serves a two-fold purpose of much merit. The money which is raised by the distribution of the Poppy—the symbol of sacrifice—is used entirely to relieve unusual distress among War Veterans of the last war and the recent conflict, and their families. At all times it has been found that the Veterans, in view of the fact that many of them have disabilities and handicaps, suffer even more than others who are out of employment, since many of them require special care and attention which they are unable to provide. This is where the Poppy Fund, raised through the sale of Poppies by the local Branch if the Legion, steps in and provides relief for the situation.

There is another reason why every citizen should wear a Poppy for Remembrance Day. These Poppies are manufactured in the Vetcraft shops of Canada workshops in which handicapped Veterans are given sheltered employment, and in which they manufacture the hundreds of thousands of Poppies which are distributed every year at this time. By wearing a Poppy, citizens can find much satisfaction in knowing that they are helping these handicapped Veterans to obtain a livelihood which they would otherwise lack on account of their special disabilities.

This two-fold appeal should find a ready response in the hearts and minds of the people of this Community, which has always been ready to make the way easier for those of it's Citizens who served Country and Empire in the Great War, and in the recent conflict. We commend it to your sympathetic consideration, in the hope that you will respond generously and thus help to hold the torch flame to you by those who did not come back.

Among those present for the last rites from out of town were: Mrs F. X. Desmarais, Mr and Mrs Delor, Desmarais, Mr and Mrs Charles Desmarais, Mr and Mrs E. St. John, Mr and Mrs Romeo Houle, Winslow Lee Duncan St. John, Misses Elsie and Christina St. John, all of Montreal; Mr and Mrs Rae St. John, Kitchener; Mr and Mrs W. G. St. John Ottawa; William St. John, Island Falls, Me.; Mr and Mrs Laurie St. John, Maxville; Mrs W. C. MacLean, St. Lambert.

Quiet and unassuming, Mr St. John possessed a capacity for friendliness and a kindly disposition which made him a host of friends and assured the success of his business—a business in which he has been followed by several of his sons with equal success.

Many Mass cards, floral pieces and messages of sympathy were testimony to the friendly regard in which he was held.

Popular Maker Of Hockey Sticks Victim Of Accident Thursday Evening Last—Brothers And Niece Injured When Car Hits Truck

Joseph Choquette, sportsman and manufacturer of sporting equipment at Alexandria and Montreal, was almost instantly killed in a motor accident, at 9.30 Thursday evening of last week, when the car he was driving struck a parked truck on the Metropolitan boulevard near Dorval. Seriously injured were two brothers of the late Mr Choquette, Delphis, 68 and Edeas, 50, and a niece, Miss Madgeleine Filion all of Alexandria.

The group was motoring from Alexandria to Montreal when the accident occurred and there are no details as to the cause of the mishap, all the passengers in the Choquette car having been asleep at the time, it is reported.

Plant Temporarily Closed By Death

The local plant of Alexandria Wood Products has not yet returned to production following last Thursday's accident which involved the owner manager, foreman and bookkeeper. While no definite plans as to the future of the business, here have yet been announced it is expected production will get underway again as soon as Messrs. Edeas and Delphis Choquette and Miss Madgeleine Filion are able to resume work.

Most seriously injured of the passengers, Miss Filion suffered a fractured skull and is still undergoing treatment in St. Joseph's Hospital, La. chine. Edeas Choquette is resting at his home here, following injuries which included a skull fracture and four fractured ribs. At his Alexandria plant, Mr Choquette made hockey sticks and other wood products and the acquisition of his plant meant much to the welfare of the town, coming here as it did when relief rolls were at their highest. Generous and civic minded to a fault, Mr Choquette put friendship and neighborliness before profit and he had a host of admirers here, who learned with real regret of his tragic death.

Born at St. Gregoire, Que., he had resided in Montreal during most of his lifetime conducting a sporting goods store and manufacturing establishment on City Hall Avenue, in addition to his local plant.

To mourn he leaves his wife, the former Ernestine Filion, who left town a month ago to reside in Montreal for the winter months. Mr. Choquette was completing his last trip from Alexandria this fall when the accident occurred.

Three Kinds Of People

It is easy to generalize and say, "There are just two kinds of people in the world." The optimists, with rose-colored glasses, who say—"Everything will work out all right. It always has." And the pessimists, with dark brown taste, who say—"Everything is working out all wrong."

If there are only two kinds of people, the optimists will soon find their rosy glasses smashed. They will find that everything has not always worked out all right. They will find at least seven former civilizations that did not work out—that went out instead, and that are now entirely extinct. They will find the present age speeding rapidly on its way to becoming the eighth extinct civilization. And that the pessimists are right in thinking everything is working out all wrong.

There is fortunately a third kind of person—neither those who think everything is all right or all wrong—but who think everything can and should be all different and are giving everything they have and are to make it so. As described by Peter Howard in this book, "Ideas Have Legs", they introduce "into every equation of hopelessness the new element of change".

The fate of the world hangs on the success of this third kind of people. The fate of your town, of your business and of your street and home. Are you yourself one of these people? Or are you what Peter Howard calls "one of the Missing and Misty Millions"? These are the people, he adds who say "that the world is in a mess but do not believe that they had anything to do with putting it there, and cannot see that they have a part in pulling it out again. They all want to have the other fellow changed and are all waiting for the other fellow to begin."

TIME BOMBS

Some men fear responsibility more than they fear hunger.

The thing that keeps us apart from others is wanting to be better than they are.

Scientifically we have progressed far enough to split the atom. Now we must progress spiritually far enough to handle it.

Having good times doesn't bring about good times.

If you have no answer for the serious conditions in the world you refuse to face how serious they are.

Food Handlers Now Urged To Increase Clean Habits

The importance of cleanliness for everyone who handles food has been vividly demonstrated by recent statistics showing an increase in trench mouth and other respiratory diseases in certain boom towns which have sprung up to accommodate workers in war production. This increase has been traced to insanitary restaurants and soda fountains and to unhygienic habits of their employees.

Alert to the danger, health officers in these areas are undertaking blitzkrieg campaigns to improve the offending eating places. Inspectors make frequent swab tests of glasses, plates, silver, and all implements that touch the lips. When such tests show a bacterial count of more than 500 the proprietors are summoned and talked to on the vital importance of cleanliness to health. If conditions are unimproved when inspectors make a second visit, offenders are fined or their licenses revoked.

From these investigations officials have evolved rules regarding food handling which are as important for housewives as for restaurant workers. In substance these rules are, "Keep your fingers out of glasses and dishes. Pick up utensils by the handles, not by knife blades, fork tines, or the bowls of spoons. Keep fingers out of food. Always wash hands thoroughly with soap and water after visiting the toilet. Keep nails trimmed and hands clean. Avoid contaminating food by nose and mouth secretions. After handling handkerchiefs, dirty rags, and money, wash your hands thoroughly."

Fluorescent Lights Have Effect on Painting Scheme

Before painting an interior in which fluorescent lighting is to be used, it may be important to test the color of the paint under the fluorescent light before going ahead with the job, for the normal appearance of colored paint may be quite altered under this new type of lighting. Testing the paint with a light will enable a selection of paint which will look the way the occupants want it to look when the lights are on, even though it may appear a different color in undiluted daylight.

It has been pointed out that the results from the lighting depend upon the particular color involved. In some instances the color change may be comparatively minor, but with certain others, the colors may do peculiar things. For example, a cup of coffee under the light from a daylight fluorescent lamp seems to lose its coffee color and take on a rather unnaturally greenish tint. However, although a color may be changed in appearance under fluorescent light, it is not necessarily less attractive than under incandescent light.

Having Novel Experience

Wartime brides are having the novel experience of wondering what to do with the wedding gifts. When the groom is a service man who has to return to his post, the bride frequently continues to live at home instead of setting up her own housekeeping, and it is natural that she wants to preserve the lovely linens and laces and household furnishings for her own use when the war is over and "Johnny comes marching home." Fabrics deteriorate from lack of use almost as much as they do with use, unless they are cared for while being stored. A cedar chest for the linens and woollens is a grand storage place, and many a bride is naming it as one thing she would like to have whenever her preferences are consulted. In addition to securing a safe storage place, the bride should see that all washables are washed before storing. Sheets, pillow cases, towels, wash cloths, as well as table linens should be lightly laundered to remove commercial finishes.

Only Independent Africa Republic

Reports that American forces are now stationed in Liberia spotlight Africa's only independent republic, set amidst Europe's patchwork of colonies along the coast of West Africa. The Negro republic of Liberia is situated at the strategic "Atlantic Narrows," where the outthrust African continent faces the "bulge" of Brazil, says a National Geographic society bulletin. Up and down the coast, on both sides of Liberia, colonies of France and Great Britain are spaced, while farther along lie dependencies of Portugal and Spain as well. Vast French West Africa (Vichy-controlled) stretches back of Liberia along most of its landward borders. The much-discussed Vichy port and base, Dakar, is only about 750 air miles to the northwest.

Hybrid Seed Corn

Hybrid corn, grown commercially on thousands of farms, is the product of hybrid seed. Hybrid seed is the product of crossing two pure and wholly unrelated lines. (The mule is a hybrid, the product of crossing the mare and the ass.) The corn plant, having both female (silks) and male (tassel) parts, normally is self-fertilizing, writes Carlyle Hodgkin in the Omaha World-Herald. To cross two pure lines one, the "female" parent, must have its own tassels removed. They emerge not all at once but gradually over a period of about three weeks. This requires going over the seed fields daily, again and again, until no more tassels appear on the "female" rows.

Albania: A Little Nation Having a Long History

Albania, reported in armed revolt against the Italians, is a little country with a long history. Dwellers in a land about as big as Maryland, Albanians—the ancient Illyrians—have known for centuries what it means to be invaded, says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. First the Romans, then the Byzantines, Slavs, and Turks, and finally the Italians, moved in on them.

A 200-mile wedge between Yugoslavia and Greece, Albania is a land corridor—but with natural obstacles—leading into the Balkan peninsula. It dominates the narrow water gate opening on the Adriatic and Ionian seas; is only about 47 miles from the "heel" of the Italian "boot."

Wild and rugged, with some of its mountains more than a mile high, Albania offers only a difficult and precarious living to its million citizens, most of them farmers and stock-raisers. Many of the rivers are raging torrents in winter, dry beds in summer.

Safi Is, Like Casablanca, Another Important Harbor

Safi, southernmost beach head established by American troops in the North African campaign, ranks next to Casablanca among Moroccan Atlantic coast ports. It is the capital of the Abda-Ahmar district and the port for Marrakech, a city of 190,000 about 85 miles inland.

Of its 25,000 inhabitants, less than 2,000 are Europeans. Nearly all the remainder are Moslems.

A railroad links the city with Marrakech and Casablanca, and the latter, 135 miles north, may also be reached by modern motor coaches. A military airdrome is situated about five miles southwest of the town.

Safi has a 75-acre jetty-enclosed harbor with a depth of from 20 to 40 feet. Waterfront improvements include connection of the quays with the railway, fueling facilities, and cargo handling devices. Apparatus is available for loading phosphate at the rate of 1,000 tons an hour from a huge storage dump.

Tunisia's Garden of Eden

Three oases at Gabes, Tunisia's "southern resort," pour forth an abundance of water. These waters create a veritable Garden of Eden in the desert, an area covered with 200,000 palm trees, vineyards, olive and citrus groves and fertile gardens around the town. The drainage from the oases flows into Gabes bay, the deepest indentation on the Tunisian coast. Menzel and Djara are suburban villages of Gabes.

Dates are the principal export of Gabes. Even the light-draft harbor boats have difficulty in the shallow channel leading to the town's wharf, and cargoes and passengers must be lightered to and from larger vessels anchored a mile off shore in the gulf.

Normally Gabes is a popular tourist town, for its own lush beauties of nature in the desert; and as a base for visits to Tripoli, to the troglodyte, underground cliff villages at Matmata and Medenine, and to Djirba, largest island of the Barbary coast.

Largest City in Algeria

Algiers: The largest city in Algeria, with 252,000 people, this is one of the leading French African naval bases on the Mediterranean as well as an important port for trade between Algeria and France. About halfway between the Algerian frontiers of Morocco and Tunisia, Algiers is less than 400 airline miles across the Mediterranean from France. With a moderate climate, the city is a curious mixture of modern French city life and unchanging Arab customs, such as the veiling of women. The European part of Algiers has theaters, big hotels, open-air cafes, and up-to-date shops along broad paved avenues, where automobiles and street cars run. The naval base is not far from the commercial harbor.

Meat Be Cooked for Canning

Mrs. Cornelia C. Morris, extension food conservationist of North Carolina State college, says there are several ways to pre-cook meat for canning. "If meat is to be cooked before it is canned," she said, "it should not be more than half done. It can be browned quickly in a small amount of hot fat in a frying pan; it can be roasted in the oven; or it can be stewed or boiled. Do not add salt to the meat until after it is packed in the jars." Mrs. Morris also emphasized that a pressure cooker is essential in canning meats. Other methods are not safe, she declared.

Rare African Coast Island

A glance at the map of the Mediterranean shows that while there are many islands along the European shore there are comparatively few off the African coast. Pantelleria is one of the rare African coast islands. The Pantellerian strait has the shallowest water of the Mediterranean. Nowhere does its depth exceed 1,200 feet. There are many shallow spots, strangest of which is Graham shoal. In 1831 volcanic action there piled up a temporary island 107 feet high. It disappeared completely within four months. This shoal is now 50 feet under the surface.

PEPSI-COLA
IN THE BIG TWELVE OUNCE BOTTLE

THERE IS NO FINER CARBONATED BEVERAGE
"Pepsi-Cola" is the registered trade-mark in Canada of Pepsi-Cola Company of Canada, Limited.

Hello, Homemakers! Actions must give vent to our feelings, spurring us on to live happily together. Happiness in the home is reflected through out a community. And helping one another is one of the most unselfish ways of maintaining peace.

As captain of the household we suggest a few ways and means by which you can make home well-remembered.

1. Your next-door neighbour could possibly use an extra basket of fruit or vegetable which you may have in abundance. The old saying, "waste not, want not," should be a forethought.

2. That jar of sour cream or any other product which you do not use may be valuable to someone else. Phone your friends.

3. Before you become too tired to think during the busy week ahead consider where you have been losing energy and time. Let things go-by-the-board until you have readjusted your work. It may be that you require a basket to hold all the cleaning equipment for the upstairs, work and there should be one around at this season. It may be that your kitchen table is too low and causes you to stoop. This can be remedied with heavy castors which should be noted on your shopping list. One could write down many "wants" but little things do help.

4. Create a beauty spot in your living room with pieces of shrub or evergreen.

5. One of the best amusements for children on a rainy day is showing them how to make their own story book using scissors, paste pot and old magazines.

6. During the busy summer you did not have time to read. Now is the time to devote a little while every day to this pleasure.

7. Store materials separately. Summer wool sweaters must not be wrapped with rayon fabrics. And according to research, the best methods is to place garments in a bag or box so that they will be protected from the light and dust without making the bag or box airtight.

8. Initials on your belongings will solve a problem if you are taking laundry over to put in with mother's or the neighbour's.

9. Do not depend upon poor light when you are doing close work. Leading authorities agree that inadequate lighting can cause fatigue and eye strain.

Mrs. J. T. asks: How much cocoa do you substitute for 1 square of chocolate?

Answer: Use 2 2/3 tbsps. cocoa plus 1 tsp. shortening to substitute for 1 square chocolate.

Mr. N. L. asks: How to remove peach stain from blue tie.

Answer: Soak immediately in sweet milk.

Mrs. M. W. asks: How to soften paint brushes.

Answer: Simmer in vinegar.

Mrs. C. C. asks: Do cooked peanut hulls harm a child?

Answer: Peanuts should be given to children in small quantities as they may cause indigestion. Hulls are removed by rubbing on a board with a damp cloth.

Mrs. B. A. says: Half a cup of fruit juice poured over pork chops baked in the oven makes them delicious.

Anne Allan invites you to write to her c/o of The News. Send in your suggestion on homemaking problems and watch this column for replies.

KIRK HILL

The Kirk Hill Y.P.U. met in the United Church Hall on Friday evening.

The president opened the meeting by the call to worship after which the hymn "The Church has One Foundation," was sung. The scripture reading and synopsis were given by Dr. Gray and Lynus MacPherson led in prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read and roll call answered. After the business part of the meeting was well discussed the offering was received, all then united in singing the hymn, "Jesus calls us o'er the tumult."

A well prepared paper on temperance was given by A. K. MacLeod. After an interesting period of discussion and questions on this subject the meeting closed with the hymn, "Take my life and let it be," and repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

The subject for next meeting will be on citizenship taken by Kenneth MacDonald.

The combined Thanksgiving service of Kirk Hill, MacCrimmon and Dalkeith Auxiliaries was held in the United Church on Sunday morning Nov 3rd.

The service was entirely conducted by members of the Auxiliaries, Mrs Gray, president of Kirk Hill Auxiliary presided.

The million Band under the leadership of Mrs Donald MacLennan stood and repeated their Purpose—

I will love my Heavenly Father, And follow Jesus too

For He has shown me clearly What He wants me to do I will help the other children Both here and o'er the sea Jesus to know and God to love That World Friends we may be.

The Auxiliaries repeated in unison the Aim and Object of the W.M.S. After the singing of the children's hymn, Mrs Kenneth MacCaskill led in a comprehensive and up-lifting prayer, followed by "Prayer to a Heart" beautifully sung by Mr J. P. MacLeod. This prayer hymn was written by an Indian Christian poet.

The Scripture reading Romans 10, 1-15 was taken by Miss Jean Campbell. Mr James Grant, Supt. of the Sunday School was asked to make a presentation to Mrs Lachlan MacKinnon on behalf of the Sunday School. Mr Grant presented Mrs MacKinnon with a framed picture of Sollman's "Head of Christ" During his remarks Mr Grant spoke of the faithful service through the years of Mrs MacKinnon as from Sunday to Sunday she brought Christ's teachings before her class. Mrs MacKinnon responded in her usual sincere manner.

The address "Missionary Doctor" was taken by Mrs Gray. It was the story of one of the most outstanding characters of our time. Dr Mary Cushman who at the age of 53 went to Angola Africa and gave twenty years to remarkable missionary effort. During that time she established and equipped a modern hospital, founded a chain of dispensaries throughout a vast area and trained scores of men and women to bring health and freedom from fear to the natives.

The address closed with an appeal for greater effort in the interest of Christ's Kingdom.

After the singing of Creation's Lord we give Thee thanks, Dr Gray led in prayer and pronounced the Benediction.

'Go East, Young Man' Then Freeze in Soviet Climate

Moving eastward through Russia one encounters steadily colder weather. The coldest spot in Russia—the coldest in the world as well—is Verkhoyansk, in northeastern Siberia. The lowest temperature ever recorded—94 degrees below zero in winter—and a July sizzler of 93 degrees above zero give this spot the greatest recorded range of temperature on the face of the earth.

In October a dreaded wind, the razor-edged Buran, slashes its way through the open stretches of Siberia and cuts deep into the south of Russia. Whirling snow from the ground and the skies, the Buran strikes with a force stronger than any Montana blizzard and is death to anyone caught in its treacherous path.

Snow falls in Moscow sometimes as early as September. The first fall lasts only a day or two, and its melting turns the lands and roads into almost impassable bogs and marshes. The second snow lasts about a week, but the third usually comes to stay. Troikas—the Russian sleigh—in peacetime make their appearance almost as soon as the first inch of snow has settled on the ground.

Snow in the Moscow section is usually deep, and huge drifts are piled up by the strong winds that whip through the country. But strangely, in regions of Russia where heaviest snows might be expected, there is often none at all.

Italy's Great Naval Port, Spezia, Bombed by Britain

When long-range British bombers dropped explosives on Spezia, Italy, they struck at one of that country's greatest concentrations of floating equipment, naval installations, and supplies.

Situated on the west coast, about 50 miles southeast of Genoa, Spezia is approximately 675 air-line miles from London and 610 miles from Malta. It is heavily fortified. At Spezia are ship-building yards, the royal dockyard and arsenal, factories and machine shops, powerful hydraulic cranes, as well as torpedo and gunnery school ships. West of the naval port are large coal sheds and tanks of liquid fuels for the navy.

Amid the many inlets and intricate system of basins making up the vast harbor is a mercantile port, though most of the quays are reserved for the navy. The town of Spezia is at the head of the Gulf of Spezia. It is rated as having the largest and safest natural harbor of the Mediterranean.

Founded in 1371, Spezia now has a resident population of about 75,000.

New Mohawk Is Quality Spud

Mohawk is the name of a new high-quality baking potato introduced by the Cornell university agricultural experiment station. A cross of Green Mountain and Katahdin potatoes made by the agents of the department of agriculture in Maine, the Mohawk potato has been tested in New York state fields for eight years. It has out-yielded Chippewa and Katahdin, but not Green Mountain and Rural potatoes. According to Prof. Earl Hardenburg of the station, Mohawk shows great promise for growers who wish to market fancy baking potatoes. Mohawk requires good loam soil.

Mohawk potatoes are white, with shallow eyes that reduce waste in cooking, flaky skin, and white mealy flesh. The potatoes seldom show much second growth, growth cracks, hollow heart, or uneven shape. Mohawk produces a larger proportion of No. 1 tubers than any other variety yet tested in New York state. It is moderately susceptible to scab, blight, mosaic, and leafroll.

'Me No Sign'

It was time to sign the monthly payroll, and the top sergeant was calling the roll of his training company in the Medical Replacement Training center, Camp Barkeley, Texas. He called the name of one Chinese trainee repeatedly, with no success. The man didn't answer, in fact, he couldn't even be found.

Scouting the area, the sergeant finally located the trainee in the company latrine doing his laundry. He asked the soldier to accompany him to the company office and sign the payroll.

To that the Chinese lad gave an adamant reply: "Me no sign. Me wait hour to sign last month. And then me wait hour to get pay on pay-day. Then me lose money in crap game in 30 minutes. Me no sign!"

Lorient, Natural Naval Arsenal American Flying Fortresses recently deposited heavy bomb loads on the Nazi-controlled naval installations at Lorient, port of France's Brittany coast midway between Brest and St. Nazaire, Lorient was for many years France's foremost port for naval construction, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. The Nazis immediately turned the port into a submarine base following the French surrender in 1940. The setup was perfect since Lorient already had the heavy-duty cranes and drydocks for complete submarine overhauling. In addition the port was conveniently situated as a base for undersea raids on English channel and North sea shipping.

Bright Garments, Despite War, Are Now Available

While most women like to have a "good black" dress in reserve for social occasions when they don't quite know how formal or informal the event will be, jewel tones are the stylist's choice for war-time wear. Colors lift us out of our doldrums and help us to feel courageous when we have most need for bravery and faith.

According to S. C. Moody, a recognized authority on dyes, American women will be able to indulge in bright, colorful garments, because World War II finds the dye industry with ample supplies of practically all good, fast colors. Only about 10 of the 1,500 different colors made in America are affected by the war, and these are in the olive drab ranges which are used by the government for uniforms. With these exceptions, there is no scarcity of dyestuffs for civilian use, says Mr. Moody.

Thus encouraged, Mrs. America can buy her clothes in gay, cheerful shades. She need not worry, as in 1917-18, that American dyes will fade, or bleed, or run in the washing, provided she washes according to directions for each type of fabric. Many garments are labelled to give the necessary washing information. A good basic rule is to use low water temperatures, not above lukewarm. This is easy to judge, even without a thermometer, because water not above lukewarm feels neither hot nor cold to the wrist.

Gas-Tight Box Is an Aid In Keeping Virus Virile

Research on certain virus diseases has been hampered because some viruses live and multiply only on living cells. This has made it difficult to preserve supplies of these viruses for experiment or to interchange them between laboratories for comparison studies. T. P. Dykstra of the department of agriculture and H. G. DuBuy of the University of Maryland have devised a method for preserving plant viruses for several months. It relies mainly on keeping oxygen away from the virus material.

Recently it has been found practical to propagate some of the animal viruses by injecting them into eggs where they can be incubated and multiplied for use in the laboratory or to immunize animals. Many plant viruses, however, have been short lived and had to be kept alive by injecting them into a series of living plants.

The essential of the new method is a gas-tight box with openings at the ends into which rubber gloves are sealed. A glass cover enables the operator to see his hands at work. By crushing infected plant material in an atmosphere of carbon dioxide, evaporating the juice in a vacuum, and sealing it in a glass tube, the scientists preserved potato viruses for months.

Bombed Jap Naval Base

The Jap-occupied Russell Islands, raided by American dive bombers, are a 20-mile string of land spots beginning about 20 miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

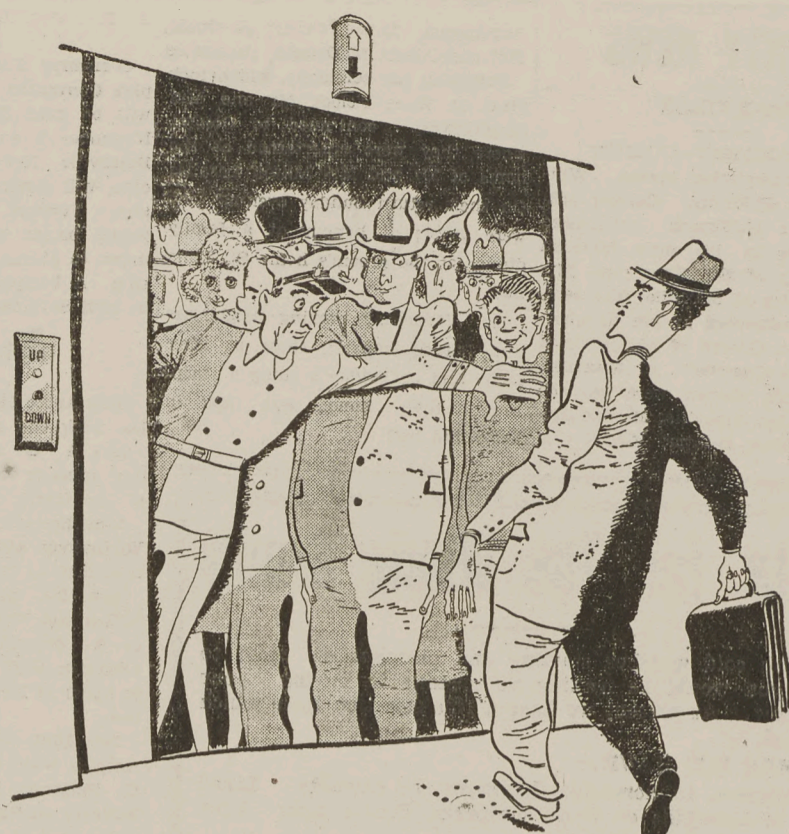

There are two main islands, Pavuvu and Banika, surrounded by a hundred islets too small even for designation on large-scale maps. All of them placed side by side would about double the area of the District of Columbia. Pavuvu, Banika and many of the islets rise abruptly from the ocean, thus providing many natural deep-water anchorages close to land shelter. In narrow Sunlight channel, separating the two main islands, and in the several arms of West bay and Paddy bay on the northern coast of Pavuvu, the water is more than 100 feet deep. These waters are about 15 minutes bomber flight from Henderson Field, Guadalcanal's airport. Only the islands of the Florida group, tiny Savo and Guadalcanal itself provide closer shelter for Japanese hide-and-seek naval maneuvers.

Snappers

A campaigner was constantly interrupted by a man in the crowd who kept shouting out, "Liar!" After this had happened a number of times, the speaker paused and, fixing his eyes on his tormentor, said, "If the gentleman who persists in interrupting will be good enough to tell us his name, instead of merely shouting his calling, I am sure we shall all be pleased to make his acquaintance." On one occasion, Lord North, while speaking in parliament, was interrupted by the loud howl of a dog in the body of the house. "I have been interrupted," he said, "by a new member of the house, but, as he has now concluded his argument, I will resume mine."—Alice Crowell Hoffman.

India's Tea Raisers

Most of the Dibrugarh region in India is well populated—more than 300 persons to a square mile in some sections. In the densely forested spots of the hill country the population thins considerably. Thousands of outside laborers are engaged in the productive tea gardens, but this region which is among the best of the tea-raising lands of India doesn't produce enough other food to feed the local populace and the imported workers. Grain, salt, oil, and other provisions must be shipped up the Brahmaputra from Calcutta for distribution in the town and villages near the tea gardens.

One more can be one too many

Even Hydro cannot always find immediate room for one more consumer.

Present demands for Hydro power taxes existing facilities to the utmost. This is due to ever-increasing use of low-cost Hydro service plus necessarily restricted Hydro construction during and since the war. Shortage of materials and equipment makes it impossible to speedily accomplish expansion long since planned.

Lines and transformers now serving only one district can carry just so much power. Wherever that capacity is being completely used by present consumers, addition of new customers could be made only at the expense of service to the old, until new materials for extensions are obtainable. This condition applies in city, town and country. Everything possible is being done to overcome it. New equipment is being installed as fast as it becomes available. Your Hydro Commission trusts and believes you will recognize the facts; and assist, by your patient co-operation, in the orderly restoration of the prompt service that your Hydro always strives to maintain.

In the meantime, let your Hydro know as early as possible of any planned substantial increase in your power needs, and use this low-cost servant wisely.

Upon their return the couple will reside at Glen Gordon, Ont.

Mr and Mrs James A. Sangster, Glen Gordon, entertained a few friends and neighbours on Saturday to welcome home their son, Neil and his bride, the former Jean Alma McEwen. About 40 guests spent the evening in dancing Mrs D. MacDonald, Mrs T. O. McLaren, and Mr W. Seguin providing the music. G. L. Sangster rendered a few solos, which were received very appreciatively.
Mrs Sangster assisted by Tena, Jean and Georgina Sangster and Mrs H. Mitchell, served a bountiful lunch after which McKell Fraser called the company to order and in a few well chosen words wished the bride and groom much happiness. The groom responded fittingly.
The company joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" and "Auld Lang Syne."

Her embroidered floor-length veil was held in place with a crown of net embroidery and white flowers. She carried a bouquet of white lilies and ferns.
The maid of honor was wearing a floor-length dress of pink sheer with headress of small pink flowers, having a shoulder length veil of the same shade. Her bouquet was of pink roses.
Mr. Fred Boudreau was bestman. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home. The cut-of-town guests were, Mrs. Herve Trotter of Cornwall, Mr. and Mrs. Alcade Trotter and son Andre, Mrs. Ernest Quenneville, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Larocque, Mrs. Leopold Marcoux, Mrs. Anthony Dore and Mr. Joseph Boudreau, all of Alexandria. Later Mr and Mrs Boudreau left on a honeymoon trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls. The bride travelled in a Fuschia costume and black Tuxedo seal coat with black accessories to match and she wore a corsage of white carnations.

They will reside in Montreal.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Saturday October 26th with the president Mrs Stanley Kippen in the chair. It was decided to take charge of the Halloween party which will be held in the Institute Hall on Thursday night. Mr Hunter of Cornwall will show motion pictures to entertain the children.

Mrs Kippen delegate to the Eastern Ontario convention held in Ottawa this month, gave an interesting account of the meetings.

Mrs Leo Guindon was bride was welcomed by Mrs A. H. Robertson on behalf of the community and presented with flannelette blankets and pillow cases by Mrs W. J. McMillan. Mrs A. D. Stewart welcomed her on behalf of the Red Cross.

Mrs E. S. Winter hostess for October spoke briefly on the motto "Lest We Forget" quoting from Rudyard Kipling's writings. Many and varied interesting facts about Maxville were brought out in response to the roll call.

Mrs Leonard J. McNaughton gave a most interesting account of their farm from the earliest settlement to the present time. She showed pictures of the older generations of McNaughtons and showed a cook-book taken from Scotland by Mrs John McNaughton (Leonard's great grandmother) also a linen sheet spun and woven from flax grown on the farm by McNaughton's. This proved very interesting and will be included in the Tweedsmuir Village History of Maxville community which is to be prepared shortly.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

Exceptionally fine services were conducted in Maxville United Church on Sunday, October 20th by Rev J. H. Hamilton on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary. The minister and congregation of St Andrew's Presbyterian Church joined in the evening worship and Rev H. A. Doig assisted in the service. Rev A. I. Higgins B.A. B.D. of MacKay Street Church Ottawa was the guest preacher and delivered inspiring and challenging messages. He spoke of the Church as built on a rock of confessing men and women but it has lost its grip on God. Secularism with its crass materialism its spirit of atheism, its disregard of our spiritual heritage, lack of reverence for the Sabbath and the education of children in spiritual ignorance has taken its place. Another cause for anxiety is the need for a universal body of reference to unify all people in a spiritual oneness to supersede culture and nationalism.

But Little Left of Bougie, Once Thriving Metropolis

Bougie, thrust into the war news by United Nations landing forces, lies slightly more than a third of the way between Algiers and the Tunisian border.

"Bougie" means candle, or candle power, in French, says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. If light from Bougie were beamed due north across the Mediterranean it would strike Marseille, some 460 miles away.

If the American forces of occupation were on a peacetime mission they would find that Bougie presents opportunities for some interesting sightseeing. Remains of ancient forts, walls, and other structures recall its importance from earliest recorded time.

When Carthage was in power, the site of what is now Bougie was a thriving post for trade. The Romans later called it Saldae, and erected there fortifications, baths, and handsome public buildings. The Vandals and the Berbers captured it in turn. During the 11th century, the Berbers made it a metropolis of a hundred thousand inhabitants, with mosques, colleges, and an active business in tile and pottery manufacture. Later came the Turks and other conquerors. By the time the French moved into the city, in the 1830s, centuries of international wars and piracy had so devastated it that little remained except ruins.

Casablanca Principal Port For French West Africa

Casablanca, Morocco's Atlantic port where United States bombers are reported to have dropped hundreds of bombs on extensive harbor installations, is Morocco's principal port and western terminus of the railroad running east through French North Africa, says the National Geographic society. Just before the war tonnage had increased some 15 times in a quarter century. Since France took possession 35 years ago it has poured $65,000,000 into harbor developments. The harbor and railroad connections were the leading factors in promoting a Moorish fishing village into a modern city of 175,000 population, nearly half European.

In addition to a battery of cranes there is a floating dock, pipe line for oil fuel, and railway sidings over which pass more than half of Morocco's export trade, and 70 per cent of the imports.

Two long moles enclose the 350-acre harbor, dominated by huge warehouses and grain elevators. Special quays handle coal and phosphates.

Dr. Campbell addressed the women's M'issionary Society at their Thanksgiving Service, Sunday evening which was well attended.

Miss Katie MacDonald is spending a few days in Ottawa this week with her cousin Mrs Alastair MacKenzie.

Muriel MacDonald and Donald Cameron, Montreal were week end visitors at their homes here.

Mr and Mrs R. Dewar and daughter Miss Dorothy and Miss Frances MacCuaig, Kirk Hill, were visitors of Mr and Mrs James Campbell on Sunday.

Miss Christina MacDonald, after spending her holidays with her mother, Mrs Douglas MacDonald and brother Gordon, left on Thursday for Toronto.

UNHOLY BOND

What are you shouting at, William Abby called.

"Pigeons," he said, "pigeons—Irene said the snowstorm would drive them over here."

Janet gasped. . . . How clever of Irene Gremont! The storm gave her an opportunity to make a nuisance of William. There were coveys of wild doves that nestled around Oakhart, but they would have sought shelter in the heavily blanketed, protective branches of evergreens edging the woodlands beyond the orchard.

"The pigeons have all gone home, William, and you should, too," Abby suggested, but it had little effect.

"No, no, not until I get a bird." Cliff turned to Janet, his dark eyes flashing with anger as his breath funneled mistily into the air.

"How did he get hold of a gun? He ought to be kept under lock and key." "Is he — is he crazy?" Naomi said.

"No, just simple-minded — child. ish," Janet explained hopefully.

William was waving the rifle around carelessly and Cliff swore in a deadly soft voice. "You girls had better go back to the house," he said. "Let Richard and me handle this affair."

But Richard had made up his mind. He began walking steadily forward in the ruts previously made by William's boots.

"Give me that gun, William." The big awkward man began backing away, feeling behind him with his feet for a steady foothold.

"No, it's mine!" His voice soared in a scream of rage.

"I said to give it to me, William." Richard's voice was steady, he was closer now, only twenty yards separated them. William Hartigan's face was distorted like a small, angry boy's. He stepped backward, then suddenly he stumbled!

The explosion was like a sullen thunderclap in the still air.

For a moment Richard stood quite still, an expression of surprise lighting his face, then slowly like a tree that has felt the last blow of the axe he pitched forward into the snow.

"Richard!" The anguished cry was wrung from Janet. She began struggling through the new drifts, frantically staggering trying to reach his side. The others were on her heels.

William Hartigan, seeing them all converging on him at once, floundered to his feet and with great leaping strides, he ran back toward the river through the orchard. He had abandoned the gun in the snow.

"Richard! Richard, speak to me!" Janet's numbed fingers fumbled with his broad shoulders as Cliff reached her side and helped her turn Richard over. He threw back the side of Richard's coat and felt around when his fingers were withdrawn they were dark-stained and crimson. The spot was beginning to spread across the white broadcloth of Richard's shirt. He moved slightly, half opened his eyes.

"Janet, I want you to" His head fell back as he fainted. Janet moaned softly. Cliff's voice came to her indistinctly, then he was shaking her shoulder sharply. "Listen to me, Janet, we'll have to get him to the house. Do you understand?" She nodded dumbly and he turned to Naomi. "Run back as fast as you can and phone the hospital for an ambulance immediately."

She left silently and he examined Richard's wound again. "We will have to risk it—Abby you and Janet take his feet, I'll carry his shoulders."

Naomi met them at the door, her face was white and frightened in the flickering unsteady light of a candle. "I can't get anyone, the phone is dead and the lights are out—the storm must have knocked down the power lines. I sent Mr Miles to the highway to stop some passing car."

Janet watched Cliff's lips tighten grimly.

They carried Richard into the den. Cliff staunchly the flow of blood and put a sterile pad over Richard's wound. He tried the telephone and lights every few minutes, but they remained dead. Then he stationed him self by the window, straining his eyes into the darkness for signs of a car.

At last he tapped out his cigarette. "We can't wait any longer—we'll have to put Richard in my car, and drive him in."

Janet felt drained of all her strength. She stood by Richard's side staring down into his unconscious, curiously peaceful face, feeling his pulse, watching his breathing become more labored.

Naomi turned suddenly from the window. "There's Mr Miles! I see his flashlight coming up the drive."

She and Cliff rushed to the front door. The older man peered up at them ruefully, his mustache crusted with snow.

"Couldn't get hold of anyone—no cars passin' an' the lines are down all over."

"We'll have to take my car then," Cliff said, "there's not a minute to lose—the wound's in a bad spot."

"You wouldn't get three blocks," Mr Miles protested. "The new snow has fixed the road up good. There's a couple of stalled cars abandoned on the highway now. You'd get stuck like them."

Cliff's cigarette made a small fiery arc as he flicked it out into the snow. "It seems the die is cast," he said bitterly.

Cliff came back into the den, glanced quickly at Richard's white face, then took Janet's hands in his. . . . "Janet, I'll have to operate. I haven't done many, as you know, and never one of the sort, but I'll do the best I know how—we can't wait."

His eyes looked dark and, she thought, uncertain but they met hers very directly.

"I believe in you, Cliff." His fingers tightened on hers for one brief moment, then he dropped them and turned to Richard. When he spoke his voice was almost harsh.

"Help me get his coat off, Naomi, boil a pot of water and bring it into the laboratory."

She left without a murmur. They managed to lift Richard to the white examination table but he was so tall that his long legs hung over the end and Cliff had to drag another small table over to balance them.

The kerosene lamps made the small sterile room seem alien to Janet. She went about her work automatically assembling the instruments Cliff would need, laying them on a clean towel, getting out rubber gloves.

They cut Richard's shirt off him. He lay silent, unmoving while his croak chest rose and fell steadily, blood welling from the wound with each breath. Under Cliff's instruction Naomi dripped ether on a gauze mask and held it over Richard's face.

"All right, Janet, I'll begin." Cliff's tone was terse, professional. Their eyes met briefly as she handed him the probe.

His fingers moved quickly, skillfully as she had seen him move once before. But it was not easy. He had difficulty locating the bullet. He had to work with caution, the wound was dangerously close to the left lung, one slip and—

He had the power in his hands now Cliff knew exactly how dangerous the wound was. One slip of the scalpel and Janet would be released from the conflicting emotions that had become a torment.

He swore softly under his breath. She looked up, stared across at him his forehead was beaded with a fine dew of perspiration!

She smiled across at him, but he seemed hardly aware of her identity. "Hand me the flashlight," he snapped at Naomi.

He peered into the wound probing feeling, and then, suddenly like a pea out of a pod, the bullet was out and lying in Cliff's open palm. But he didn't pause. . . . Only when sulphur had been used the wound cleaned and closed, and dressed, did he straighten up and mop the moisture from his forehead. He grinned at Janet.

"As soon as the road's open we'll have someone from the hospital come out and examine him, but I think he'll be all right."

She swallowed. "Oh, Cliff you've been wonderful." "Never mind—he isn't well yet. I'm glad there is a fireplace in his bedroom we want to keep it at as even a temperature as possible. Naomi, ask Mr Miles to see that there's plenty of wood, will you?"

She and Cliff got Richard into bed then he turned to her. "This has been a strain for you, Janet—why don't you go into the kitchen and get something to eat?"

"No, Cliff, you go. Mrs Miles has some of her hot coffee on the stove and there are lots of things in the icebox. Get Naomi to fix something up for you. Please. . . . I want to stay with Richard."

"You love him very much, don't you?" She could only nod and turn away as her eyes filled with tears.

Janet and Cliff took turns sitting beside Richard's bed. He seemed to be resting easily and while one watched checking on his pulse and respiration the other stole a few moments of sleep in the adjoining den.

It was still early in the evening when Janet caught herself nodding in her chair; she was startled awake by Naomi's voice in the next room. It was high and annoyed—

"Cliff, I think I should be beside Richard now."

"Janet is his wife, Naomi."

"You'd never know it. I've never seen any signs of affection between them. He—he likes me."

Greenhouse Supervisor Gives Tongue Twisters

If your tongue tangles on such daily Russian communiques from Ryazhak, Voronezh, and Borisglouesk, try pronouncing the scientific names of plants in the Pennsylvania State college botany garden, says Albert F. Hildebrand, college greenhouse superintendent.

For a starter, try Cochlearia amorica, horseradish in ordinary American and named after the Greek goddess of love, Hildebrand suggests. Another is Saxifraga michauxi, a juicy morsel that rabbits had no difficulty in eating up despite its name.

Started last year to satisfy scientific needs, the botany garden contains more than 50 families of plants. Among the plant groups are Baptisia australis, indigo plant formerly used in the manufacture of dye, and Cassia marilandica, ordinary edible peas and beans.

The after-dinner excuses for chewing gum, onion and garlic, are called allium cepa and allium sativum. Visitors who have Kentucky colic in their families may want to learn how to pronounce Melissa officinalis, a highly scented mint.

If a few persons have survived the articulation test, they may try their mettle on the nightshade family which includes Solanum capsicastrum, the Jerusalem cherry; Nicotiana tobaco, "fags" to the smoker; Solanum melangena, egg plant; or Solanum tuberosum, the lowly "spud."

Climbing Lofty Peaks Is Dangerous Sport

Mountain climbing—the scaling, that is, of authentic major peaks—combines the aspects of one of the world's most dangerous and exacting sports with exploration in the broad sense and a developed skill which has become one of the most specialized and stylized on the globe.

Lofty heights are a challenge to venturesome men, and because of the test of physical stamina and courage, and because also there is a distinct scientific side to mountain climbing, techniques have been worked out which the experts all employ, writes Paul I. Wellman in the Kansas City Times. The nomenclature of mountaineering is enough to show how specialized this is:

Aiguille, a rock spire; arete, a ridge; crampons, climbing irons attached to the soles of boots for use on ice or snow; crevasse, a deep fissure in a glacier; gissade, sliding down a snow-slope; piton, a metal spike to be driven in rock or ice to afford a foothold; traverse, the horizontal or diagonal crossing of a mountainside, and so on.

Amateurs are warned never to attempt really serious heights, unless they have with them expert guides or companions, and even then only after much practice and conditioning. And above all they should not go without the proper equipment of clothing, climbing shoes, ropes and gear.

Willow Ware

There is a story about the figures on the blue willow ware dishes. This legend is associated with the Willow Ware pattern: Koong Shee, daughter of a mandarin, despite her father's opposition loved his secretary, Chang. The mandarin imprisoned her in a pavilion by the lake, over which willow trees hung their boughs, from which she was rescued by Chang. An alarm notified the father who pursued them across the bridge, but love triumphed and the pair entered a boat, usually shown in the design, and found safety on the opposite shore. Their happiness was disrupted by a former jealous suitor who discovered their abode and set fire to it, killing the lovers. Their souls were united in the form of two doves, who are represented flying above the willow trees.

Gold, Silver Markings

It is easy for amateurs to decipher those symbols which were first stamped on articles of gold and silver by the Goldsmiths' company at Goldsmiths Hall in London as evidence of the purity of the metal, through the use of key manuals which any dealer in antique silver has. Oddly enough these marks, which are so helpful to modern collectors and dealers in determining the age of English silverware, were first used to indicate the sterling qualities of the pieces and were not intended as a date stamp.

As early as 1300, writes Deborah P. Teel in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, a law was passed in the British Isles which provided that a leopard's head should be placed on all solid silver by the goldsmith.

House Numbers for Farms

Numbers for farm houses may seem just a bit too cuffed, but the plan has advantages as is proved in the states of Oregon and Washington where there are about 600 miles of public roads on which every farm has a number. The numbers not only indicate the highways, but distance and direction from the courthouse. All numbered farms are then listed in a directory which also gives the telephone number, principal farm products and number of acres in the farm. This directory is very useful for buyers but the advantages of the plan seem to outweigh any disadvantages.

Famous Georgian Military Road Paved in Caucasus

The famous Georgian Military road, the northern entrance to which German forces are attempting to seize, is more than 130 miles long. It stretches from Ordzhonikidze (formerly Vladikavkaz or "Ruler of the Caucasus") to Tiflis, capital of the Soviet Republic of Georgia in the Transcaucasus, and scene of Premier Stalin's early revolutionary activities against the Tsarist government. It is the only paved road suitable for heavy motor traffic through the towering ranges of the Caucasus mountains.

The Georgian road starts out in open rolling country at both ends, rising gradually toward a central stretch of about 80 miles that runs through some of the wildest and most majestic scenery on earth.

Crowding the clouds far above the snow line, several of the mountains along the way are tipped with perpetual white. Others, so sharp and bare that snow will not cling, form a desolate chaos of jutting red and brown pinnacles. In places, the road is a rocky shelf out from the mountainsides, below which streams rush in churning torrents. Occasionally it dips into green, settled valleys, beside fields of rye and oats, or rolls gently through deeply wooded hills. As it nears the steep watershed of the main Caucasus range, it winds between precipitous walls toward the Pass of the Cross, nearly 7,800 feet above sea level.

War's Separations Adding To Loyalties of Families

Family loyalties have been intensified in the majority of homes by separation brought about by the war, according to Dr. Bernhard J. Stern, lecturer in sociology at Columbia university. Sons and daughters scattered over the country in camps and at work find necessary emotional security in symbolic association with their families, he says.

Dr. Stern believes that the developments in the family which the war is accelerating and which have generally caused alarm, have been under way for over a century. He lists these as the urbanization of the family, the decline of the power of the father, the increased importance of the wife and children as personalities, and the participation of the government in functions formerly left to the family.

The war is causing a vast shifting of populations, Dr. Stern states. "When a family moves from the small community which has fixed the relationships of its members, to a city where families all differ in their habits of life, a disruption of routines occurs."

"Though in already unstable homes the effect sometimes is disastrous to family unity, in other cases family loyalties are intensified because of the emotional security the home gives to its members."

Calling All Yodelers!

There was a bit of confusion in the finance office recently. In fact, it sounded like a "double talker's" paradise for awhile, all because of an error on a signature on the enlisted men's payroll, Camp Berkeley, Texas.

Sergt. Louis Roberts, checking the roll, came across the name "Mee Tee Soo Hoo," but the individual, a member of the Special Training Detachment, MRTC, had signed his name "Hoo Mee Tee Soo." Roberts, rather dazed, called S-T-D headquarters for a verification and the clerk gave the name as "Mee Tee Hoo Soo."

Lieut. Harvey C. Markeley, assigned to the detachment, claims that "Mee Tee Soo Hoo" is correct. "Gosh," a reporter remarked. "I'll bet that sergeant was pretty confused about the whole thing."

"Hoo? Me too," said the lieutenant.

Major Had Good Time

An army major who must have had a good time at some recent USO dance, sent this letter to a Miss Mary Winn of New York city: "You are much too nice to know for only one evening. Could you put me on your list for a Christmas card?" At the bottom of this diplomatic overture to further correspondence were the names and addresses of two other Mary Winns, evidently culled from the phone book, with the implied plea that if the first to receive it didn't happen to be the right lady, please pass the letter on. The Mary Winn who received it happened not to be the right one, but was a staff member of a nationally syndicated magazine, and passed it on through the columns of the publication, asking nothing in return but a piece of the wedding cake to sleep on.

Rust Resisting Flax

A. C. Dillman, associate agronomist, division of cereal crops and diseases, bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, reports that in a comparative test of 25 varieties of flax at Fargo, N. D., the principal variety of flax now grown in the North Central states, which is susceptible to damage from rust, yielded only 14 bushels to 27 bushels. He said that the growing of resistant varieties is the most practical means of controlling flax rust. American flax is grown for its seed, which is crushed to yield linseed oil, which is largely used in paint and some other industrial products.
