Sudden Death Of Dr. MacDiarmid At Maxville Home Comes As Shock

Heart Attack, Early Tuesday Evening, Fatal To Popular Former Member For Glengarry—Funeral Being Held This Afternoon

All Glengarry was shocked by the news of the sudden death early Tuesday evening, at his home in Maxville of Dr. William B. MacDiarmid Liberal Member for Glengarry in the House of Commons from 1940 to 1945 and one of the most widely known and highly regarded residents of the county.

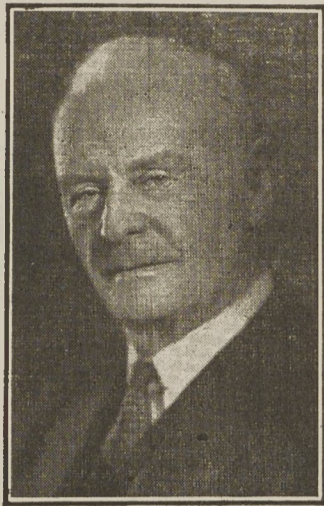

Dr. MacDiarmid, who had planned to attend the convention of the Ontario Liberal Association at Toronto this week as delegate from Glengarry suffered a heart seizure and died at 8 p.m. Tuesday. In apparent good health until suffering the heart attack, Dr. MacDiarmid would have celebrated his 73rd birthday next Friday May 23rd.

The funeral will be held Friday, May 16th at 2.30 o'clock Daylight Time from his late residence to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Rev. H. A. Dolg will officiate and the interment will be in Maxville cemetery under Masonic auspices.

A son of the late Dr. Donald MacDiarmid Inspector of Public Schools, Glengarry and his wife Agnes Burton Dr. MacDiarmid was born at Athol, May 23rd, 1874 the family later removing to Maxville. He was educated at the local school Alexandria High School and Cornwall High School before taking his medical studies at McGill University, Montreal where he graduated in 1901. His medical course was preceded by a period of 1-2 yrs. when at the age of 18, he taught school at Greenfield and Dominionville.

Since his graduation, Dr. MacDiarmid had practiced his profession continuously at Maxville and three generations of the people of northwest Glengarry, Roxborough township and adjoining areas of Prescott will remember their good humored country doctor with loving regret.

Dr. MacDiarmid's service to the Liberal party had been recognized several times by his nomination as candidate at party conventions, but his first experience with politics in either the municipal or a wider field came in 1940 when he successfully contested Glengarry in the Federal campaign. He was again successful in the 1945 Dominion election but resigned his seat in order to allow Prime Minister Mackenzie King to run in a September bye-election. His gift as a story teller

DR. W. B. MACDIARMID was well known on Parliament Hill from whence have come many expressions of regret in his passing.

Dr. MacDiarmid was a progressive citizen of Maxville and he will be sorely missed there. One of the community's most ardent hockey fans he had been a stalwart of the local lacrosse team at the turn of the century and had played football with both Maxville and Alexandria. He was noted for his prowess at putting the shot and had made a name for himself in that sphere at McGill.

Undoubtedly Dr. MacDiarmid was best known and most appreciated as a plain country doctor (his own description), and the Maxville area knew him for his quick response to every call despite weather and road conditions during 46 years of invaluable service.

His genial vivacious personality and ever-welcome presence will be sorely missed over a wide area.

Dr. MacDiarmid was a member of the A.F. & A.M. and of Glengarry Chapter, Royal Arch Masons.

Left to mourn are his wife, the former Eva Smille; one son John William (Bill) who served overseas with the S.D. & H. Highlanders; a brother John MacDiarmid of Winchester and two sisters, Mrs. A. Brodie of Montreal and Mrs. Fraser McQuat of Sherbrooke, Que.

Cheese Board Held Inaugural

Secretary's Report Shows Big Drop In 1946 Boarding

The reorganization meeting of the Alexandria Cheese Board was held at the Fire Hall, Thursday, May 8th, Horace Marjerison acted as chairman and George McMillan as secretary.

The report of the secretary for 1946 was read and showed a total boarding for the year of 43,751 boxes, a decline of over 17,000 boxes from 1945.

The election of Officers returned the same officers as for 1946 viz:—President — Archie A. McDougald, Secretary, S. O'Connor, Directors — Charlottenburg, Finlay, McIntosh; Kenyon, Cleveland McPhee; Lochiel, G. Ibert McRae; Lancaster Rod McLeod.

A total of 546 boxes of cheese was boarded and sold to regular buyers. As there is considerable confusion as to the price to be paid for cheese this year, Donald McDonald, representing Belleville Cheddar cheese, and F. B. Brownridge, representing Canada Packers were asked to explain the situation. The question of price seemed to be rather confused as no definite statement was forthcoming.

Representatives of McLagan, Ayers, George Hodge and Olive & Dorion members of the Montreal Produce Trade were present and spoke in turn, each emphasizing the confusion as to price not only of cheese but of butter as well. Each expressed a desire to help the cheese industry as much as possible and complimented Alexandria Board on its fair way of distribution. Mr. Olive of the firm of Olive & Dorion recommended a petition to the Ontario Government asking for a continuance of the 2c bonus on cheese in force the last few years.

Incidentally the secretary of the Board, S. O'Connor has since received an intimation that the bonus would be paid and that the Ontario Minister of Agriculture would make an announcement to this effect shortly. This would make 25 cents straight from the buyers, 2 cents from the Province of Ontario and the Federal bonus on quality of 2 cents on 94's and 1 cen on 93's or a total of 29 cents. The Federal bonus of 30c per 100 lbs of milk will not be paid after May 1st, the fixed price of cheese at 50 cents taking its place.

hands, war criminals, traitors, persons who have assisted enemy forces, and those who fled into Germany to avoid falling into allied hands."

Since there has been considerable comment about Canada's attitude towards immigrants and displaced persons, this official explanation is regarded as significant to avoid misunderstanding of the whole problem facing this country at this time.

WHISPERS OF DISCONTENT

For some time now whispers have been heard backstage in Ottawa about charges that French-speaking Canadians have not only received an insufficient number of appointments to the Civil Service of Canada but that not enough such persons have occupied positions in the higher levels of this Civil Service such as Deputy Ministers or similar posts. In fact, it is known that the Prime Minister has received a communication from an M.P. pertaining to such a charge. However it is now coming into the open more and more with the disclosure that the Que. Legislature has indicated that it deplors the fact that French-Canadians are not getting a fair deal in this respect.

It is alleged that with one-third of the population being French-Canadian, the number of appointments especially in the higher posts of the Civil Service is not proportionally in tune. Then again it is understood in Ottawa that the whole problem is under serious consideration.

MORE DIVORCES

With divorces involving a steadily rising number of applications to the committee of the Senate reaching almost record figures this session, there is evidence that this breaking up of marriages in Canada is multiplying rather than disappearing in this post-war period and instead of making divorce easier there is a growing view that it might be a good point to tighten the bonds of marriage.

IMPORTANT IMPLICATIONS

It is expected in usually well-informed quarters that the abolition of the Excess Profits Tax at the end of the present calendar year may bring in its wake an increased production in Canada so that then will start a decline of prices from the present higher and higher rise in prices which enter the everyday cost of living.

This important interpretation is given to counteract the claim that the budget recently announced did not endeavour to help business in general since the so-called invisible or hidden taxes high taxes of wartime have been continued including taxes on jewellery furs, leather goods, cosmetics, tobacco, etc., with these allegedly hurting business in these lines and keeping up the everyday costs which enter the normal lives of Canadians. However as already mentioned it is believed that it will be possible after the turn of 1947 and the Excess Profits Taxes disappear to produce more and to bring about a gradual decline of prices. At least this is heard to be the interpretation or implication of the change and experts hold this opinion in Ottawa about its likely effects on business. Indeed experts claim that the man-in-the-street across Canada may be pleasantly surprised by the aftermaths of the abolition of the Excess Profits Taxes.

JUST "FRONTS"

Testifying before the Committee on Public Accounts of the House of Commons Dr. E.H. Coleman, Deputy Canadian of Enemy Property in the Secretary of State Department, declared that he had been shown evidence of chains of companies operating in such a way that it was almost impossible to tell who was the ultimate holder of assets. This evidence was shown in London and Washington, though Dr. Coleman said the same thing prevails in regard to assets of aliens held in Canada with assets of belligerent enemies held in Canada amounting to about $20,000,000 and others including neutrals and proscribed or occupied countries having been valued at $300,000,000 or more.

PERMANENT RESIDENTS

The Minister of labor Hon. Humphrey Mitchell in giving figures on immigrants coming into Canada for work on farms and in sugar beet growing areas has emphasized that these are coming in as permanent residents. He also indicated that whereas a number of members of Parliament have made speeches urging immigration, yet when the Government sets immigration in motion there are always some objections taken with Mr. Mitchell adding that discretion and judgment will be exercised in admitting immigrants into the country.

The Anti-Mentality

"They shall not pass" was the watch word of the United Nations during the war. It still seems to be their watchword invoked against each other during peace. We are still fighting against something instead of for anything. We are still trying to prove what's wrong instead of proving a GREAT RIGHT. In this widespread anti-mentality even the freedom we so dearly preserved is only freedom from oppression. What is freedom for?

Do we use freedom to build sounder happier homes or just to give freer rein to wives and husbands parents and children whose selfishness splits homes? Do we use free enterprise in work to make all men secure and happy or just as the privilege by which some grow more prosperous than others? Do we make democracy a framework in which to build the character of men, or do we just let lack of character in men undermine democracy? Do we realize that "As I am, so is my nation," or do we complain that the nation ought to be different so we could be better off?

We could make our nation so different if we ourselves began to live differently that the free and democratic way of life would appeal to all mankind. Then the world's clashing anti-mentalities would ebb, swing around into a positive flood tide and merge in common support of this new and desirable way of life.

TIME BOMBS

Service to the human race begins with performance of our duties as citizens.

The fate of nations depends upon the character of individuals.

The task of democratic government is not to govern but to inspire people to govern themselves.

We grow to resemble what we admire.

If you try to take too much in hand you'll put your foot in it.

Some leaders play down to human nature. Others point men up to their high destiny.

Hello Homemakers! One of the most popular salads in men's clubs is asparagus vinaigrette—chefs tell us. They say that this is simply chilled freshly-cooked asparagus stalks served on crisp lettuce with vinegar and oil sauce. A chef renowned for his sauces was kind enough to supply the following recipe and pointed out that a small quantity of tarragon vinegar makes a difference. It is also good with hot asparagus.

SAUCE VINAIGRETTE

1 tsp. salt, 1-4 tsp. paprika, 1 tbsp. tarragon vinegar, 2 tbsps. cider vinegar, 6 tbsps. olive or salad oil, 1 tsp. chopped green pepper, 1 tsp. chopped cucumber pickle, 1 tsp. chopped parsley, 1 tsp. chopped green onion. Combine ingredients in order given. A little chopped celery or pimento may be added if desired.

To enjoy asparagus to the utmost you should eat it as fresh as possible. Snap off the woody ends as the stalks break above the tough part. Take off lower scales on stems and clean thoroughly.

When cooking asparagus it is a good idea to remember that the stalks take longer to cook than the tips. Use sealer rings in the bottom of saucepan to prop heads out of water. Only an inch of water is necessary cover and cook for 10 or 15 mins., depending upon the amount prepared.

Someone asked us the other day if asparagus liquor like spinach liquor should be thrown out. We say yes because it is too strong to use except with asparagus.

DRAWN BUTTER SAUCE

3 tbsps. butter, 3 tbsps. flour, 3-4 cup hot water, 3-4 cup asparagus water, 1-2 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. lemon juice.

Melt butter add flour with seasonings. Pour in the liquids and boil five mins. Add lemon juice and serve at once over asparagus.

TAKE A TIP

1. A plain or stencilled cork place mat makes an excellent kitchen bulletin board for thumb-tacking recipes menus or reminders.
2. To keep shirt cuffs from dragging on the floor when ironing, fold back each sleeve and fasten it with a snap clothespin.
3. Wax old brass curtain rods to prevent a discolouration on the curtains.
4. If you cannot put a screw in the end of the brush or dish mop handle, insert a ring near the handle in the brush. Chicken leg markers are flexible rings obtainable at most feed stores. They are colourful too.

THE QUESTION BOX

Miss H.T. asks: Why do some eggs have a dark ring around the yolk when cooked in shell?

Answer: When eggs cooked-in-shell are not cooled quickly this unappealing tarnish usually forms. The dark ring is not harmful.

Mrs. E.J. asks: Is it harmful to cook asparagus in aluminum ware? Can the stain it causes be removed from the pan?

Answer: No. The stain is easily removed by boiling a few pieces of rhubarb in it.

Mrs. T.M. asks: How to keep water cress?

Answer: Leave a few of the roots on and keep them in water. Change the water once or twice a day. Do not cover.

Mrs. J.R. asks: How to toast nuts without burning them?

Answer: Blanch in hot water; drain, and put in a slightly greased pie plate. Warm in a moderate oven at 300 degs. for about 15 mins. Stir occasionally.

Looking Ahead

With LARRY MCCOSHAM

Everyone knows that the difference between future security and insecurity depends not on what is earned but on what is saved.

Think what you will do when old age deprives you of the means of earning your own livelihood. Think what your family will do if by your untimely death they are left to carry on alone, without your income to feed, clothe, shelter and educate them.

Ordinarily it is difficult to save money but now, in keeping with the times, a new and easy way of saving has been arranged. Just as the Government has made it easier to pay our income tax at regular intervals from the salary cheque, so independence for old age and protection for wife and children can now be conveniently provided by small salary deductions.

What could be more sound than, with the co-operation of your employer, saving a small part of your salary to assure an income for yourself or your family when your paydays are over. The programme is permanent and uninterrupted because the deposits are automatic. The savings dollar properly becomes the first item in the budget rather than the last. The plan to which I refer, the Sun Life Salary Savings Plan, is so flexible that a programme of saving can be adapted to fit the needs of each wage-earner, single or married, man or woman, according to individual problems and ability to save. Such policies are the property of the assured and in the event of entering the service of another employer it is a simple matter to continue the savings arrangement intact.

Let me tell you more about this savings plan and show you how easily it can be adapted to meet your own requirements. Just call or write

Juniors Hear Library Proposal

Earle Webster of the Ontario Adult Education Board was principal speaker at the May meetings of the Lancaster and Charlottenburg Junior Farmers last week. At the request of the Charlottenburg Juniors Mr. Webster is making a survey of the united counties, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, to enlist support in a drive for a county co-operative library to serve the area.

Mr Webster stressed the need for better library services in Ottawa rural districts. Taking Glengarry as an example he showed that less than 200 people have access or at least make use of the facilities of the three small association libraries in the county.

The principal cause for this he said was finance. The only solution of the problem yet found is the county co-operative. This is the pooling of resources of the various groups interested to buy books and library services on a large scale. The books are then passed around every three months and are worn out instead of gathering dust on shelves.

A plan of this size he added needs the support of the majority in the area it serves therefore he cautioned against too much haste in developing the idea. The film "Library on Wheels" which was displayed at both meetings showed how a well-established unit might distribute books at crossroads and stores and schools by means of a truck lined with books.

The Junior Farmers of Stormont are studying the plan next month and it is hoped some action might result from these meetings. The Glengarry Juniors are calling a special executive meeting to discuss the best plan of action in bringing the idea to the people.

Dairy Farmers Ask Abolition Butter Ration

A delegation representing the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and the Dairy Farmers of Canada pressed for abolition of butter rationing and ceiling prices on all dairy products and establishment of substantial floor prices on these products in a meeting with Agriculture Minister Gardiner at Ottawa, Saturday.

The delegation's statement, presented by John Ballantyne, vice-president of the Dairy Farmers of Canada said dairy farmers across Canada were "dissatisfied and discouraged" and the price increases in dairy products announced April 30 were inadequate to meet the critical situation caused by the increased costs of the industry.

Thus, the statement continued there is a prospect of a substantial reduction in dairy herds and a consequent slump in production.

FARM EXPERT NAMED: Frank E. Wolff, who has been appointed general agricultural agent for eastern lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway with headquarters in Toronto. A native of Montreal, he has been an assistant professor at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, for nine years.

Ontario Farmers Lose $40 Million

TORONTO, MAY 9.—Ontario farmers have suffered losses of between $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 due to the late Spring, Agriculture Minister T.L. Kennedy said today. He said that good growing weather in the next two weeks would "enable them to recoup some of their losses".

Buffalo Refuge

The buffalo herd in Wind Cave National park in South Dakota is one of the largest in the country, and was among the first to be established. In the early 1800s, barely 1,000 buffaloes remained in existence, and conservationists feared the species might become extinct. A few straggling herds were placed under rigid protection. In 1913, 14 buffaloes from the New York Zoological society's herd were placed by the American Bison society in Wind Cave National park. There they could roam the plains as of old. The herd now numbers about 250.

CHAPTER XIII

It was ten o'clock Belle Fleur seemed strangely silent. Lotus stood on the broad gallery outside her bedroom and saw the stars reflected with startling clarity in the waters of the swimming lagoon. From the bayous came the hoarse croaking of frogs and the occasional plaintive whimper of a swamp owl.

Stacy had not yet returned from New Orleans.

His father, Lotus thought and hoped had retired to his own room with a book.

She wondered suddenly if this

wasn't the moment to do a little snooping. The servants to all appearances were in their quarters behind the house and she would have the spacious old rooms to herself.

She had seen Stacy use a flashlight that was kept in a drawer of the first floor hall table. She would need it for what she planned to do. As she tiptoed down the hall, light gleamed from under Curtis Corbin's door. She found the flash and decided to examine the library first.

She played her light over the room and examined the contents of the massive library table drawers. It seemed a purposeless search, as she was not sure what she was looking for. If Corbin were a dope smuggler, he could have dozens of hollowed-out books filled with the stuff and she would have to examine each one separately to find out. It was much too big a task for one person.

The door to Curtis Corbin's study was open and she moved across to it. Den was rather a contradictory term to apply to this room, she decided for it was easily as large as the library.

She moved the bright spot of light across the walls; and eyes stony and belligerent, gleamed back at her!

The walls were covered by the stuffed and mounted heads of various animals it was their glassy taxidermist eyes that had frightened her.

Quickly she rifled through the contents of the desk. The papers all referred to business deals which meant nothing to her. She moved the light around again. This time it fell on a large packing box from which excelsior and shredded newspapers protruded.

She peered in and gasped.... The box constrictor lay coiled up in its bed of straw its skin gleaming naturally. Though she knew it was dead it was several moments before she could bring herself to examine it.

Leaving quickly, she tiptoed into the dining room and obtained a steel knife from the buffet. Returning to the box she ripped out several of the stitches with a few quick jerks and reached into the opening.

Her fingers closed on more excelsior. Though she continued to feel around, stuffing was all her exploring hands contacted. With a deep sigh of disappointment, she returned the snake to its original position.

Suddenly, her ears caught the sound of soft, shuffling footsteps descending the stairs. Curtis Corbin was returning to the library.

Suddenly, the front door was thrust open and Stacy came in.

"Hi, Dad" He sounded as though he were forcing himself to be jovial. Curtis Corbin's answering voice was cool and deliberately. "Well did you make any progress?"

"Of a sort Aline and her grand aunt are coming out here tomorrow for a three-day visit."

There was a strained silence, then. "Now, listen Dad, Rosa is not bad. She's just different from your brand of feminine society."

"That's neither here nor there. There's no way we can explain her presence here. The Cartier women will be insulted. It'll ruin everything. I don't care if it does. This romance is your idea, not mine."

"Well, you'd better make it yours. I think I told you what would happen if you didn't carry out my plans. You've lived a soft life Stacy. You might find earning your own living not an easy proposition."

There was an ugly pause. When next he spoke Stacy's voice was modified.

"Well, they practically insisted on coming—there was nothing I could do. I'll fix things up O.K. I'll give them a sob story about Rosa being sick and alone and they'll think we're being kind to her. I'll explain it to Rosa she's a good kid, she'll play along."

"She'd better," Corbin's voice rasped "or we'll find some other solution for her."

The next afternoon Lotus watched the arrival of Aline Cartier and her spinster grand-aunt from her gallery. The aunt was a finely drawn portrait of what Aline could expect to be at sixty—slight, erect with an aristocratic head borne proudly on her slim aging shoulders.

Curtis Corbin strode down the terrace brick steps to greet them.

Lotus noted with amusement that he had undergone a strange metamorphosis of character. Now he was very much the gentleman of the Old South. He had donned a silk pongee suit and a flowing black tie. In his fingers was the ever-present expensive Havana cigar—which was not an affection.

He bowed low over Miss Cartier's hand, as though he were about to kiss it. Evidently the same idea occurred to the older woman for she withdrew it from his warm clasp with haste.

Lotus shrank back into the shadows as the foursome neared the house. Her thoughts were seething. It had never occurred to her that the Cartier family had been the previous owners of Belle Fleur. And considering the despicable manner in which Curtis Corbin had acquired it, how could Aline and her grandaunt bring themselves to visit here? Stacy must have done his job well—evidently Aline had fallen head over heels in love.

When the group was in the house Lotus slipped down the stairs and across the grounds to the rendezvous with Stu Lawrence.

He was there in the pirogue, looking as ill-kempt and fierce as ever. His eyes were an amber color, and from the shadow of his beard face they peered back at her like some wild beast. To her dismay she felt her heartbeat quicken at the sight of him. She told him about the snake and the new arrivals at Belle Fleur, then though she longed to linger, left hurriedly for fear Lachene would discover her. Since that first meeting with Lawrence, the gardener always seemed to be somewhere in the background when she thought she was alone—suddenly appearing to cut the grass or prune the bushes or pick flowers for Belle Fleur's Sevres vases. She was certain that Curtis Corbin had assigned him to watch her.

As she re-entered the house, she was introduced to the newcomers.

From their lack of astonishment, she realized that Stacy and his father had already prepared the Cartier women with their sob story, but in spite of this, the older woman was unable to prevent a faint frown of displeasure from wrinkling her forehead.

In the garden below Stacy was making love to Aline Cartier even urging an immediate marriage. He was suggesting that he bring a minister to Belle Fleur to perform the wedding during their visit, so that old Mr Cartier could not interfere. To Lotus's dismay, Aline was peculiarly acquiescent to everything he said.

In a moment the elder Miss Cartier entered from her own bedroom.

Her voice was inclined to be high and at this moment indignation made it shrill.... "Aline, I'm astonished at Stacy inviting us here when that Miss Kirkman is around—t's sheer effrontery!"

"Hush, she'll hear you!"

"Oh, I've nothing against the girl personally—she's really quite pretty and charming but a cabaret entertainer, and unchaperoned!"

"But Mr Corbin explained all that—he said she was sick and had no friends or any place to go."

"Humph. Looks healthy enough to me. And Curtis Corbin doesn't strike me as an exactly kindhearted individual."

There was a pause then Miss Cartier said in a querulous tone "What were you and Stacy talking about in the garden all evening?"

"He wants me to marry him Tante. "Marry you eh? Let me look in your eyes child. You are not deeply in love with him are you, Aline?"

"Noooo, but it would mean getting Belle Fleur back in the family."

Lotus was astonished by old Miss Cartier's words. It was almost as though she were willing to let Aline make an unhappy marriage if it meant getting Belle Fleur back in possession of the Cartier family.

And how misguided they both were to think that!

When the lights were off in all the rooms extending off the broad gallery she left her own room and tiptoed to the French doors opening onto Aline's massive Victorian furniture and the small huddled figure of Aline in the vast spaciousness of her bed.

She's like a water lily, the older girl thought and almost as fragile. She crossed the room and sat down on the edge of the bed.

"Miss Cartier I must talk to you!" Her whisper was urgent.

"How dare you come into my room!" Aline reached for her silken bed jacket. "I can think of nothing we could discuss in common."

Her young voice shook with anger and snobbery.

Lotus gave an exasperated little sigh. She would have to overcome this barrier of class distinction between Aline and herself before she could talk to the girl intelligently.

"My cafe job is only a temporary expedient," she said now.

"What do you mean?"

"I can't explain further and it doesn't matter. Miss Cartier, I came in to tell you that you must not marry Stacy Corbin."

"So that's it!" Aline sucked in her breath in a queer sibilant little hiss. "I suppose you're going to tell me that you're Stacy's mistress?"

"No that's not true. Stacy means nothing to me."

"Then what do you care whether I marry him or not?"

"Because if you do you'll be involving yourself, your family name and all it stands for in a scandal that will make the headlines of every newspaper in the country."

"Are you threatening me?"

"No, I'm trying to save you from a tragic mistake."

Trend in U. S. Agriculture Is Toward Bigger Farms

Economists of the department of agriculture say that the family sized farm is larger, more mechanized, and more commercialized than ever before. The average farm is now 20 acres larger than it was five years ago and 50 acres bigger than it was 25 years ago. The big, spreading ranches of the west and the small farms of the east are, of course, figured into this average.

The west has shown the greatest jump in size of farms, with nearly 10 per cent of the farms in the west now more than 1,000 acres. These big farms account for four-fifths of the farm land of the west. Even in the midwest a fifth of the farm land is in units of over 1,000 acres. A strong demand for practically all farm products during the last half dozen years in combination with speedy progress in machine farming has caused farmers to expand their acreage. Very little new farm land has become available in the period, so large farms have become larger by taking in other farms or parts of other farms. Even with all this expansion in farm acreage, the small farm is not immediately doomed; at least, not for a while. Farms of from 10 to 100 acres still account for a large proportion of all farms in all regions. Two-thirds of the farms in the south; one-half in the east; two-fifths in the west; and a third in the midwest are still small farms.

Up until about 1900, floors in middle class American homes were usually of soft wood, which soon became worn and unattractive. Because of this shortcoming, wall-to-wall carpeting at that time was popular as a floor covering. The use of rugs was confined largely to mansions having parquet and other attractive hardwood floors.

Hardwood Flooring Gave Impetus to Use of Rugs

About half a century ago strong public interest developed for better small homes, and maple and oak flooring, in boards of narrow width, became popular. This trend in floors stimulated widespread use of rugs. The hardwood floors are easy to keep clean and attractive, and the rugs make spring housecleaning easier because they eliminate dust-catching corners and are easy to keep tidy. The position of rugs in a room can be turned so as to bring about even wear.

Increased use of hardwood flooring stimulated greater use of both domestic and hand-woven oriental rugs. From 1900 to 1915 there was a ten-fold increase in imports of hand-woven rugs from the orient.

To achieve a smooth consistency in some dishes made with milk, adding the ingredients in the right order is an important detail. The wrong order of adding can cause separation or curdling. When milk is to be combined with an acid food, the right order is to put acid food into milk. For example, in making cream of tomato soup, the hot thickened tomato should be added gradually to the cool milk. Then heat the mixture just briefly and serve immediately. Likewise in making milk sherbet with an acid fruit juice such as lemon, the fruit juice after sweetening is added gradually to the milk. In all such mixtures the combining should be done gradually with constant stirring to avoid separation. When the mixture must be heated, the heating should be as brief as possible and at a low temperature.

Saving Effort

If you are doing some daily task that could be cut in half by a new method, take a tip from time and motion studies in work improvement. Instead of making a bed by the old criss-cross route, make one corner at a time and cut down considerably on the walking and effort. Toss on the bottom sheet but don't march from side to side. Just smooth and tuck in one corner, complete the corner even to the spread and then move on. Cutting down steps in such a simple task as making breakfast coffee can amount to miles of travel over the years. For example, in one work improvement study made last year, it was found that storing the coffee maker and coffee near the sink saves time and effort. Another test of storage of sewing materials in the simple task of getting ready to cut out a dress brought out that it made considerable difference just where and how such tools as ruler, scissors, tape measure and paperweight were stored.

Colorscope Aids Shoppers

The lady shopper, who has difficulty describing to a clerk just what color she wants, may get a helping hand from science from a new device known as a colorscope, which electrically blends primary colors in various intensities to produce on a screen any shade of color in the visible light spectrum. Whether the lady is trying to match the color of something at home or merely starts talking about something in a "sort of salmon pinkish," the clerk simply turns on the colorscope, and as the various shades flash on the screen the lady can select the desired one.

Atomic By-Product Used For Scientific Plant Study

Using radioactive iodine supplied by "Manhattan District," Oak Ridge, Tenn., three department of agriculture scientists report experiments with a synthetic radioactive chemical that gives new light on 2,4-D as a weed killer. These tests are explorations in working out answers to some of the many questions that puzzle science in connection with 2,4-D and other growth regulating substances. This new research tool is identified by the initials "INBA"—the first standing for the iodine.

Applied to a leaf of a young bean plant the INBA moves through the plant and concentrates in partly expanded leaves at the growing point and severely checks their growth. Applied similarly to a barley plant, INBA likewise concentrates in the young leaves but apparently does not injure the plant much. The radioactivity makes it possible to use a delicate instrument—an electrometer—to trace the INBA moving in the plant in a manner similar to that used to trace iodine and other elements in animals.

In some respects INBA acts similarly to 2,4-D, which has developed in a few years from a laboratory novelty to have enormous practical value, particularly as a weed killer. Like 2,4-D, the INBA has a selective effect, injuring the broad leaf beans but having only slight effect on the grassy barley. In applying this by-product of atomic bomb research to plant study, the investigators are looking forward to the possible use of INBA and other closely related growth regulators in practical crop production. Fortunately INBA is fairly easy to synthesize in the laboratory, and radioactive iodine can readily be obtained. Radioactive iodine has a "half life" (loses half its radiant power) of 8 days, which is longer, than many radioactive chemicals.

U. S. Resumes Shipment Of 'Golden Weed' to China

Renewed postwar shipment of ginseng, the "golden weed," from the United States to China recalls one of the earliest chapters of American foreign trade. The withered root is regarded by orientals as a panacea for many ills, although American scientists have said that it has no therapeutic value. As late as 1940, China received more than a million dollars worth from American sources.

The first ship that sailed directly from the United States to China—the "Empress of China," out of New York in 1784—carried more than 20 tons of ginseng. It was growing wild in the woods of New England and along the Hudson river banks. The weed was scarce in the orient, where it was highly prized. Once ginseng was worth its weight in gold, and for a long time it remained a royal monopoly in China. It was found in Manchuria, in what were considered "imperial preserves, and was collected by specially detailed soldiers of the imperial army.

Bacteria Releases Oil

The possibility of using certain types of bacteria to increase the recovery of oil from subterranean deposits is suggested in a patent issued to Dr. Claude E. ZoBell, associate professor at the University of California. While testing various kinds of bacteria for their ability to modify crude oils, Dr. ZoBell observed in March, 1943, that certain cultures released droplets of oil from test tubes filled with calcareous material prepared to simulate underground oil-producing formations. Further laboratory experiments showed that bacteria can release oil from oil-bearing sediments by (1) dissolving calcareous materials, (2) crowding off the oil physically, and (3) by producing surface-active substances, literally "bacteria soap."

Frozen Pastries

Frozen pastry is more tender than fresh pastry, according to Dr. Faith Fenton, who has been doing research on frozen pies for the college of home economics and school of nutrition at Cornell. If you bake your pie before you freeze it, it's better to thaw it in the oven at 350 degrees for 15 minutes rather than thawing it in the refrigerator or at room temperature. The experiments showed that unbaked pies thawed at room temperature or in the refrigerator before baking tended to have a soaked, under-done undercrust. For best results, Miss Fenton suggests placing the solidly frozen pie in a 450 degree oven for 35 minutes and then to bake it at 350 degrees for 15 minutes.

Fire Losses

Destruction by fire in the United States neared record levels during 1946, with total losses estimated at $561,487,000, an increase of 23.3 per cent over losses of $455,329,000 in 1945. The 1946 losses, the highest in 20 years, approached the highest figure ever recorded in the U. S., $561,980,751 in 1926. Losses during December, 1946, set a new record for a single month. They were estimated at $58,094,000, an increase of 30 per cent over November, 1946, and 17.4 per cent over December, 1945, and were the highest recorded since the National Board of Fire Underwriters began tabulating losses on a monthly basis in 1929.

Mount Archibald Named for Agricultural Leader

The man who directs the extension of Canada's northern agricultural frontiers has been honored by the Geographic Board of Canada which recently gave his name to this Yukon mountain—Mount Archibald.

Shown here are the 8400-foot peak and Dr. E. S. Archibald, Director, Experimental Farms Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, for whom it was named.

An outstanding leader in experimental agriculture, Dr. Archibald directs the operation of 27 experimental farms and stations, 13 sub-stations, four laboratories, 155 illustration stations and 52 district experiment sub-stations. In recent years, the Experimental Farms Service has been expanded by the establishment of experimental sub-stations in both the Yukon and Northwest Territories for the study of northern agriculture.

Located in Latitude 60°, 45', 06", Longitude 137°, 51', 23", Mount Archibald overlooks the experimental sub-station at Mile 1019 on the Alaskan Highway.
